Held, that, since the case was such that the position of the parties was not in accordance with the policy of the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, mutation of names should not be sanctioned. In such a case effect may be given to the transfer when the mortgagees agree that the conditions intended to operate by way of conditional sale be struck out of the deed.

Held, also that the period of a mortgage by way of a conditional sale made before the Act came into force and still subsisting is not to be altered if the mortgagees agree that the sale

(16) S. 21-A (2) (as amended by Act I of 1907) —Declaratory decrees contrary to the provisions of the Act—Validity—Reference by Deputy Commissioner to have the decree altered so as to make it consistent with the Act—Powers of Chief Court—When to be exercised.

On the death of one J, a Rajput of the Hoshiarpur district, his property was mutated by mutual agreement, half in the name of his widow W, and half in the name of F, M and A, who claimed to be the legitimate sons of the deceased by another lady B, a Natni by caste, who was not a member of an agricultural tribe.

Objection was taken to the said mutation by certain reversioners of J and they preferred an appeal to the settlement collector who held that F, M and A were not the legitimate sons of J and directed mutation in the name of W alone.

Thereupon F, M and A instituted a suit against W in the District Court at Hoshiarpur for declaration that they were the sons and heirs of J and entitled to hold half his estate. An application by the reversioners to be made parties to the suit was rejected, and on confession of judgment by W, the plaintiffs obtained a decree. An application for revision of that decree was filed by the Deputy Commissioner under S. 21-A (2) of the Alienation of Land Act (1900), as amended by Punjab Act I of 1907, on the ground that the decrees of the District Judge was contrary to the provisions of that Act, and he prayed that the decree be altered so as to make it consistent with the Act, viz., that the declaration be limited to granting the said three sons a half-share in the said estate during the lifetime of W. Held that a decree, even though it be only declaratory, which has the effect of conferring a legal title where no such title would otherwise exist, may very well be contrary to the provisions of the Act, but it was open to question whether, if the decree was contrary to the Act, the relief for which the Deputy Commissioner prayed would be any more consistent with it.

Held also that the decree, being in personam against W, would not enable the decree-holders to hold after her death, if the reversioners choose to sue and obtain a favourable finding on the question of legitimacy.

Held, further that the intention of the Legislature in framing S. 21-A was merely to enable the correction of decrees which on the face of the record infringe the provisions of the

- (2) S. 3 (13) (b)—Vacant space—User by public—Presumption of dedication—“Street,” “Public street” defined.

In this case the predecessors of the plaintiffs, built a market of shops. There was an open space lying between the shops which opened into thoroughfares at various points. The shops were leased out to grain dealers. The vacant space or part of it had been ever since used by all members of the public who came in to buy and sell grain and by carts bringing in grain without interruption of any kind. It was accessible to the public, and any member of the public who wished to buy or sell grain or to make any enquiries of the shopkeepers or to go there for any purpose whatsoever could go in. There was no evidence that anybody had ever been prevented or that any one wishing to enter was asked what his business was.

Held, that (1) under the circumstances stated above there arose a presumption that the plaintiffs' predecessors intended the members of the public to make use of the space left vacant or a part of it as a high-way (2) that the onus was on the plaintiffs to show that the user was only permissive or that the dedication was limited to a particular class of persons (a).

Terms “street” and “public street” defined. Municipal Committee, Karnal v. Muhammad Runam Ali Khan, 109 P.R. 1916=146 P.W.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 458.

- (3) S. 175—Remedy of persons dissatisfied with any act of Municipal Committee—Power of Committee to direct removal of verandah projecting on public street on payment of compensation.

Act III of 1911 (Punjab Municipality)—(Ctd.).

Persons dissatisfied with any act of a Municipal Committee have a right of appeal, but not to a Civil Court, which will interfere only when the act complained of is in excess of the powers of the Committee.

S. 175 of the Punjab Municipal Act empowers the Committee to remove any encroachment or projection on payment of compensation.

When it is found that though the material of the chaubutra on which a verandah has been erected is the property of the plaintiff, the site is not his property but part of a street and the property of the Municipal Committee, and, that consequently the verandah overhangs the street, its demolition falls within the purview of S. 175 of the Act. The Municipal Committee would be justified in requiring its demolition on payment of reasonable compensation. Municipal Committee, Ambala v. Madan Lal, 104 P.R. 1916=36 Ind. Cas. 599. - (4) Ss. 189 (3), 193, 195—Municipal Committee—Application to erect building—Conditional sanction—Condition requiring open space to be left—Question whether the Committee acted bona fide or otherwise—Question of fact—No second appeal—Nature of condition—Reasonableness.

In a written sanction issued under S. 193, Punjab Municipal Act, by the Municipal Committee to the plaintiff, who wanted to build a two storied house, a condition was attached to the effect that he must leave vacant seven feet of his land towards the west. On the western side there was already an open space about 5 feet 4 inches in width. According to the condition, it was understood that the plaintiff should not build his wall within 2 feet of this open space. The plaintiff built his house in disregard of this condition and the Committee issued a notice under S. 195, requiring the plaintiff to demolish the upper storey of the building. Plaintiff instituted the present suit and prayed for an injunction restraining the Municipal Committee from interfering with the upper storey of the house which has been built. Both the lower Courts dismissed the suit holding that the condition was not ultra vires and that the action of the Committee was not mala fide.

Held, that the question whether the Committee acted in good faith or mala fide in imposing the condition on which alone it granted a sanction to build a two storied house is one of fact and the decision thereon could not be questioned in second appeal.

Prima facie there is nothing illegal, wanton, capricious, or oppressive in a condition, such as this, which is aimed at restraining the building of erections consisting of more than one storey on a narrow open space. On the contrary it would seem to be eminently reasonable and conducive to sanitation, free circulation of air and ventilation, within the meaning and for the purposes of S. 189 (3) (i) and (iii) of the

S. 9 of the Pre-emption Act repeals by implication so much of S. 5 of the Land Alienation Act as conflicts with itself.

Where it is alleged that the Deputy Commissioner did not make proper inquiry as required by S. 8 (3) of the Land Alienation Act.

Held that a Civil Court cannot go into that question; for S. 21 (2) of the same Act debars all Civil Courts from taking cognizance of the manner in which the Deputy Commissioner exercised his powers under the Act.

If there is no valid sanction the sale in question is opposed to the provisions of the Land Alienation Act, and in this case S. 24 of the Pre-emption Act requires that the suit for pre-emption shall be dismissed. Ganga Ram v. Raje Ram, 124 P.R. 1916.

(4) S. 4 (3)—Question as to validity or existence of custom—No certificate—Second appeal.

This was a suit for declaration that a gift of ancestral land should not affect the right of the plaintiffs who were collaterals of K, the last male holder. The gift was effected by G, the widow of K, in favour of the donee who was alleged to have been adopted by K. On K's death, however, mutation was made in favour of his widow and not in favour of the appointed heir.

The defence was simply that the donee was the appointed heir, and that, in the circumstances, the widow was entitled to rectify the erroneous mutation made at her husband's death, by making the gift.

Both the Courts below found that the donee was not appointed his heir by K, but the Divisional Judge found that the gift was justified by the fact that the donee had rendered services to the widow, and dismissed the suit. In second appeal plaintiffs contended that the Divisional Judge decided the case on a point entirely outside the pleadings.

Held that the question raised in the second appeal was not the validity or existence of a custom, but whether the validity or existence of a custom was a question properly before the lower appellate Court, and that, therefore, the second appeal was maintainable without a certificate. *Nur Ali v. Pro. Code and S. 98 of the new Civ. Pro. Code.

Held, that :—

(1) The provisions of S. 98 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, and not those of S. 10 of the Punjab Courts Act III of 1914, are to be followed when an appeal is heard by a Bench of two Judges and they differ in opinion on a point of Law only, because, S. 10 of the said Act comes into operation only when any given contingency is not provided for by any other enactment in force.

(2) S. 10 (2) (a) of the said Punjab Courts Act deals with cases in which the Bench in which there is no majority is a Full Bench or Bench exercising Original Civil Jurisdiction. S. 10 (2) (b) of the same Act provides for a case in which the Appellate Judges are agreed that the decree of the Court below cannot stand, but are in disagreement as to the decree which should be substituted and this disagreement need not be based on a point of Law.

(3) Where the Judges differ in their opinion the main difference between these two sections is that :—

(a) Under S. 98, Civ. Pro. Code—reference is optional and the decree may be confirmed.

(b) Under S. 10—reference is compulsory.

(c) Under S. 98—reference is to be made to one or more of the Judges excluding the referring Judges.

(d) Under S. 10—reference can be made to the Judges including the referring Judges.

Adjournment.

(1) Question of granting time—Discretion of Court—Duty of party applying for time—Delay in filing process fee—Effect.

The question of granting time is one always of discretion and that discretion cannot be properly exercised until the general conduct of the party applying for time has been scrutinised throughout the case.

When a date is fixed for a case, it is the business of a litigant to see that the processes for the attendance of witnesses are placed in the hands of the Court within reasonable time for the securing of their attendance upon the date fixed. If he chooses to file a process fee only two days before the date fixed for hearing, any order passed by the Court for the issue of those processes must be understood to have been issued at the risk of the party in fault, and it is not for the Court to grant an adjournment when the case comes on for hearing. *Jagabandhu Chowdhry v. The defendant purchased part of a mortgaged property from the mortgagor during the pendency of the suit filed by the mortgagee to enforce his mortgage. The mortgage was a simple one. Subsequently, the mortgagee got a decree for sale and in execution of it himself purchased the property and instituted the present suit for possession against the defendant.

Held, that the defendant was a representative of the mortgagor and as such was not competent to set up adverse possession against the plaintiff.

Held further, that the suit being brought within 12 years of the purchase was within time. Mahesh Baksh Singh v. Manohar Lal, 18 O.C. 869=39 Ind. Cas. 657.

(4) Adverse possession, acts necessary to constitute—Adverse possession against putnidar previous to purchase by Zamindar of putnidar's interest, effect of, on purchaser.

The plaintiffs sued for declaration of their title to and khas possession of a certain tank which the plaintiffs claimed they held under a lease granted to them in 1883 by some persons who were in possession as putnidars under the first defendant, whose case on the other hand was that the tank was included in a different putni held under him by different putnidars and that in 1899 he purchased the putni right of the latter and was consequently entitled to take possession of the tank. It was found that the tank in question was not included in the putni of the plaintiff's lessors but in the other putni as alleged by the defendant, but since the date of their lease the plaintiffs had been in occupation of the tank on the basis of their lease and had in assertion of their right let it out to sub-tenants from time to time, mortgaged it and re-excavated it:

Held—That the acts exercised by the plaintiffs in respect of the disputed tank constituted adverse possession and were sufficient to extinguish the title of the defendant's vendors on the date of the purchase by the defendant who consequently did not by his purchase acquire any title to the tank in dispute and could not successfully resist the claim of the plaintiffs for declaration of title and recovery of possession. *Bijay Chand Mahatap Bahadur v. SANDERSON, C.J., and MOOKERJEE, J.

(5) Adverse possession—Derelict land—Abandonment, necessity of—Presumption in favour of title—Submersion of land temporarily by floods—Trespasser, position of.

Held, that a presumption of ownership would exist in favour of the holder of a perfect title during the period that the land remained derelict. But no such presumption can be made for the benefit of a holder of an imperfect title. Thus a trespasser whose title has not become perfected by adverse possession cannot tack on to his period of possession the period during which the land has remained derelict.

Held further, that the requisite factor for the application of this principle is the factor of abandonment and the question to be asked is, did the land remain or did it not remain derelict. Such a principle cannot be applied to a case in which there has been no actual submersion of the land in the proper sense of the term and no abandonment but in which it has only been flooded in parts by temporary

The character of the adverse possession must be held to be the same as that in respect of the land already in the person's enjoyment. Thakur Sheo Narain Singh v. Bhal Singh, 34 Ind. Cas. 416.

LINDSAY, J.C.

(8) Possession by co-owner—Presumption as to continuance of possession lawful in its inception.

The rule that the possession of a co-owner is to be presumed to be on behalf of all, is based on the principle that possession is in itself rightful and does not imply hostility as would be the possession of a mere stranger. The law will never construe a possession tortuous unless from necessity. The law will consider every possession lawful, the commencement and continuance of which is not proved to be wrongful, and this is based upon the principle that every man shall be presumed to act in obedience to his duty until the contrary appears (a).

The rule that the possession of a co-owner is to be presumed to be for the benefit of all co-owners until his possession is proved to be of such a character as to amount to a ouster or something equivalent to ouster of the other co-owners should apply with greater reason to the case of Muhammadan co-owners, some of whom are females. *Ram Parson Upadhia v. Adverse Possession—(Continued).

Suit for possession of certain plots of land in a bazaar situated within a Taluka. Plaintiffs alleged that the bazaar had been established for many years ago by their ancestors, that ever since the members of their family had been carrying on a bazaar upon this area and that they had built shops and had received various bazaar dues and levied other imposts upon persons who carried on business in the bazaar. It was further alleged that several small plots included in the bazaar area, which were used as sitting places for people who came to sell their wares had been seized upon by some of taluqdar's tenants, who made erections on them. As the tenants pleaded the title of the taluqdar, the latter also was made a party and he was the real contesting defendant in the case. The taluqdar rested his defence chiefly upon the fact that he was the owner of the village in which the bazaar was situated and that he being the proprietor of the plots in question had the right to let them out to his own tenants. It was found that the plaintiffs and their co-sharers had established a subordinate right with regard to the plaintiff bazaar. Held, that the right of carrying on the bazaar and of levying dues upon the persons who used it was in the nature of a franchise and had been acquired as against the taluqdar by a long course of adverse possession. The right to carry on the bazaar had become a valuable property and the taluqdar could not be permitted to interfere with the exercise of this right. Raja Shambhu Dayal v. Chandra Shekhar, 36 Ind. Cas. 725.

LINDSAY, J.C.

(8-b) Possession of co-owners living jointly—No ouster or repudiation of title—Entry in Revenue papers in name of one co-owner.

In the case of joint co-owners like a son and his mother or a brother and sister, living jointly, and maintaining themselves out of the common fund derived from the joint property, the possession of one cannot become adverse to the other, unless there is an express ouster or a repudiation of the title of one by the other within the knowledge of the former (a).

Plaintiff sued for possession of a share of certain property. His allegation was that the said property belonged to a Mahomedan of the Shia sect and that he claimed to a share therein as the heir of one of the daughters of the deceased and a transferee from his widow. The defence was that the surviving son of the deceased had been in possession of the entire property to the exclusion of the widow and the daughters. It was found that the surviving son and the widow and daughters were all living together and an allowance was being paid by the said son to his mother in addition to a provision for her maintenance. Held that, in the absence of evidence to show the date on which the surviving son, if ever, asserted a title adverse to his mother and sisters the claim of the plaintiff as a successor-in-interest of the Agency.

(1) Agent for collection and for management of affairs—Termination of agency—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Art. 97.

Where two persons by power-of-attorney appointed an agent to manage all their affairs and all their properties for the purpose of recovering moneys due to them and afterwards executed another power to the same agent, authorising him to manage their affairs and properties and to sign any deed or necessary papers on their behalf; and the agent, three days before being adjudged an insolvent, executed a release of his rights in certain immovable properties in satisfaction of the debts he had collected on his principal's behalf:

Held, that the agency under the first power-of-attorney terminated on the date of the release and not when the debts due to his principals were collected.

Held also, that Art. 97 of the Limitation Act applied to the case, that consideration must be deemed to have failed on the date when the release was declared to have no effect in law under S. 56 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act, and that the principals had three years from the date of failure within which to enforce their claim against the agent. *Rokhia Bi v. Agent.

(1) Agent of landlord recognising status of tenant—Agent withdrawing rent deposited—Onus.

When a question arises as to the authority of an agent to bind the landlord, it must be decided on the particular facts as in every other case regarding the scope of the authority of an agent to bind his principal (a).

When the transferee of a non-transferable holding proved that he had deposited the rent of the disputed holding and that the deposit had been withdrawn by the landlord's agent, he had discharged such onus as lay upon him. It is for the landlord to show that the withdrawal was outside the scope of the agent's authority.

Acceptance of rent by the landlord's agent from the transferee of a non-transferable holding amounts to a recognition by the landlord of the tenancy set up by the transferee of a non-transferable holding since the landlord is bound by his agent's withdrawal especially when the landlord fails to show that in withdrawing the deposit the agent acted beyond the scope of his authority. *Motihari Concern Ltd. v. Agreement.

(1) Agreement to compound criminal case compoundable with leave of Court only if opposed to public policy—Offence not so compoundable alleged but no summons issued—Effect.

In a criminal case the Magistrate after examining the complainant summoned the accused under S. 325, I.P.O., although allegations were made in the petition of complaint of an offence under S. 147, I.P.O., also. An agreement was entered into between the parties and with the leave of the Court the case was compromised.

Held—that a case under S. 325, I.P.O., being compoundable with the leave of the Court, and the Magistrate having given permission to compound the case, the contract was not opposed to public policy; the allegation in the petition of complaint of a non-compoundable offence under S. 147, I.P.O., which was not accepted by the Magistrate when issuing process, made no difference. *Moulvi Mohammad Ismail v. The provisions of an ekramamah ran as follows :—“If the Sitambari Jain Society shall require any place on Parasnath Hill or below at Madhuban for erecting mandir or dharamsala and for doing repairs and making bricks for the said purpose, in that case I and my heirs shall give for making mandir, dharamsala and bricks, land, stones and timber from th hill free of cost, and if I and my heirs refuse to give, in that case the Sitambari Jain Society shall take the same of its own power (apne ikhtiyar se)."

Held per Chamier, C.J.—If the provision should be regarded as an attempt to create an interest in favour of future generations of Sitambaris, it is void for remoteness, whether the case is governed by general principles, or by S. 14 of the Transfer of Property Act, or by the Hindu Law (a).

The provision was not intended to create an interest in favour of the Sitambaris and, further, such a provision cannot in India be regarded as creating an interest in favour of the other party to the transaction.

A contract to give immoveable property does not of itself create any interest in the property (b).

It is doubtful whether the English doctrine of Walsh v. Lansdale (c) should be applied to any case in India except possibly in the Presidency Towns.

Per Jwala Prasad, J.—It is doubtful whether it would be a sound exercise of discretion under S. 22 of the Specific Relief Act to grant specific performance of the covenant in question, regard being had to the vague, indefinite and uncertain terms of the covenant (d). *Dahya Bhal v. Alienation.

(1) Acquiescence and necessity—Questions of fact—Proof of the same.

Acquiescence is sometimes a pure question of fact, e.g., when the point is to be decided solely on the allegation that the party positively and in set terms gave consent; but it is a question of law when the point is whether conduct of the party, not amounting to direct consent, should be taken as waiver (a).

Similarly, "necessity" may be a pure question of fact, e.g., when the point is whether a sum of money was taken, to the knowledge of the alienor, to pay a previous genuine debt, or per contra merely as an act of wanton extravagance; but when the point raised is whether the Court below has infringed rules and maxims laid down by the Chief Court and has decided Amendment of Decree.

- (1) Decree against three defendants—One defendant dies—Petition for amendment of decree—Legal representative of the deceased defendant not brought in—Amendment impossible.

The appellant filed a petition for amendment of the decree in the lower Courts which was against three defendants, by increasing costs and interest awarded to him. Failing in the lower Courts, he appealed to the High Court. Pending the appeal one of the defendants died and his legal representatives were not brought in time. Held that the amendment of the decree was impossible. A decree against all the defendants cannot be amended as against some, as thereby the rights of contribution inter se may be interfered with. Ponnambala Moothan v. - (2) Amendment of judgment and decree—Error in judgment—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), Ss. 151 and 152.

Held, that when by some oversight or otherwise a judge in writing his judgment commits, a mistake which injuriously affects either party to the case he can, and should exercise, his powers under Ss. 151 and 152 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, to correct the mistake and amend the decree accordingly.

In a pre-emption case the first Court gave a decree to the effect that the plaintiff should get the site on payment of Rs. 300, that the defendant should remove his building thereon, within four months, that if he failed to do so, plaintiff should have the right to pay Rs. 3,600 to defendant within one month of the default and get possession of the site and the building.

This decree was reversed by the appellate Court and in second appeal it was restored but no provision was made as to the time of payment of the pre-emption money, etc. This defect was removed from this judgment on an application made by the plaintiff under Ss. 151, 152 of Act V of 1908. Jhanda Mal v. (3) Suit to recover arrears of rent—Allegation of agreement to pay rent not proved—Amendment for grant of occupation rent.

Where a suit is brought under the Oudh Rent Act to recover arrears of rent due under an agreement to pay rent, in the absence of proof of the alleged agreement, the plaintiff cannot be allowed to have the plaintiff amended embodying a prayer for grant of an occupation rent under the provisions of S. 127 of the Act, as such a course would be to raise a new case inconsistent with the case raised in the pleadings. Bhindeewari Prasad Singh v. - (1) Limitation Act (1908), S. 5—Appeal presented 34 days out of time—Affidavit not accounting for major portion of delay—Appeal, liability of, for dismissal—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XLI, r. 22—Memorandum of cross-objections filed in time—Appeal, dismissal of, as time-barred—Objections if can be heard—Costs, granting of, only discretionary—Order awarding costs, if can be interfered with in second appeal.

Where an appeal was presented 34 days out of time and the affidavit filed in support of the application to excuse delay did not account for the major portion of it, held that the appeal ought to be dismissed.

The dismissal of an appeal on the ground that it is barred by limitation is not a bar to the hearing of a memorandum of cross-objections filed by the respondent within the period allowed by O. XLI, r. 22, Civ. Pro. Code.

The award of cost is in the discretion of the Court and the High Court will not interfere in second appeal with an order as to costs if it appears to have been made in the exercise of sound discretion. Yenkanna v. Venkataramanayya, 3 L.W. 109=19 M.L.T. 86=32 Ind. Cas. 579.

- (2) Question of proprietary title—Appeal—Res judicata—Decision of settlement officer—Amendment of jamabandi.

Where a defendant in a suit for arrears of rent in the Court of first instance denies the plaintiff's title and claims to be proprietor of the land as his grove, and the same plea is raised in appeal, held that appeal lies to the District Judge, a question of proprietary title having been in issue in the Court of first instance and being also a matter in issue in appeal.

Held also that a decision of a settlement officer passed in a case relating to the amendment of jamabandi declaring the defendant's status as liable to pay rent is not res judicata either in the Revenue Court or in the Civil Court. Sakhwat Ali v. Suraj Prasad, 14 A. L.J. 140=38 Ind. Cas. 343.

BANERJI, J.

- (3) Appeal filed in wrong Court—Bona fide mistake—Appellate Court, power of—Period to be allowed—Judicial discretion.

Where under a bona fide mistake an appeal is filed in time in a wrong Court, the appellant, who might otherwise suffer loss of rights and injustice, ought to be allowed to put the mistake right, and to appeal unless there is some conduct disentitling him to do so, and in the absence of such conduct the just thing to do is to allow him from the date when his mistake is discovered a reasonable time, and no more than the period he would otherwise have had from the original decree. Where an appellate Court sees that the Court to which an application was made to admit an appeal beyond time has exercised its discretion on the ground which is not really material, then no real judicial discretion has been exercised and the appellate Court can deal with the order with a free hand. Maqbul Ahmad v. Muria, 14 A.L.J. 212=33 Ind. Cas. 546.

- (4) Findings of fact, reversal of, on appeal—Brokerage on sale within time limit, meaning of.

Where the owner of an oil mill gave the following letter to a broker "I agree to allow you to sell my mill at Rs. 40,000 only. You will get brokerage 5 per cent. on the same when the mill will be sold through you. This condition is to be in force till a fortnight (15 days) from date."

Held, that the broker would be entitled to the commission if he introduced to the seller a purchaser within 15 days who was ready and willing to purchase the mill for Rs. 40,000.

Sanderson, C.J.—When the trial Judge has had to deal with conflicting verbal evidence on a question of fact and after seeing and hearing the witnesses has come to the conclusion that the truth lies on one side and not on the other, the Court of Appeal should not interfere unless it is clear that the Court below has come to a wrong conclusion, which in this case, his Lordship was not prepared to hold that the Court below had.

Woodroffe, J.—If, after argument, the Court of Appeal has a conviction that the judgment under appeal is erroneous, it should not be affirmed and this is not the less so because the judgment raised a question of fact.

Mookerjee, J., on review of authorities, held that the appellate Court was entitled to reverse the findings of fact and allow an appeal if it was convinced that the trial Judge came to an erroneous conclusion on the evidence, the burden lying on the appellant to satisfy the Court that the finding he assails is not supported by the evidence.

Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ., held on the evidence that the broker had not introduced a purchaser within the time limit of the agreement and was not entitled to recover brokerage thereunder. Laljee Mahommed v. Dadabhai Jivanji Guzdar, 20 C.W.N. 335=23 O.L.J. 190.=43 O. 833=34 Ind. Cas. 807.

- (5) Reference to arbitration without intervention of Court—Application for filing award—Objection dismissed—Code of Civil Procedure (1908), O. XLIII, r. 1—Appeal.

An application under para 21 of the Second Schedule to the Code of Civil Procedure, asking a Court to file an award in a matter submitted to arbitration without the intervention of the Court, is a "case open to appeal" within the meaning of O. XLIII, r. 1 (d) of the same Code. An appeal will therefore lie against an order rejecting an application to set aside a decree passed ex parte in such a matter. The question whether a particular decree "is open to appeal" is quite independent of the question whether an appeal could be successfully maintained. Nehal Singh v. Khushal Singh, 14 A.L.J. 332=38 A. 297=38 Ind. Cas. 80.

(6) Appeal, infructuous—Order—Execution appeal, filing of—Stay of execution—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XLI, r. 5, sub-r. (2)—Court of appeal, duty of—Event, subsequent.

An order was passed on the 26th April, 1915, by the primary Court, granting leave to the receiver to settle a claim of the estate against a certain person for certain sum. A letter was sent to the receiver on the 1st May by the appellant saying that she was going to appeal from the order and asking him not to take any steps in respect of that order until the appeal was filed. On the following day, the receiver replied that he could not wait indefinitely for the proposed appeal and would proceed to carry out the order, unless an order for stay was obtained from the Court of appeal. The appellant took no steps to file an appeal or to obtain an order for stay of proceedings. The receiver carried out the order, the settlement with the debtor was duly effected, and the deed of release in his favour was executed and registered on the 10th June 1915. The present appeal was thereafter lodged on the 23rd June, 1915:

Held, that the appeal had become infructuous by reason of the laches of the appellant.

Per Mookerjee, J.—That there was nothing to prevent the appellant from obtaining an order for stay, even before the appeal was actually lodged.

That it was incumbent upon a Court of appeal to take note of events subsequent to the order under appeal. Rameswarl Chaudhurani v. K. B. Dutt, 23 O.L.J. 310=33 Ind. Cas. 685.

(7) Decree against principal and agent—Principal withdrawing from contest—Agent's right to appeal.

In a suit against a Municipal Committee, the committee described themselves as mere trustees or agents on behalf of Government and thereupon the Government was also impleaded as a defendant and a decree was given in favour of plaintiff against both the defendants. The Government (principal) acquiesced in the decree. Held, that the Municipal Committee alone were not competent to appeal against the decree, when their principal (Government) had withdrawn from the contest. *Abdul Samad v. (8) Jurisdiction—Joint value of land and other village immovable property exceeding Rs. 250—Whether a further appeal would lie, on the order of the trial Court being reversed by Divisional Judge.

Plaintiff sued for possession of certain property consisting of land and village manias. The value of land for purposes of jurisdiction was Rs. 221-4-0 and of the manias Rs. 184-6-6, the combined value being thus Rs. 405-10 6.

Held, that a suit of this kind remains a land suit, and the question whether a further appeal lies depends on the merits from the jurisdictional point of view of the suit considered in its aspect as land suit, and isolated from the rest of the claim. Held, accordingly that no further appeal lay in this case. Malik Azam v. Mian Muhammad Jan, 3 P.W.R. 1916 (N.W.F.P.).

1. In the absence of any express provision to the contrary in the previous settlements, the condition of the last settlement that the shamlat is to be divided among the proprietary body according to the Revenue shares (Hasab, Rasad Khewat) should be followed, and regard is to be had to the shares fixed and recorded in the said settlement or at the time of partition; as it is inevitable that changes in the proportionate revenue should occur from time to time.

2. Where an appeal is returned though erroneously by an appellate Court on the ground that it has no jurisdiction to hear it and that it should be presented to another competent Court, its limitation can be extended under S. 5 of Act IX of 1908 if it has been re-presented with due diligence.

3. Where some of the appellants who were included in the appeal had died before its institution, the appeal can proceed if the remaining appellants are competent to appeal on ground common to all of them. Nawab v. Muhammad Hayat, 29 P.W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 1006.

Inability to get stamps, on the last day allowed by law for instituting a suit, is not one of the conditions under which the time allowed by the Limitation Law can be extended (a).

(1) Second appeal—Defective finding a good ground—Phrases leading to such conclusions—Second appeal and duty of the Judge of the appellate Court explained—Jurisdictional value of two reliefs for restitution of conjugal rights and injunction—Chadar andazi with brother-in-law among Jats—Decree for conjugal rights discretionary—Suits Valuation Rates—S. 41 of Act III of 1914.

1. The jurisdictional value of the following two reliefs combined does not exceed of Rs. 1,000.

(a) The restitution of conjugal rights.

(b) An injunction restraining any relative or other person connected with a woman, from preventing the re-union of the alleged husband and wife.

2. A finding of fact is liable to be set aside even in second appeal, where it is difficult to ascertain from the judgment of the lower appellate Court, whether its Judge has applied his mind to a proper consideration, and what his real opinion is of the value, of the evidence in the case.

Phrases like the following lead to this conclusion.

(a) "I do not think that any very cogent reason for thinking the lower Court wrong has been adduced."

(b) "I have simply to say that I think that the finding of the Munsif and Commissioner that the Karewa took place must finally prevail."

(c) "I can here but repeat that the impression left by the evidence is of an actual occurrence."

(d) "Simply the lower Court which had the witnesses before it believed them to be speaking the truth."

3. A first appeal differs from a revision and a second appeal in this important respect, that appellant has a right to ask that the appellate Court shall read and appraise the evidence in the case and shall come to its own finding on that evidence on the points in issue.

The appellate Court is not doing its duty if, instead of fortifying its independent opinion based on the evidence with the conclusions of the first Court, it merely shelters itself behind the decision arrived at by that first Court.

4. Where, as in this case, the liberty of a woman is at stake and the idea of the people of her class is that a brother's widow is regarded as a chattel to be inherited on a par with the other property of her deceased husband, a decree for conjugal rights is not justifiable when the evidence is not sufficiently strong in support of the claim.

5. The restitution of conjugal rights is a matter entirely within the discretion of the Courts. Therefore the husband's claim should not be decreed where a widow, who may have been surprised into a chadar andasi ceremony with her brother-in-law, without delay repudiates the relationship and goes off to her own family. Mussammât Bhanî v. Bansî, 28 P.W.R. 1916=38 Ind. Cas. 1002.

Code (1882), S. 584—Second appeal—High Court, if may remit case for re-hearing on a new case not raised in the pleadings, when decree as made correct on the issues raised and decided—Procedure, if competent, to be adopted in exceptional cases—Surprise, discovery of new facts—Costs, partly at whose instance new issues raised to pay costs—Suit to eject "Paik" from tenure held for service—Chowkidari chakran—Police duties performed under supervision of Government—Control of Government over private chakran, if exists.*

In 1801, the predecessor of the plaintiff executed a kabulyat in favour of Government in respect of a newly-settled Pargunnah, under which the proprietor of the Pargunnah was bound "to maintain and keep the same Sardars and Paiks who had all along existed in the Pargunnah and to carry out whatever order might be passed by the Magistrate on the Paiks, and was precluded from dismissing the Sardars or Paiks, and bound to depute the Paiks to watch and take care of the boundaries of the Pargunnah, and see that no theft or dacoity and no riot occurred anywhere." The plaintiff's suit to eject a Paik was opposed by Government, which relying only on the kabulyat urged that the Paik in question was one whose tenure services involved the performance of police duties, whilst the plaintiff urged that he held on tenure services personal to himself and having no connection with the local police. The Subordinate Judge, the District Judge and the High Court all agreed in upholding this contention, but whilst the two former upon that finding decreed the suit, the High Court in second appeal permitted the Government to raise a fresh issue, viz., whether the lands comprised in the jaghir in question were Chowkidari Chakran lands, that is, lands which at or before the settlement had been appropriated or assigned for the maintenance of the police force, and by reason of such appropriation excluded from the Zemindari assessment (vide Regs. I of 1793 and XIII of 1805), discharged the decree of the District Judge and remitted the action for rehearing—ordering at the same time that all the costs already incurred would abide the result of the rehearing:

Held—That the Government ought not to have been allowed to raise a new issue not raised in the pleadings, although they appeared to have had full knowledge of it when they preferred their defence; and that therefore the order of High Court should be discharged and the decree of the District Judge restored.

That even if it was competent to the High Court to remit a case for hearing on an issue not raised by the defendant in the pleadings or suggested in the lower Courts, this might be done only in exceptional cases for good cause shown and on payment of all costs thrown away.

That in this case the Government had shown no ground whatever for the indulgence they claimed, as they did not suggest that they had been in any way taken by surprise or had discovered fresh facts of which they were unaware when the case was before the lower Courts.

That the order that all costs already incurred should abide the result of the rehearing was bad, inasmuch as the plaintiff if he had failed on a new case raised by the defendants for the first time in second appeal, would have to pay the whole costs of the issues on which he had succeeded in the two Courts below. *Maharajah Sri Ram Chandra Banji Deo v. Held, that:—

A finding whether a certain document is a deed of mortgage or sale based simply on the construction of the deed is a good ground for a second appeal.

But such a finding cannot be disturbed in second appeal if it is based on the construction of deed combined with the surrounding circumstances and other evidence. Ahmad Khan v. Alam Khan, 115 P.W.R. 1916=120 P.L.R. 1916.

(1) Appeal to His Majesty in Council—Final decree—Remand for decision on merits—Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, S. 109.

A suit was disposed of by the first Court on the preliminary grounds of estoppel and limitation without taking evidence. On appeal, it was held that on the allegations made by the plaintiff, if true, there could be no estoppel, and that the question of limitation could not be decided till the evidence was gone into. A remand was made directing those points to be determined after the evidence relevant to them was gone into.

Held, that this was not a final order or decree within the meaning of S. 109 of Act V of 1908 and no leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council against it could be granted. Raghubar Dayal (Pandit) v. Champa Kunwar, 19 O.C. 36—33 Ind. Cas. 756.

Pro. Code* (1908), O. XLVII, rr. 4 (2), 7 (1) (b).

A suit was dismissed for default, after the reference to arbitration by the Court at the request of parties but before the award was put in. On application, the case was restored to file and without objection by either party the arbitrator was directed to put in his award. He was not re-appointed nor was any fresh reference based on a fresh application by the parties made, but he was treated as being still arbitrator. Various objections were made before the award was presented to Court, but no objection was taken that the dismissal of the suit put an end to the arbitration and that the arbitrator's power had finally ceased to exist. The Court passed a decree in accordance with the award. An appeal was preferred, and, in the appeal, objection was taken on the ground that the arbitration had become null and void, by reason of the dismissal of the suit for default. The Appellate Court overruled the objection but, on review, changed its mind and remanded the case for re-trial under O. XLI, r. 23. Civ. Pro. Code, holding that the dismissal for default destroyed the arbitration. Against this order, an appeal was filed and the respondent disputed the maintainability of the appeal.

Held that a wide discretion is given to Courts under O. XLVII, r. 2, that it is impossible to hold that the Lower Appellate Court in granting the review acted in contravention of r. 4 and that, in consequence, no appeal lay (a).

Held further, that in granting the review, the Lower Appellate Court exercised a jurisdiction not vested in it by law and that the order was open to revision (b).

Per Johnstone, C.J.—When a case is restored after dismissal for default, it does not become res integra but is again before the Court in the condition it was in at the time of dismissal, and the defendant, by his conduct—by the nature of his objections to the arbitration and to the filing of award—must be taken to have waived the objection which he afterwards made

(5) Award—Decree passed on invalid award—No appeal—Civ. Pro. Code 1908, Sch. II, paragraphs 15 and 16—Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, S. 522.

In a partition suit, the parties put in a compromise petition whereby they appointed five arbitrators to make a partition and agreed that their award should be conclusive. Only three of the five arbitrators met and considered the matter referred to them and made their award declaring the nature of the partition which they had agreed upon. Of the two remaining arbitrators, one signed the award before it was filed in Court. But the other who neither acted as an arbitrator nor signed the award before it was filed in Court, signed the award after it was filed in Court and after certain parties filed their objections in Court as to the validity of the award. The Court overruled the objections and passed a decree in terms of the award.

Held, that the decree of the Court was final and that no appeal lay on the ground that the decree is based upon an invalid award (a).

No appeal lies from a decree pronounced in pursuance of an award, except so far as the decree is in excess of, or not in accordance with the award. Khudiram Mahato v. Chandl-charan Mahato, 1 Pat. L.J. 306=35 Ind. Cas. 358.

(6) Reference to arbitration—Execution by some of the parties.

To be binding on any of the parties a reference to arbitration should be executed by all the parties to the reference. If not so executed it is void even as to those who have executed it.

The authority of the arbitrators does not begin till all the parties have signed the reference to arbitration. Nga Tha Zan v. Nga Kyaw Kaing, 9 Bur. L.T. 253.

(7) Partition—Arbitration—Intentional absence of party in spite of due notice—Award of arbitrator—Validity—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), Sch. 2, para 20, application under.

Where a defendant in a Civil suit receives due notice from the Court of the suit and the date fixed for its hearing and wilfully abstains from appearing, it is not incumbent on the Court to inform him of the fact that it intends to proceed ex parte.

Similarly where a party who has joined in the submission to an arbitration, without just cause subsequently denies the arbitrator's authority and clearly indicates his intention of not appearing, and in spite of this the arbitrator resolves to proceed with the case, and gives him due notice of the various dates fixed, there is nothing in the law of arbitration in India which makes it necessary for the arbitrator to give any further notice, and it cannot be said that the arbitrator is guilty of misconduct, if he adopts for the purposes of the trial before him, the procedure laid down by the Legislature for the ordinary Civil Courts.

If an arbitrator takes evidence and hears arguments in the absence of one of the parties without having given due notice of the time and place fixed for the hearing, he would be guilty of misconduct which would vitiate his award; but where in preliminary proceedings prior to the hearing of the case, neither evidence is taken nor arguments are heard nor the partition is carried out, the non-fixing of the dates of the informal meetings cannot amount to any misconduct on the part of the arbitrator.

Where a party is absent intentionally at the time of the delivery of the award, and the award is communicated to him at once by the arbitrator, the fact that he was absent does not vitiate the award. Joshi Damodori v. Joshi Ram Nath, 33 Ind. Cas. 467.

TUDBALL and WALSH, JJ.

(8) Reference out of Court—Award—Application to have the award filed in Court—Award vague and indefinite—Plaintiff allowed to withdraw his application so that he may ask the arbitrators to make the award certain and definite and then come to Court.

Where an award is uncertain and does not specify either the amount, or the land awarded or does not give directions sufficient to enable it to be ascertained or identified it is one which is liable to be set aside on account of uncertainty; where such an award had been made on a reference out of Court and an application was made to have the award filed in Court, held that the applicant should be permitted to withdraw his application so as to enable the party to go back to the arbitrators and ask them to make a complete award treating the arbitration as still pending, the applicant being given the liberty to file a fresh application after the award is completed. Lala Jagroop Singh v. Bankalshwar Rawan Bahadurpal Singh, 34 Ind. Cas. 355.

STUART and KANEIYA LAL, A.J.C.S.

(9) Absence of head arbitrator at time of hearing—Substance of evidence not communicated to head arbitrator—Opinion on merits given without affording parties opportunity of presenting their cases.

Where an arbitrator who had been selected as the head arbitrator, was not present at the sitting of the arbitrators, when some of the witnesses were examined, and the examination of witnesses was not conducted in the presence of the parties and the parties were not given an opportunity of presenting their cases before the arbitrators, in the absence of proof that the parties agreed to dispense with the presence of the head arbitrator, an award passed by the arbitrators could not be sustained, as the action of the arbitrators was improper, though they were prompted by the best motives and dispensed with the presence of the head arbitrator at a sitting in consideration of his old age and infirmity. Lekha Singh v. Bodil Singh, 30 Ind. Cas. 384.

(9-a) Award—Order of reference fixing no date for making award—Notice of filing award not given—Effect—Opinion not supported by reason is not a decision.

A Court in setting aside an award on the ground that no date had been fixed by the order of reference for the making of the award and that no notice of its filing was given to the plaintiff, acts in the exercise of its jurisdiction illegally and with material irregularity(a).

A mere expression of opinion one way or the other without any reasons being set forth in support of that opinion cannot be regarded as a sufficient decision of the objections raised. Abdul Karim v. Muhammad Husain, 32 Ind. Cas. 345.

Attorney and Client.(1) Attorney, application by, for discharge—Notice to client, sufficiency of.

If an attorney wishes to withdraw from a case even for good grounds, he must give his client reasonable notice of his intention, so that the client may have a reasonable opportunity of getting other advice and making arrangements before the hearing of the application of the attorney for obtaining his discharge.

When an attorney gave notice to the client on the day previous to his making application before the Court for obtaining his discharge and obtained the order.

Held, on appeal, that the order must be set aside for insufficiency of notice. Prabhu Lal v. Kumar Krishna Dutt, 20 C.W.N. 443—23 C.L.J. 473—33 Ind. Cas. 73.

SANDERSON, C.J., WOODROFFE and MOOKERJEE, JJ.

(2) Attorney—Discharging himself, if may detain clients' papers, pending suit—Lien in such case how secured—When discharged by client, except for misconduct, if may detain papers.

Sanderson, C.J. (Woodroffe, J., agreeing).—Where an attorney who had been acting for his client in the ordinary way refused to go on acting for him unless his out-of-pocket expenses were paid, that amounted to a discharge of the attorney by himself and he could not claim to retain the papers when they were wanted by his former client for continuing the litigation. He would, at most, be entitled to have his lien protected by an undertaking by the new attorney.

The same rule would apply where it was part of the original retainer of the solicitor that he should only be bound to act as long as the money should be supplied from time to time for the necessary out goings (a).

Mookerjee, J.—If a solicitor is discharged by his client otherwise than for misconduct, he cannot, so long as his costs are unpaid, be compelled to produce or hand over the papers; but if he discharges himself he may be ordered to hand over the papers to the new solicitor on the latter undertaking to hold them without prejudice to his lien.

A solicitor could not be treated as finally discharged till the leave of the Court had been obtained. (b) Prabhu Lal v. Kumar Krishna Dutt, 20 C.W.N. 437—23 C.L.J. 326—33 Ind. Cas. 73.

Attorney's Lien.

Attorney's lien, meaning of—Attorney, if may claim lien on his client's (plaintiff's) decree as against defendant's prior decree against plaintiff—Equities between attorney, client and others interested in property.

The defendants had obtained a decree against the plaintiffs in a prior suit for Rs. 1,451-9-0 including costs, and the plaintiffs in a subsequent suit obtained a decree for Rs. 1,431-8-0 and thereupon the defendants applied that the satisfaction of the plaintiff's decree might be entered; but the attorney of the plaintiffs made an application claiming a lien on the decretal amount of his client:

Held—That the attorney could not claim any lien on the decree obtained by his client in preference to the claim of the defendants in respect of their prior decree.

An attorney's lien is subject to all the equities between the client and the parties interested in the property.

Held, that presenting an award without the knowledge of the parties before the date fixed for its filing is not submission of the award to the Court within the meaning of Art. 158 of Act IX of 1908. Such submission is to be considered to have taken place on the latter date and it is from this date that the period of ten days for filing the objection begins to run.

(3) Decree—Civ. Pro. Code, Sch. II, para. 21, cl. (1)—Performance of the award between the date of the award and the date of decree thereon.

The new Civ. Pro. Code having fixed the conditions clearly and reasonably in Sch. II, para. 21, cl. (1), Courts cannot refuse to file awards by imposing further conditions than those mentioned therein. The words of the statute law are imperative.

Parties can agree to refer disputes pending in a suit between them to private arbitration without making an application to Court (a).

The award cannot be attacked on the ground that the obligations imposed under the award have been performed between the date of the award and the date of the application to file the award. But it might be a valid defence to an application for execution of the decree passed on the award.

(4) Arbitration—Award made after time—Agreement not to raise any objection against award binding on the parties—Difference between S 521 of Act XIV of 1882 and para. 15 of Sch. II to Act V of 1908.

1. The difference between S. 521 of the old Code and para. 15 of Sch. II to the new Code is that, under the former, an award made after the time fixed by the Court for making it was a mere nullity and consequently the Court could suo motu treat it as non-existent, but according to the latter such an award is simply liable to be set aside upon an application by one or other of the parties. So if no such application is or can be made or if it is refused on some ground, the award becomes final, and no appeal lies from the decree based thereon (a).

2. Where the parties have expressly agreed that the award was to be final and binding and that none of the parties would offer any 'objection whatsoever' to it, no objection either on the ground that the award was made after time or on any other basis which can be raised under the said para. 15 is entertainable (b).

3. It is competent for the parties to agree that the question of fraud or misconduct on the part of the arbitrator shall not be raised by either party. Bhai Kahan Singh v. Rai Bahadur Lala Mohan Lal, 44 P.W.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 177.

An award was filed on December 11th, 1914. Ten days were allowed for filing of the objections thereto and December 22nd, 1914, was fixed for the trial of the objections. One of the objections related to the misconduct of the arbitrator. On the day fixed for the hearing the objector appeared but was not ready with his evidence, and he filed an application asking for adjournment to enable him to produce his evidence. The application was refused and the Court then made a decree in accordance with the award. The Court gave no reasons for refusing the adjournment. Upon an application in revision, held that there had been, so far as appeared either on the face of the proceedings or from any other evidence, a failure by the lower appellate Court to hear and determine the application for adjournment, or the objection which the Court itself gave leave to file, and that this was a material irregularity within the meaning of S. 115 of the Code and justified interference on the part of the High Court. *Durga Bahad Singh v. Award—(Continued).

Original cause of action, plaintiff, whether can fall back upon, when award held to be invalid—Alternative relief—Court, duty of.

Held, that a valid and enforceable award made without the intervention of the Court bars a suit on the original cause of action.

Therefore, where a plaintiff alleges that an award made out of Court is invalid but seeks its enforcement if the Court finds it to be valid, or in the alternative prays for a decree on the original cause of action in case the award is found to be invalid, it is the duty of the Court to determine the validity of the award and to pass a decree in its terms if it is found to be valid, or to adjudicate upon the original cause of action if it is found to be invalid. Firm Shamasuddin-Chiragh Din v. (8) Decree—Revision when lies—Material irregularity—Misconduct of arbitrator—Court's power to modify award—Sch. II, Art. 12, Civ. Pro. Code (1908).

Material irregularity on the part of the Court in dealing with objections to an award is a ground for revision, though it is no ground for revision that the arbitrator himself had been guilty of some misconduct, and that the Court had wrongly adjudicated upon the objection raised regarding that misconduct.

Under Art. 12, Sch. II, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), the Court may only modify or correct an award, first, by striking out of it something not referred to arbitrator; secondly, by amending imperfections in form or correcting any obvious error which can be amended without affecting the decision of the case; and thirdly, where the award contains a clerical mistake or an error arising from an accidental slip or omission.

The Court will be acting entirely without jurisdiction if it makes substantial modifications because it takes a different view from that held by the arbitrator as to what was just and fair in this or that set of circumstances. Farma Dat v. Bipju, 78 P.R. 1916=124 P.W.R. 1916=40 P.L.R. 1917=35 Ind. Cas. 887.

II, Art. 17 (vi)—Punjab Land Revenue Act (XVII of 1887), S. 158—Prayer for setting aside award, valuation of.*

Plaintiff and defendants, members of a joint Hindu family, wished to separate. On 6th March, 1910, they entered into an agreement to refer their disputes to arbitration and nominated three gentlemen as arbitrators one of whom was to act as umpire. The arbitrators were authorized to partition the property in unequal shares, but not to exclude any party altogether. No award was written and in February, 1918, an application was made to the Award—(Continued).

Court asking that the agreement to refer be filed in Court and the usual proceedings be taken thereupon. On 23th March, 1913, the parties put in a joint application saying that a compromise had been effected and that they agreed to the appointment of arbitrators as in the agreement of 6th March, 1910, and asking that the arbitrators be directed to file their award. The parties agreed to abide by the award and to raise no objections to it. The reference having been made, the arbitrators put in their award on 13th October, 1913. Both sides filed objections, but the Court allowed only those filed by the defendants and declared the award invalid on the ground of misconduct, as the arbitrators gave only a life-interest to first defendant in some lands and excluded him contrary to the terms of the reference. Against this order the plaintiff appealed under S. 104, Civ. Pro. Code:

Held that:—

(1) neither cl. (d) nor cl. (f) of S. 104, Civ. Pro. Code applied to the case, and, therefore, no appeal lay as an appeal from an order (a);

(2) the proceeding was a "suit," and the order appealed against amounted to a "decree" and was consequently appealable as an appeal against decree and the mere fact that the plaintiff had appealed as from an order did not put him out of Court (b);

(3) the rejection of an award not being open to revision, the present petition could not be treated as a revision (c);

(4) the appeal fell under Art. 17 (vi) of Sch. II of the Court Fees Act, for both the original application under Art. 17, Sch. II, Civ. Pro. Code, and the appeal embodied a prayer that could not be valued in money, and, therefore, the Rs. 10 Court-fee put in by the appellant was sufficient;

(5) inasmuch as the arbitrators gave no "share" to defendant No. 1 but merely a life-interest in a small piece of land and so violated the injunction in the original agreement that no party was to be wholly excluded, the award was mala fide and consequently liable to be set aside;

(6) the agreement by the parties not to raise objections to the award meant only the usual engagement to accept the award, and it was always open to the parties to object on the ground of fraud or bad faith on the part of the arbitrators (d).

Obiter.—(7) It is not an unqualified rule that in arbitration cases, where there is no appeal, there can never be a revision.

(8) It is not sufficient for an applicant for revision to show that the lower Court has erred, but he must also show that it acted without jurisdiction or refused to exercise its lawful jurisdiction or proceeded illegally or with material irregularity (e).

(9) A mistaken view by the lower Court as to what amounted to the misconduct of an arbitrator is no ground for revision (f).

(10) Award filed in Court—Judgment pronounced in terms of award before expiry of 10 days for filing objections—Material irregularity—Revision—Bogus award—Duty of Court—Statement that a party agreed to the award—Effect—Admission whether conclusive—S. 31, Evidence Act—Court when must act nunc pro tunc—Pleader's authority to refer to arbitration—S. 115, O. III, r. 1, and Sch. II, cl. 15 (1), Civ. Pro. Code.

After receiving the award, the Court has to exercise a judicial function before it determines to give judgment in accordance with the award. If in the exercise of the function it commits a material irregularity, it is the duty of the Court of revision to rectify the proceedings and undo what has been done in a procedure opposed to the law. Revision on such grounds as these does not impugn the award but rather the procedure of the Court in dealing with the award (a).

Whatever may be the rights of the parties as to appeal or the limitations put upon its own powers in revision, the High Court will not allow any party to abuse the process of the Court and obtain a judgment and decree on a bogus award.

Under para 16, Sch. II, Civ. Pro. Code, a Court is not empowered to give judgment until the time for making an application to set aside the award has expired. This condition is not affected by the consideration that an application may have been made and set aside or that parties may have stated that they have no objections to urge. It is a condition subject to which jurisdiction to make judgment is conferred on the Court and when that condition is not fulfilled the judgment is no judgment (b).

The statement by a party that he agreed to an award is merely an admission that he had no objections to urge to it. But an admission is not conclusive unless it operates as an estoppel (S. 31, Evidence Act) and there is no question of estoppel in such a case, for the Court has no jurisdiction to give judgment at once on the admission. The party can at any time within ten days file objections explaining that his previous admission was due to a mistake of fact or law.

Where a party is deprived of such an opportunity of filing objections by the precipitate and illegal action of the Court in passing judgment before the expiry of ten days for filing the objections, the lower Court must, in order to remove this prejudice, act nunc pro tunc and allow objections to be filed after the illegal judgment is set aside (c).

A pleader duly appointed to act for a party has authority under O. III, r. 1, Civ. Pro. Code, to make any application including an application for a reference to arbitration. If he does so against the wishes of his client, he is responsible to his client but the client is nevertheless bound. Srikishen Roohmal v. Relumal Parlamal, 9 S.L.R. 183=34 Ind. Cas. 845.

The maxim 'nemo allegans turpitudinem suam audiendus est' must give way to the maxim 'In pari delicto potior est conditio possidentis,' and the defendant who was in possession of the properties could therefore be permitted to set up the true facts of the transaction. *Nand Lal v. (3) Sale—Purchase-money paid by father—Son's name entered in sale-deed as sole vendee—Intention.

The plaintiff sued for a declaration that the sale of certain shops by his father shall not affect his rights of inheritance. The claim was based on the grounds, inter alia, that the vendor was a minor at the time of the sale and that the property was ancestral in his hands. It appeared that the shops were purchased in 1890 by one B in the name of his minor son, the vendee, who was entered in the sale-deed as the sole vendee under guardianship of his father, and who subsequently sold them to the present defendants:

Held, (1) that although the funds for the purchase of 1890 were advanced by the plaintiff's grandfather, his real intention was not to make the purchase a benami transaction, but to make an advancement of the purchase-money to his son, the plaintiff's father, and to constitute him as the real owner of the shops;

(2) that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief sought for, as the shops were not ancestral property in his father's hands;

(3) that the fact that leases of the property were executed in the name of the plaintiff's grandfather only showed that he managed the property on behalf of his son and was altogether insufficient to prove the benami nature of the transaction. Natha Mal v. Jivan Ram, 77 P. W.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 733.

purchase, and it lies on the son to prove that he is solely entitled to the legal and beneficial interest in the estate.

(5-a) Evidence—Presumption—Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1908), S. 66—Suit, meaning—Suit for declaration against certified purchaser—Pleadings—Title by adverse possession not set up in plaint—General prayer.

In a suit for a declaration that plaintiff was the real owner of the property in dispute purchased in Court auction in the name of the defendant, and that the defendant was his benamidar the defendant pleaded that the transaction was not a fictitious transaction and asserted that the plaintiff had purchased the property on her behalf and had given it to her by gift and although the plaintiff was unable to give any explanation of a credible nature which induced him to enter into benami transactions on behalf of his daughter, the defendant, he proved satisfactorily that the money advanced on the deed was his own money, that the defendant at the time had no means of her own and that he remained in possession of the property from the time of the purchase. Held that according to the recognised presumption of law the transactions must be held on this evidence to have been benami transactions, unless and until the defendant rebuts the presumption.

The words "no suit" in S. 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, not only include a suit for possession but also a suit for a declaration (a).

Where in a suit for declaration the plaintiff does not assert anywhere in the plaint title by adverse possession and the defendant was never called on to answer such a plea, and no issue was framed on the point, and no evidence called upon it and in the claim for relief no claim is made that a declaration should be given to the plaintiff on the ground that his title had become perfected by adverse possession, and there are no materials on the record to show whether the plaintiff's title has or has not become perfected by adverse possession, the appellate Court would not frame an issue and

Bill of Exchange.

(1) Acceptance—Consignment of goods from an enemy port by an enemy steamer—Outbreak of war after acceptance—Ship arriving in Bombay but leaving without discharging cargo to a neutral port before outbreak of war—Acceptor dishonouring bill by non-payment—Government Proclamation enabling British subject to obtain goods on enemy steamer in neutral port—Negotiable Instruments Act (XVIII of 1881) ss. 32 and 43.

On the 24th June 1914, a German, residing at Hamburg, drew a bill of exchange upon the defendants in favour of the plaintiffs for £65-0-8 payable at thirty days' sight to the order of the plaintiffs for value received.

Bill of Exchange—(Concluded).

The bill purported to be drawn upon the defendants against 50 bales of goods per S.S. Lichtenfels a German steamer. It was presented to the defendants for acceptance with the shipping documents relating to the bales of goods mentioned in the bill; and was accepted on the 20th July 1914 payable at the office of the plaintiffs in Bombay. The S. S. Lichtenfels reached Bombay just before the out-break of war between Great Britain and Germany and in order to evade capture left Bombay and took shelter in the neutral port of Marmagoa. The bill was presented for payment on due date with the shipping documents but was dishonoured by non-payment. In the meanwhile, the British Government issued a Proclamation authorising British subjects to make payments for the purpose of obtaining their cargoes in neutral ports to the agents of shipowners in an enemy country. The plaintiffs averred their readiness and willingness to hand over the documents against payment of the amount due under the bill. Eventually they filed a suit to recover the amount of the bill, alleging that the acceptance being unqualified and absolute the defendants were bound to pay. The defendants denied their liability contending that the acceptance was qualified, the bill having been drawn on them against goods and they need not pay till they were put in a position to receive the goods:

Held, (1) that the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed from either point of view, for if the acceptance was unqualified the defendants were bound to pay on due date, and if the acceptance was qualified they were still bound to pay "at or after maturity" when money was demanded after the proclamation whereunder consignees were permitted to take delivery of goods from enemy ships in neutral ports;

(2) that the consideration for the acceptance did not fail, for the proclamation permitted performance before it was too late of the condition alleged. R. K. Motilal & Co. v. The Mercantile Bank of India, Ltd., 19 Bom. L.R. 521.

Broker.

(1) Principal and broker—Suit for commission—Limitation Act, 1908, Sch. I, Arts. 115, 102.

The relation between a broker and the person for whom he acts is that of agent and principal. Unlike the factor he is not entrusted with the custody and apparent ownership of the goods, but he is a mere negotiator to effect business and is paid for his services a commission on the sales resulting from his efforts. Where the contract is not in writing, its terms are to be inferred from the course of dealings between the parties.

Hence, where a broker between whom and his employer the contract, as found by the Court of appeal below, was that he would be paid his commission at certain rates upon the date of delivery thereof, held, that the suit was one for money under a contract which for purposes of limitation was governed by Art. 115, Limitation Act, and was not one for wages within the meaning of Art. 102. Sushil Chaudar Das v. An award made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce was sought to be set aside by defendants in Court on the ground that the Chamber acted in excess of jurisdiction in having made the award in favour of the plaintiffs disregarding the fact that the contract in question was made by plaintiffs as brokers although in fact the plaintiffs had no principals and the contract was not therefore enforceable. The plaintiffs alleged that there was a custom in the market in respect of gunny, hessian and manufactured jute goods by which brokers are held liable upon such contracts and such custom being well known to the Chamber, the award was properly made and valid.

The Court allowed evidence of custom and usage to be given and held that there was such a custom and that the defendants knew of it (a).

Broker—(Concluded).

Held—that Ss. 230 and 236, Contract Act, the former of which deals with undisclosed principal and the latter with falsely contracting as agent, were not applicable to this case.

Held also, that the evidence of usage of trade applicable to the contract which the parties making it knew, or may be reasonably presumed to have known, is admissible for the purpose of importing terms into the contract respecting which the instrument itself is silent (b).

§ That the usage being known to the Chamber the matter was within the jurisdiction and the award was properly made. In the matter of Joy Lall & Co. v. Moosotha Nath Mullick, 20 C.W.N. 365 = 35 Ind. Cas. 3.

Brokerage.

Brokerage on sale within time limit, meaning of. See APPEAL (GENERAL), No. 4, 20 C.W.N. 335.

Brokerage Contract.

Under-brokerage contract—Brokerage contract terminable by parties by three months' notice before the end of the term—Under-broker who had notice of brokerage contract if may claim damages for whole term when brokerage contract legally terminated before expiry of term—Under-broker wrongfully dismissed before brokerage contract terminated—Damages, measure of—Brokerage contract, if terminable by fresh agreement—Under-broker, if may insist on termination by notice—Hindu joint family, carrying on business in partnership—Contract by family, if terminates with death of co-parcener—Contract Act, S. 253, cl. 10—Rule of Hindu law, if to be considered.

By an agreement between A and B, dated 31st May 1911, the former appointed the latter to act as broker for him for 5 years or for such further period as might be mutually agreed upon between the parties. It was provided in the agreement that it might be determined by either party by giving three months' notice to the other party. In pursuance of another term of the said agreement B (the broker) appointed C to act as under-broker for him during the subsistence of the said agreement and C (the under-broker) had notice of the said agreement. On 12th August 1912, the broker B wrongfully dismissed the under broker C, and subsequently on 2nd December 1912 in good faith entered into a second agreement with A inconsistent with the first.

Brokerage Contract—(Concluded).

Held, in a suit by C against B for wrongful termination of the under-brokerage contract, that as the under-brokerage contract depended upon the subsistence of the brokerage contract and the latter contract was validly terminated on the 2nd December 1912, the under-brokerage contract also came to an end on the same day, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover damages as for the period from his dismissal on 12th August to the termination of the contract on 2nd December 1912.

Per Mookerjee, J.—That the three months' notice required by the contract between A and B was for the benefit and protection of the contracting parties themselves, and C was not entitled to make a grievance that either party has allowed the other to determine that agreement without insisting on the prescribed notice.

Where X and Y, members of a joint family (of which Y was the karta) carrying on a joint family business, entered into a contract of under-brokerage and X subsequently died; but Y and the other party to the contract went on dealing with each other as if the contract subsisted:

Held, per curiam, that X's death did not terminate the contract.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Where there are two joint agents and one of them dies, upon his death, the contract of agency terminates only so far as he is concerned, but not as regards the surviving agent.

The rights and liabilities of co-parceners in a joint Hindu family cannot be determined by exclusive reference to the Contract Act, but must be considered also with regard to the general rules of Hindu Law; according to these rules, the death of one of the co-parceners does not dissolve a family partnership. *Raghumull v. (1) Burmese Buddhist Law—Adoption—Proof of publicity or notoriety—Effect of taking a share in the natural parent's estate—Eldest child's right to a share in the joint estate of the parents.

It is only when the fact of adoption is left to be inferred from past statements and conduct that adequate proof of publicity or notoriety of the relationship should be insisted upon. When there are admissions of the adoptive parents and the positive evidence of persons present at the adoption no further proof of publicity is needed.

When there is positive evidence of adoption, the fact that the alleged adoptive child took a share by inheritance in the estate of his or her natural parents cannot overthrow the conclusions derived from such evidence.

The eldest child's right to a fourth share of the joint estate of his or her parents on the death of one of them lapses unless made within a reasonable time after the death of one of them.

(3) Chinese Buddhist Law—Adoption.

Adoption of children by childless married couples is of common occurrence in China, but when a question regarding an alleged adoption is raised before the Courts, care must be taken to see that the alleged adoption is properly proved.

Per Fox, C.J.—The customs as to adoption and inheritance have no connexion with Buddhism, Confucianism, or Taoism, but they appear to be based to a great extent on the veneration of ancestors which existed before the first teachers of the above religions appeared, and which still is the strongest influence with the majority of Chinese whichever of the above faiths they profess.

Per Fox, C.J.—Adoption of children by childless married couples would appear to be more prevalent in China than in Burma even. The dying out of a family appears to be regarded as disastrous. Jernigan says at page 124 of his work, "China in Law and Commerce"—"The dying out of a family should be prevented, as by the desolation of the house the dead lost their religious honour, the Gods of the family their sacrifices, the hearth its flame, and the forefathers their name amongst the living." Adoption is resorted to prevent these calamities, and the most frequent case is the adoption of a nephew by a childless uncle. According to most of the authors the adopted son takes exactly the same position as a natural son. The adoption of females would not with certainty avoid the calamity of the family in the paternal line dying out, for on marriage a woman becomes a member of the family of her husband, and severs connection with the family of her father: *Ma Pwa v. (1) Burmese Buddhist Law—Evidence of adultery—Divorce—Separation of property.

According to Burmese Buddhist Law if a wife commits adultery, her husband is entitled to discard her and send her away with nothing but the clothes on her person. If it is proposed to abandon her for adultery, and she leaves her husband's house there is a divorce from the time she leaves her husband and the holder of a decree against her cannot attach property in her husband's possession as she is no longer entitled to a share in it. A Court may presume adultery where it is satisfied that a guilty attachment subsisted between the parties, and that opportunities occurred when a guilty intercourse might with ordinary facilities have taken place. *Maung Pya Gi v. (1) Rights of an illegitimate child to father's estate during the lifetime of his legitimate wife.

Held by Fox, C.J., Ormond and Twomey, JJ. (Parlett, J., dissenting) that were a Burman Buddhist died leaving a widow and an illegitimate child, the latter is not entitled to any share in the estate left by him.

Held further, that such an illegitimate child, even if entitled to a share in its deceased father's estate, cannot claim and obtain such share in the lifetime of her father's widow.

Held by Parlett, J. (Fox, C.J., Ormond and Twomey, JJ., dissenting) that a step-child, though illegitimate, has a right of partition against the surviving step-parent when there are no legitimate children; and that the daughter in this case is entitled to $\frac{2}{3}$ ths of the property taken by her father to the marriage with the surviving widow and to $\frac{1}{6}$ th of the joint property acquired during that marriage. *In re Ma Hoya v. Neither O. I, r. 10, nor any other provision of the Code of Civil Procedure authorises a Court, on finding that the plaintiff must fail, to import into the case as co plaintiff a person who has different cause of action inconsistent with that of the original plaintiff and who moreover has not paid Court-fees on the new claim.

—8.—Maintenance.

(1) Family house—Widow's right to maintenance.

A family house within the meaning of the Chinese Buddhist Law would refer to "a house which has belonged to paternal ancestors or one which a man has started for his family and their male descendants." Per Fox, C.J.

Per Fox, C.J.—The root idea of a family house is that of a living together continuously for years in a house regarded as the family house descending from father to sons.

Before a widow can be deprived of maintenance for leaving the house in which her husband had lived, it must be shown clearly not only that it was a family house, but also that she let it without cause.

Per Fox, C.J.—Moreover in the absence of any guide as to what would be done in China if the other members of a family made themselves objectionable to the widow of a member, and made it impossible for her to live with them in the same house, I think that any rule there may be depriving the widow of maintenance unless she continues to live with her husband's relations should not be enforced. *Ma Pwa v. of children to proposed marriage—Parent's promise to marry their children if enforceable.

The rule of Burmese Buddhist Law, that a female, whether a minor or not, cannot be married without her consent, or against her will applies a fortiori to a male. If parents promise to make or compel their child to marry, the Court cannot enforce such promise, or give compensation for its breach, because in so doing it would infringe the principle that the consent of parties to a marriage must be free (a). *Maung Thein v. (3) Chinese Buddhist Law—Marriage—Law of domicile as affecting marriage—Customary law of woman when to be considered.

A Chinese Buddhist man and a Burmese Buddhist woman entered into a contract of marriage embodied in a written document. The material portion of the document ran as follows: "As I, M.S., will live with M.E. for her whole life as husband and wife, hereafter I, M.S., from the day we thus live as husband and wife throughout my whole life will never abandon M.E., whether infirmity or blindness or any affliction overtakes her or any person interferes or makes mischief between us or any relation on my side objects. Handing all my salary as well as all property we may acquire together, to her, my wife, I will attend to, maintain, look after and cherish her in conformity with the duties of a husband. If I fail in any of the aforesaid duties I will pay Rs. 5,000 as compensation for damage to the reputation of my wife M.E. M.E. also, upon M.S. not failing in but performing the duties defined above, will throughout her whole life carry out the various acts of attendance upon her husband in accordance with the duties of a wife. Though her husband becomes infirm or blind she will not desert him." Held, (i) that the abovesaid agreement was not void under S. 23 of the Contract Act.

(ii) That under it a life-long and binding union was contemplated by the parties.

(ii-a) Held by Parlett, J.—That in the absence of the preliminary negotiation between the parents of the parties and other ceremonies usual in Chinese marriages, the union could not be regarded as a valid marriage.

(iii) That the desertion of M.E. by M.S. would constitute a breach of promise of marriage by M.S.

(iv) That under S. 74 of the Contract Act it was open to the Court to award such compensation not exceeding the amount of Rs. 5,000 named in the document as appears to it to be reasonable.

(v) That the defendant's position or his insolvency does not alone justify a reduction of the damages.

Buddhist Law—(Continued).—9.—Marriage—(Concluded).

(vi) That Rs. 2,000 was a handsome sum to a girl in the plaintiff's position and a reasonable compensation under the circumstances.

Prima facie there is no strong reason why the customary law of the man should be applied, and the customary law of the woman utterly disregarded, at any rate up to and at the time of marriage. After marriage other considerations apply. (Per Fox, C.J.)

The lex loci contractus quoad solemnitatis determines the validity of a marriage, and the lex domicilii the question of the capacity of the parties to marry (a). Per Fox, C.J., Sela Kyal v. Ma E, 8 L.B.R. 399=9 Bur. L.T. 179=34 Ind. Cas. 159.

(1) Partition during step-father's lifetime—Practice—Appeal—New defence inconsistent with original, if allowed—Limitation.

whose favour the document has been executed must prove that the lady understood the nature and character of the transaction, and that she signed the deed fully understanding it. In determining the question whether a pardanishan lady was a free agent in executing a document and appreciated the result of her act the whole attendant circumstances must be looked to. (6-b) Jungle lands—Suit by Zemindar for possession—Plea of under-proprietary title—Adverse possession—Abadi—Scattered trees—Ownership.

In a suit by a Zemindar of a village for possession and declaration of title with regard to certain plots of land consisting of jungles and groves and with regard to some scattered trees in respect of which the ownership could only be exercised by occasional acts of dominion, the burden of proof lies on the defendant who asserts his under-proprietary title, and having regard to the nature of the property there is a further presumption that the plaintiff had possession. As the presumption of possession follows the title, it is for the opposite party to prove adverse possession.

Where a Zemindar sues to recover possession on the ground that the defendant had encroached upon the plots in dispute and the finding of the Court below is that the defendant is an occupancy tenant, plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for possession or to a decree for declaration of his proprietary title with respect to these plots. Ram Saran v. (6-c) Suit by talukdar—Plea of under-proprietary right—Adverse possession—Decision of Revenue Court.

In a suit brought by a talukdar of certain villages for obtaining a declaration that the defendants who are in possession of certain plots in those villages have no proprietary or under-proprietary rights therein, if the defendants wish to establish their under-proprietary rights, the burden of proving that they have such rights lies upon them (a).

A person may acquire under-proprietary rights by adverse possession. Where in a claim for ejectment laid before a Revenue Court the defendant pleaded that he was the under-proprietor and the Revenue Court upheld the defendant's plea and refused to eject him on the ground that he was the under-proprietor, he may acquire under-proprietary rights by adverse possession. Time would run from the date of the decision of the Revenue Court. Muhammad Mumtaz Ali Khan v. Harpal Singh, 32 Ind. Cas. 976.

Cancellation of Deed.

(1) Suit to set aside deed and for recovery of possession of share—Limitation—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Arts. 44, 91, 141.

Whether a plaintiff must sue for cancellation of a document under which the defendant in possession claims, depends, we think, upon whether the onus of proving circumstances establishing its invalidity lies upon him or whether it lies upon the defendant to prove circumstances establishing its validity. For example, where a plaintiff sues to recover possession of property which the defendant has obtained under a document executed by the plaintiff or one under whom he claims, the plaintiff would have to establish facts entitling him to have the instrument cancelled or set aside and would have to sue within three years of those facts becoming known to him, as provided by Art. 91 of the Indian Limitation Act. On the other hand, where the defendant has acquired possession under a deed executed not by the real owner of the property but by some one having a power of disposal under certain circumstances on behalf of the real owner, the onus lies on the defendant to prove the existence of those circumstances, and the plaintiff may ignore the deed in bringing his suit for possession (2).

A suit was instituted by the plaintiff for a declaration that a certain deed of exchange was not binding on him, and for recovery of possession of his share in certain lands. Held that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to have the instrument set aside before he could recover possession; and that his suit was governed by the twelve years' period of limitation provided by Art. 141, Sch. I, Limitation Act (IX of 1908) (b). Anandappa v. Totappa, 33 Ind. Cas. 441.

A Noabad taluk is a tenure, the land being khas mehal land of Government.

Where it was found that the tenure in question was not a permanent tenure, the purchaser thereof at a sale under Act XI of 1859 acquired it in the same state in which it was held at the time of the last settlement as provided by S. 12 of Bengal Act VII of 1868.

The fact that the defendant does not in his written statement deny the plaintiff's title to land of which plaintiff has sued for recovery does not show that the plaintiff had no cause of action.

Where, therefore, it appeared that the defendant did not at any time before the institution of the suit admit the plaintiff's title to the lands in suit, although plaintiff served him with notice of his claim.

Held—that this Court was not justified in dismissing the suit on the ground of want of cause of action, merely because the defendant in his written statement admitted plaintiff's title. Gangadas Sil v. The Secretary of State, 20 C.W.N. 636=32 Ind. Cas. 752.

Chowkidari Chakran Lands.

- (1) Resumption—Question of fact—Chowkidari Chakran Act (VI of 1870, B.C.), Ss. 60, 61—Commissioner's report—Finality—Notice.

In a suit to have it declared that certain resumed chakra lands are chowkidari chakran lands of Mauza A of which plaintiff is the patnidar and not the chakran lands of Mauza B of which defendants are the patnidars, the question is one of parcel or no parcel and as such is purely a question of fact.

The absence of notice under S. 61 of the Chowkidari Chakran Act would render the proceedings of the Commissioner of no effect against a person who was entitled to such notice and the Civil Court would interfere although but for such defect the order of the Commissioner would be final and conclusive. The Commissioner has no duty imposed upon him to give any notice to patnidars who are not impleaded in his enquiry and the report of the Commissioner is final and conclusive against such persons without notice. *Sarat Chandra Roy v. - (11) Ss. 257 and 310-A, 295, 37—Payment into Court by strangers—Subsequent sale.

Payment into Court under S. 267 of the Civ. Pro. Code (1882) can only be made by or on behalf of the person who is liable under the decree to make that payment. If the payment is made on behalf of the judgment debtor or his representative, it must be done by a recognized agent under S. 37 of the Civ. Pro. Code or by a pleader duly authorised.

If the whole amount due under the decree is paid into Court, the decree becomes satisfied without any formal order of the Court recording satisfaction.

Where two persons paid money but not on behalf of the judgment-debtor, under S. 310-A, as persons whose immovable property had been sold in execution of a money-decree, while the plaintiff property did not belong to them, though one of them had obtained a sham sale-deed from the judgment-debtor, such a payment does not always or necessarily have the effect of satisfying the decree.

Civ. Pro. Code (1882)—(Continued).

Payment into Court by persons who are not only strangers to the decree but persons who do not come at all under the description given in S. 310-A, i.e., persons entitled to have the execution-sale set aside under that section, cannot have the effect of satisfying the decree in the eye of the law, unless and until the decree-holder consented to receive the amount deposited in satisfaction of the decree.

The Court did not act without jurisdiction in distributing such amount paid into Court under S. 295 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Where a decree has not been wholly satisfied, the holding of a sale in execution of that decree mentioning in the sale proclamation, an amount larger than the amount due under the decree, is only an irregularity and does not make the sale a nullity as having been held without jurisdiction. *Kasturi Aiyangar v. - (12) S. 259—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908). O. XXI, r. 2—Mortgagee (decree-holder) left in possession under decree—Liability under decree to account and to credit surplus income annually—Receipt, if payment under or adjustment of decree—Certificate within ninety days, if necessary.

In this case the decree-holders who were mortgagees remained in possession of the property under the terms of the decree and the decree provided that every year they should render account and give credit for any surplus that might be in their hands after meeting the necessary expenses. They remained in possession for more than eight years though the decree expressly provided for their remaining in possession only for six years. The question of limitation that arose was whether such receipts by mortgagee decree-holders in possession of the property was "money payable under a decree paid out of Court or adjustment in whole or in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder." Held that money so received cannot in any sense be said to be money payable under the decree within the meaning of O. XXII, r. 2 of Civ. Pro. Code, or S. 258 of the old Code, nor can it be said to be an adjustment between the decree holder and judgment-debtor. There was in fact no adjustment (a).

The mortgage decree-holders being in possession are to account for the money received by them, and if any money is still payable to them, they will be entitled to its payment. On the other hand if their decree had been satisfied, the judgment-debtors are entitled to delivery of possession of the property and also to any balance of the money that may remain in their hands. *Yella Reddi v. (17-a) S. 285—Attachment in execution of two decrees of two Courts—Sale by lower Court—Rights of purchaser—Bona fides—Notice—Burden of proof—Irregularity.

Where there were two decrees against the same judgment-debtor and his property was attached first by the Sub-Court and then by the Munsif's Court and in execution of the decree of the Munsif's Court the property is sold while the attachment by the Sub-Court was subsisting, the sale is irregular and not invalid; the purchaser will take an indefeasible or a defeasible title according to whether he knows or does not know of the irregularity. If he buys bona fide and without notice, his title will be perfect and he will not be affected by the irregularity of the proceedings resulting in the sale. If he purchases with notice he runs the risk of his purchase being set aside (a).

The test to be applied in determining whether the purchaser had notice or not is whether he acted in good faith without being aware, whether by direct and formal notice or otherwise, that his title was liable to be questioned by reason of the superior Court's attachment.

It is for the purchaser at the sale by the Court of lower jurisdiction to prove that he made the purchase bona fide without knowledge of the pre-existing attachment by the superior Court. Subbiah Aiyar v. Muthukumaraswami Pillai, 32 Ind. Cas. 41.

A mortgagor having filed a suit for redemption died during the pendency of the suit which was ordered to abate in 1883. The mortgagor's son sued in 1912 to redeem the mortgaged land on the ground that it was ancestral property in which he had an interest at birth. The trial Court held that the second suit was, but the lower appellate Court held that it was not barred by the order of abatement in the first suit. On appeal:

Held, affirming the decree of the lower appellate Court, that the first suit, not having been brought by the mortgagor in a representative capacity, was defective as a redemption suit; and that, therefore, the mortgagor's personal right to sue did not embrace the rights of his co-parceners and none of them could be concluded by the application of S. 371 of the Civ. made for the consent of the Court to this compromise on behalf of S. By virtue of the compromise S obtained considerable property. Later, V sued J and S on the bond.

Held, that the fact that S could not be made liable under the bond did not discharge J.

The lower appellate Court having dismissed the suit against S, V appealed on the ground (inter alia) that S should not be allowed to set aside the bond unconditionally, and that if he failed to recover Rs. 90,000 from J he should have a right of recourse as against the property obtained by S under the compromise.

Held, that these matters could not be considered in a suit upon the bond.

Where a sanad provides for the maintenance of a mosque and for khairat (charity), feeding travellers, etc., and the public offer prayers at the mosque, the trust created is a public, charitable and religious trust.

A suit for scheme and removal of trustees should be instituted with the sanction of the Advocate-General and no leave of Court is necessary under S. 18, Act XX of 1863 (a).

A person electing to proceed under Act XX of 1863 can be given only such special relief as that special statute provides for and if he wishes for any relief beyond that, he should proceed under S. 539, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882 (b).

In such a suit under S. 18, Act XX of 1863, the Court is not concerned with the question of possession or limitation. The proper parties are the persons who were managing the trust professing to be trustees, irrespective of any person in possession of any part of the trust property.

A wakf is not invalid on the ground that it does not specify the proportion in which the income is to be appropriated for the several objects (c). Makhlachor Rahman v. Falsur Rahman, 35 Ind. Cas. 880.

Where the plaintiffs in a suit for redemption of a mortgage with possession, having obtained a decree in the Court of a Subordinate Judge, recovered possession in July 1878, but the High Court on appeal varied that decree by directing the plaintiffs to pay a further sum of Rs. 9,000 but on their failure to do so, the mortgagee recovered possession in April 1880, and then applied to the Subordinate Judge for an order for mesne profits for the period he was out of possession, and obtained a decree for a sum of over Rs. 5,000, and in execution of that decree, the plaintiffs' equity of redemption was sold and purchased by the decree-holder, and an application under S. 311 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 to set aside the sale failed.

Held, in a second suit for redemption brought by an assignee of the mortgagor, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to make the decree for mesne profits by way of restitution, and if he exercised that jurisdiction wrongly the persons aggrieved had their remedy, under the Code of Civil Procedure, either by appeal to the High Court or by an application for revision, and the present action was wholly misconceived. *Pandit Parbhu Dyal v. A decree for part of a claim admitted by the defendant and the dismissal of the rest of the claim for default of appearance of plaintiff at the trial of the suit is a decree and is appealable.

Seshagiri Aiyar, J. (dubitante)—

Coutts-Trotter, J.—On Court decreeing the admitted part of the claim and dismissing the rest of the claim under O. IX, r. 8, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, the entire adjudication should be treated as a decree.

The same adjudication, the same document cannot be, as to part, a decree, and as to another part of it, something else.

The words "admits the claim or part thereof" apply to a case where, on examining the plaint and the defendant's admission in the written statement, it can be considered that he, there and then, agreed to pay the money or to submit to the relief claimed in the plaint (a).

A plaintiff ought not to be shut from the judgment seat where costs will afford a sufficient protection to the defendant as against the plaintiff who is guilty of some technical error or mistake.

Seshagiri Aiyar, J. :—

S. 2, cl. (2), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, applies only to total dismissals for default and not to partial dismissals.

The word "claim" is not necessarily synonymous with the amount sued for. It may refer to the right litigated, irrespective of the arithmetical figure stated in the relief column. The fact that the burden of proof is on the defendant will not enable the plaintiff to get a decree if there is admission of the right sued for (b). Munlawami Gouda v. Junjadu, 35 Ind. Cas. 65.

A mortgaged the property in suit to the present defendants and subsequently to the present plaintiff. Defendants sued A on their mortgage. Plaintiff was not a party to that suit. A died during the pendency of the suit and the suit was continued against one S, the divided brother's son of A. A's daughter was not made a party to the suit after A's death. Defendants obtained a decree against S and purchased the equity of redemption. Plaintiff now sued on his mortgage and contended the decree obtained in the previous suit did not bind A's daughter who alone was competent to represent her father, and consequently the purchase of the equity of redemption by the defendants behind her back cannot bind either the daughter of A or the plaintiff. Held that the decree and the execution proceedings were not binding on the daughter who was the true heir of A, and that his divided brother's son, who had only a spes successionis so long as the daughter was alive, cannot be said to have any interest in the property in suit.

If on the death of a defendant his proper legal heir is not brought on the record as required by law, the decree in such a suit will not be binding upon the true heir (a).

Prima facie no decree can be binding against a person who has not been represented in the suit. To this well-known principle there are exceptions. If a decree has been legally obtained against the proper person, it may be permissible in execution proceedings to implead another person as the legal representative and to carry on execution as against him although he is not the real representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Of course, the decree-holder must act honestly in selecting the legal representative. There must be due care and caution and want of mala fides (b).

Where the suit is brought against a proper defendant and after his death only some of the legal representatives are brought on the record, a decree given against such representatives would bind the others similarly situated. This position may be justified upon the analogy of S. 11, Expl. 6, Civ. Pro. Code. The principle is that, if there is on the record some person who is interested in defending the suit, the fact that that person does not completely represent the deceased is not a ground for holding that the decree is not properly obtained (c). *Madala Madavarayudu v. The right of exclusively conducting a Mandapapadi (a religious ceremony performed at periodical festival) and receiving the honours and emoluments appurtenant thereto is a right to perform an act of worship and therefore of a civil nature and enforceable in a Civil Court.

Krishnan, J.—It is a matter within the discretion of the trustees of a temple to make such arrangement as they think fit for the performance of any recognised ceremony and in the bona fide exercise of that discretion for the benefit of the temple to give a permanent and exclusive right to any worshipper to Quere.—Whether S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code, warrants interference by the High Court with a ruling by the lower Court on a preliminary issue, although it goes to the maintainability of the suit?

On the question whether a right claimed in a suit is a civil right, the following points are established: First, if the right litigated is a right to worship, it is a civil right, as nobody can prevent a worshipper from proceeding to the temple and worshipping the deity (a). Secondly, where the claim is made to an office emoluments, however insignificant the emoluments may be, the plaintiff is entitled to seek the aid of the Court to have his right established. Thirdly, where a right has been acquired or exercised hereditarily for performing certain festivals in the temple and where such right is negated by the Dharmakarta, the person whose rights have been so infringed is entitled to ask the Court to have that right declared in his favour (b).

Even though a person is hereditarily entitled to perform a festival, the Dharmakarta may impose a condition on him, vis., that it is open to him (the Dharmakarta) to receive contributions from others to perform the festival on a grander scale than that person is really able to do.

There are three classes of cases which concern rights to enforce privileges in a temple. (1) The object of a suit may be to secure certain advantages to a trust, in which case, any two persons, with the sanction of the Advocate-General or the Collector of the District concerned, can institute a suit in that behalf. (2) The Religious Endowments Act empowers persons who have an interest in the temple to go to a Court of Law for a declaration that the trustee is bound to carry out certain duties. (3) The third class of cases is where individuals can claim rights, either as citizens, or as having a hereditary right, to worship in a temple or perform certain festivals. In such a case the suit is really for a direction that the officer in charge of the trust should perform the duties according to mamool, and the sanction of the Advocate-General or the District Judge is not required for its institution

(14) S. 10—Two suits in Karachi Court and in Calcutta High Court in respect of same subject-matter—Stay of proceedings—Jurisdiction upon what depends.

This was a suit in the Calcutta High Court and defendants applied for its stay under S. 10, Civ. Pro. Code, on the ground that the matters in issue were also directly and substantially in issue in a suit previously instituted by them at Karachi. The parties were the same in both the suits and both related to the same contracts between the parties.

Held, that the only question that required to be considered was whether the Karachi Court had jurisdiction to grant the reliefs claimed. The plaint in the suit at Karachi having set out allegations that clearly gave jurisdiction to that Court to try the case, held, the suit in Calcutta must be stayed till the disposal of the suit at Karachi.

Jurisdiction does not depend upon actual facts but upon the allegations made concerning them. Padamsee Narainjee v. Lakhamsee Ralsee, 43 C. 144=33 Ind. Cas. 288.

(15) S. 10—Scope and applicability of.

The trial of a suit can be stayed under S. 10 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, only when the Court trying the previously instituted suit has jurisdiction also to grant the relief asked for in the subsequently instituted suit (a).

The section which leaves no discretion cannot be invoked on mere grounds of convenience, if the necessary conditions are not fulfilled. The section contemplates that the findings in the first suit would be binding in the later suit, and that there would be no need for a fresh trial of the issues already determined. Gopiklean v. The expression 'matter in issue' in S. 10 of the Code of Civil Procedure has reference to the entire subject in controversy between the parties.

The object of S. 10 is to prevent Courts of concurrent jurisdiction from simultaneously trying two parallel suits in respect of the same matter in issue.

Proceedings on appeal are for many purposes deemed only a continuation of the suit

Plaintiff filed a suit against the defendant. Subsequent to this suit, both the plaintiff and the defendant were made defendants in another suit. The second suit was decided prior to the first suit. The defendant in the first suit relied on the pleadings of the plaintiff, as the defendant in the second suit. It was argued for the plaintiff that the Court was debarred by S. 10, Civ. Pro. Code, from trying the latter suit until the first suit had been disposed, that consequently the trial was held without jurisdiction, and that therefore the defendant could not rely on plaintiff's pleading during it or on the decision which ended it. Held that the plaintiff's contention was untenable. Sadagopachariar v. Courts are generally unwilling to extend the doctrine of res judicata to co-defendants and it has been applied, where it has been applied, with great caution.

In order that a finding in a case should be res judicata between co-defendants three things are necessary: (1) that there should be a conflict of interest between co-defendants, (2) that it should be necessary to decide on that conflict in order to give to the plaintiff the relief appropriate to his suit, and (3) that the judgment should contain a decision of the question raised as between the co-defendants. Jadav Chandra Sircar v. (23) S. 11—Res judicata—Finding not forming basis of decree.

A finding by a Court upon a point which was not the basis of a decree and which was not entered in the decrees so as to admit of an appeal by the party aggrieved cannot be considered to have been finally decided so as to operate as res judicata.

A Court while dismissing a suit for ejectment of a tenant on the ground that no notice had been served on him under S. 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, recorded a finding in plaintiff's favour regarding the status of the tenant, viz., that he was an under-raiyat and had not made out the custom under which he claimed to have acquired a right of occupancy.

Held that this finding would not operate as res judicata on the question of the tenant's status in a subsequent suit for ejectment brought against him by the same landlord. Fazli v. Hari Kishore Chakravarti, 33 Ind. Cas. 620.

(24) S. 11—Res judicata—Wrong decision in prior suit on question of law—Bar of subsequent suit—Estoppel.

Plaintiff and defendants agreed that the defendants would discharge a certain liability of the plaintiff to a third party. The defendants having refused to pay to the third party, the latter filed a suit against the plaintiff and obtained a decree. Then the plaintiff sued the defendants and the third party to compel the defendants to pay the third party the amount decreed against him. The defendant then objected that the suit was premature as the plaintiff did not actually pay to the third party the sum agreed to be paid by the defendants. The Court accepted this contention and dismissed the suit. The decree against the plaintiff having been executed by the third party, the plaintiff had to pay the amount. He immediately thereafter brought the present suit against the defendants to recover the amount paid by him. The question for determination was whether the present suit of the plaintiff was barred by reason of the dismissal of the former suit. Held that the defendants were barred by the operation of S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code, from raising the contention that the plaintiff's suit could not be maintained on account of the dismissal of the prior suit having been wrong. He could not plead that the prior decree did not bind him. Therefore the present suit was not barred by the rule res judicata. Subblah Udayar v. Srinivasa Udayar, 36 Ind. Cas. 268.

Where the Court refused to try an extraneous issue, there could not be any res-judicata between the parties in respect of it (a).

The doctrine of constructive res judicata must be applied strictly and cannot be extended beyond the strict limits of the section (b).

A, a Hindu widow, sued for possession of certain immoveable property which belonged to her husband as a separated Hindu. The suit was decreed and A became entitled to immediate possession of the property. A, seven years later, applied, to be put into possession but her application for execution of the decree was rejected as barred by limitation. A then brought the present suit upon the decree for possession of the property. The Munsif held that the plaintiff had been in possession of the property within twelve years next prior to the date of the suit, and decreed the claim. The lower appellate Court dismissed the suit holding that it was not maintainable.

The fact that in a previous suit plaintiff was one of several joint plaintiffs who were seeking merely a declaratory decree of their alleged reversionary rights to a certain land is no bar to a subsequent suit for possession by such plaintiff based upon his alleged exclusive title to the present possession of the land on the ground of his heirship to the last owner. Such subsequent suit is not barred either by S. 11 or O. II, r. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. In fact if the plaintiff had put forward the claim urged in the subsequent suit in the previous suit, it would have been inconsistent with the claim set up by the plaintiffs in such suit (a).

(34) S. 11, Expl. IV—Res judicata—Relief against added defendants based on alternative cause of action not claimed in first suit—Second suit barred.

The principle underlying the rule of res judicata is the relief of parties from a multiplication of actions.

This was a suit for damages for breach of contract in which the defendant-vendor denied the contract, and on which denial the plaintiff joined the brokers to the transaction as co-defendants but asked for no relief against them. The contract was not proved and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff thereafter filed a fresh suit for damages against the brokers.

Held that the suit was barred by res judicata under Expl. 4, S. 11 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Crouch, A.J.C., contra).

Per Crouch, A.J.C.—There is no rule in the Civ. Pro. Code which, in terms, justifies the joinder of alternative and inconsistent causes of action against different defendants; but, where a plaintiff has alternative rights of relief arising out of the same transaction against two persons, and some question, of fact is common to both causes of action he may join both defendants, and the Court may, "without any amendment," give judgment against either or both of the defendants according to their respective liabilities. This is the rule laid down in O. I, r. 8. Prima facie the rule is nothing more than a rule permitting the joinder of parties and the giving of judgment against the new defendant so far as concerns the common question of fact or law.

Per Crouch, A.J.C.—To hold that where a person is joined under O. I, r. 4 the plaintiff not only can but must include all grounds of attack against him under penalty of being debarred from ever obtaining relief to which he may prove entitled seems to me an extension of the law which is not authorised by the term of the Civ. Pro. Code or by practice or by any reported decision. Shamumal v. Rijhumal, 10 S.L.R. 29=36 Ind. Cas. 92.

Two suits (O.S. No. 1 of 1889 and O.S. No. 1 of 1899) was filed for partition of immovable properties and the plaintiff in the former suit executed his decree and obtained possession of a moiety of the family properties in 1903. The decree-holders in the other suit applied for execution of their decree in 1906, but their application was dismissed on the ground that they sought to re-open entirely the partition effected in 1903 and the said order was affirmed on appeal by the High Court. The present application was brought in 1911, for a division of certain items of property alleged to have been left undivided in the execution proceedings in 1903.

Held that the real question before the High Court in the former application of 1906 was whether the previous partition of 1908 was liable to be re-opened at all and not as to the particular items which had to be divided, and the fact that it was mentioned in the grounds of appeal to the High Court in the previous proceedings that certain items of property were not divided could not have the effect of implied adjudication so as to debar the question of non-division from being raised in any subsequent execution application and that the present application was therefore not barred by res judicata. *Poduru Lakshmi Narayana v. (38) S. 11, Expl. VI and O. I, r. 8—Scope of S. 11, Expl. VI.

The first plaintiff in this suit sued for himself and for the other Agrabaramdars to eject defendants 1 and 2 from the suit sites and for delivery of possession of the said sites jointly to the plaintiff and the other Agrabaramdars (who were made defendants 3 to 13).

Another Agrabaramdar had previously brought a suit against the present defendants 1 and 2 and the prayer of that plaint was for establishing the joint right of the plaintiff therein (along with the other Agrabaramdars) in the suit sites and his exclusive right of way over the sites, and also for ejecting the defendants 1 and 2 from the suit sites and for delivery of joint possession of the entire suit sites to the plaintiff along with the defendants other than 1 and 2 and for an injunction as regards the right of way.

The present first plaintiff was the fourth defendant in the former suit. During the pendency of the present suit, another Agrabaramdar was added as the second plaintiff on the record.

Held that the substantial relief claimed in the present suit was included among the reliefs prayed for in the prior suit, that relief being the delivery of possession of the sites to all the Agrabaramdars, though the prior suit included one or two reliefs in which one of the Agrabaramdars alone was interested, and under Expl. VI to S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code, the two present plaintiffs (including the second plaintiff), cannot be allowed to re-open the right of the Agrabaramdars which was negatived in the former suit.

The weight of authority in Madras is in favour of giving a liberal construction to the Expl. VI to S. 11 of the Code; Expl. VI is not confined to cases in which permission to sue in a representative character is obtained under O. I, r. 8, Civ. Pro. Code. Expl. VI makes no reference to O. I, r. 8, of the Code (a).

The addition of an individual claim to a right of way in the former suit cannot prevent the decision therein as to the right claimed on behalf of all the Agrabaramdars, (which is also the right claimed in the present suit) from

The defendant lived in a Native State. The lower Court held that it had no jurisdiction to try the suit:

Held, that the Poona Court had jurisdiction to try the suit under S. 16, cl (d) of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, for the question to be decided was, whether or not the plaintiff was entitled to a right to, or interest in immovable property in the Bhimthadi Taluka by way of Held, that, for purposes of S. 20, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, the defendants at the time of the commencement of the suit, actually and voluntarily resided and carried on business at P (a).

In hearing a second appeal, the first thing the Chief Court has to do is to see what are the findings of fact of the lower appellate Court, and if these findings of fact are not perverse; i.e., are based upon a consideration of all the evidence, to accept these findings and then to apply the law to them. *Guranditta Mal Dextiditta Mal v. A hundi was drawn at Lucknow upon a person at Bombay. It was presented for acceptance at Bombay and was duly accepted there. After the bill became due, it was presented for payment at Bombay, but was dishonoured. The acceptor refused payment on the ground that he had no funds of the drawer in his possession. The holder of the hundi thereupon brought the present suit at Lucknow against both the acceptor and the drawer. The main defence of the acceptor was that in pursuance of an understanding between himself and the drawer he was not to be liable on the acceptance unless the drawer kept him supplied with funds, which arrangement he alleged was well known to the plaintiff. In the lower Court the question of the knowledge of the plaintiff about the alleged arrangement was found against the acceptor. The latter further contended that the suit was not cognisable in Lucknow and that it was exclusively triable in Bombay, where the bill was accepted and where it was also dishonoured. Held, that the acceptor after his acceptance became the principal debtor of the plaintiff in connection with this transaction. The suit was brought not only against the acceptor but against the drawer also, who stood in the relation of a surety. The plaintiff was entitled to sue both these parties in the same suit and under S. 20, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, he was entitled to institute the suit against both these defendants at Lucknow, the place where a part of the cause of action, viz., the drawing of the hundi, took place (a). Held also that, whatever arrangements there might have been between the drawer and the acceptor, they did not in any way affect the position of the plaintiff, in the absence of knowledge thereof on the part of the plaintiff, which the evidence in the case negatived. *Jlwan Lal Deosay v. The plaintiff had borrowed from the defendant's firm a certain sum of money which he subsequently repaid and the accounts between the parties were then settled in Rangoon. The plaintiff afterwards brought this suit in

Paramakudi Court impeaching the said settlement of account and claiming a sum of money as still due. The 1st defendant, one of the partners of the firm was a resident of Paramakudi but the other two partners were living in Rangoon. The plaintiff therefore applied for leave under S. 20, cl. (b) of the Code of Civil Procedure to institute the suit against all the partners. The District Munsiff passed an order refusing the leave prayed for and also another order returning the plaint for presentation to the proper Court. The plaintiff preferred an appeal against the latter order to the District Judge who granted the necessary leave and directed the suit to be heard by the Munsiff. On revision to the High Court.

Held that the case was covered by the provisions of S. 20, cl. (b) of the Civ. Pro. Code, as the defendants were impleaded as separate individuals and separate parties, and one of them was living within the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was sought to be instituted and the others were living outside such jurisdiction.

Held also that the principle of S. 105, Civ. Pro. Code, applied not only to decrees and interlocutory orders but also to orders and interlocutory orders which led up to the final order and that it was therefore competent to the District Judge to consider the order refusing leave preliminary to the reversal of the order returning the plaint (a).

Held further that the proper forum in the circumstances of the case was the Court in Rangoon where the settlement was come to, where the dealings took place and where all the witnesses and most of the parties were living.

The High Court cannot interfere in revision under S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code, with the order of the District Judge as there is no question of any exercise of jurisdiction not vested in him by law. Alagappa Chetty v. Annamalai Chetty, 4 L.W. 411—35 Ind. Cas. 74.

to its local jurisdiction—Validity—Decree holder's remedy—Jurisdiction of such Court within the compound of its own Court house.

A temporary Subordinate Judge's Court was established at Masulipatam, but no local limits were fixed for its jurisdiction, the District Judge of Kistna having been empowered to fix such local jurisdiction as he thought fit to do under S. 10, Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1878). A suit for partition and possession with mesne profits was transferred by the District Court to the Temporary Sub-Court at a time when the District Court had not fixed any local limits for the temporary Court's jurisdiction. The Sub-Judge decreed the suit including the relief of mesne profits.

The decree-holder applied for attachment of certain immoveable properties of the defendant for recovering the mesne profits. The places where the immoveable properties were situated were not even then assigned to the local limits of the Sub-Judge's jurisdiction.

Held, the Sub-Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the application, but under S. 89 (b), Civ. Pro. Code, he had power, on the application of the decree-holder, to send the decree for execution to the Court which has territorial jurisdiction over the place where the properties sought to be attached are situated (a).

The practice in cases where temporary Courts are established without the assignment of any definite local jurisdiction has been that execution against immoveable properties in respect of the decrees passed by such Courts is effected in the Courts to which has been assigned local jurisdiction over the situs of such property, the decrees being transferred to those Courts for the said purpose. Such transfer may become unnecessary when the temporary Courts cease to exist and their business is again taken up by the permanent Courts. (See S. 97, cl. 6.) No doubt every Court has local jurisdiction within the area of its house and the compounds attached to it and can arrest persons found within those limits in execution of its own decrees. (See also O. XXI, r. 11 (1).) But a temporary Court without assigned local limits outside its Court-house has no further power in execution even of its own decrees.

Territorial jurisdiction is a condition precedent to the execution of a decree (b).

S. 150, Civ. Pro. Code, merely provides for the whole business of one Court being transferred to another Court, as for instance, where, owing to a change of venue being made by a local Government, it loses jurisdiction over a certain area, while S. 24, Civ. Pro. Code, contemplates the transfer of a particular case or cases pending at a particular time by a special order of a superior Court. Gamarti Venkatachellam v. Gamarti Sithayamma, 31 M.L.J. 22.

A suit for partition of immoveable properties for recovery of a half share therein and for mesne profits on the file of the District Court was transferred for disposal to a temporary Court established in that place without any definite local jurisdiction. The suit was decreed. The plaintiff put in an execution petition for the attachment of certain immoveable property of the defendants for recovery of the mesne profits so decreed. But the places where the immoveable property sought to be attached were situated had not been even then assigned to the local limits of the temporary Court's jurisdiction. Held that the said temporary Court had no jurisdiction to execute the decree and that the proper course for the decree-holder was to have applied under S. 89 of the Code to have the decree transferred for execution to the Court having jurisdiction over the properties sought to be attached (a).

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—S. 150 relates to the business generally of a Court arising over the whole area or in defined particular area within its jurisdiction being transferred to another Court owing to the change of venue effected by legally competent notification of the Local Governments, while S. 24 contemplates the transfer of case or cases pending at a particular time by a special order of a superior Court.

In this case a decree was passed by the District Munsiff's Court, Rajahmundry, in 1908, for delivery of property and for mesne profits and costs. In 1905 the jurisdiction over the village where the property was situated was transferred to the Tanuku Munsiff's Court.

The decree so far as the delivery of the property was concerned was executed in 1908 in the Tanuku Munsiff's Court. Another execution application presented to the Tanuku Court in 1909 was dismissed on 4-1-1910. On 4-5-1912 the jurisdiction was again transferred from Tanuku to the Kovvur Munsiff's Court. On 20-9-1912 the original decree-holder merely applied to the Rajahmundry Court for transmitting the unsatisfied portion of the decree to the Kovvur Court. On 1-8-1913, his heirs also applied to the Rajahmundry Court for transmission of the decree to Kovvur and for recognising them as legal representatives of the deceased decree-holder. On the dates of the presentation of these two applications, the (defendants) judgment-debtors did not reside within the jurisdiction of the Rajahmundry Court. The present execution petition was presented to the Kovvur Court on 18-11-1918. Held that the Rajahmundry Court having ceased to have jurisdiction, the two preceding applications ought to have been made to the Kovvur Court, and not having been made to the "proper Court" cannot save limitation.

Where the Court which passed the decree has ceased to have jurisdiction to execute it, the only Court which can execute the decree is the Court which at the time of making the application for execution would have jurisdiction to try the suit in which the decree sought to be executed was passed (a).

A petition, although it is a step-in-aid of execution, will not save limitation unless it is presented to the proper Court (b). Penugonda Rattam v. Korasika Thatha, 81 M.L.J. 90—20 M.L.T. 327—35 Ind. Cas. 237.

An objection to the jurisdiction of an executing Court to order the sale of certain immovable property attached by it under the precept of another Court based on the want of transfer of the decree to that Court for execution, will not be allowed to be taken up for the first time during the hearing of an appeal against the order for sale.

There is nothing in law to prevent a decree being simultaneously executed in more places than one against the property of the judgment-debtor (a).

Under S. 46, Civ. Pro. (88) S. 47—Civ. Pro. Code (1882), S. 244—Objections to decrees raised and decided against in execution—Separate suit, if barred.

Courts ought not to place a narrow construction on the language of S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882 (corresponding to S. 47 of the new Code), as it is of the utmost importance that all objections to execution sales should be disposed of as cheaply and as speedily as possible (a).

One Ram Nawaz Singh obtained a decree for sale under S. 88 of the Transfer of Property Act against one Fakir Chand, on 29th March 1898. On 4th January 1902 an order absolute for sale was made and this was confirmed on appeal by the High Court on 18th December 1903. The decree-holder having died in the meanwhile, his representatives applied for execution of the decree. On 18th May 1904, the present plaintiff, the representative of the judgment-debtor who was then dead, preferred certain objections to the execution of the decree. Some of those were allowed and the others were disallowed as not having been proved. On 23rd January 1907 the present suit was instituted in respect of the very objections which had been disallowed in the execution proceedings of 1904, impleading therein two new parties A and G. In the trial Court the plaintiff partly succeeded but on appeal the High Court dismissed the suit. On appeal to the Privy Council.

Held, that the questions raised could have been and were raised in the execution proceedings of 1904 and whether raised or not the present suit was barred by S. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, that the addition of new parties was to get over the bar of S. 244, Civ. Pro. Code, and that the dismissal of the suit by the High Court was proper. Amir Chand v. Bakshi Harihar Pershad Singh, 80 M.L.J. 238—8 L.W. 257—32 Ind. Cas. 354 (P.C.).

Where a decree directed the sale of A and B schedule properties first and if there was any deficit then the sale of C and D schedule properties, and it appeared that certain items in the B schedule did not find a place in the sale proclamation. Held that the sale must be set aside in an application under S. 47 to the executing Court without a separate suit and that the sale must be treated as held, if not without jurisdiction, at any rate, with material irregularity in the exercise of the jurisdiction of the Court.

Under the proviso to r. 90 of O. XXI, the Court must be satisfied that the applicant had sustained substantial injury by reason of the irregularity or fraud complained of and some casual connection must be shown between the irregularity and the inadequacy of the price which the properties fetched at the sale.

O. XXI, r. 90, must be read with S. 47, Civ. Pro. Code. Proceedings to set aside the sale on the ground of material irregularity or fraud in publishing or conducting the sale involve questions relating to the execution, discharge or satisfaction of the decree and hence fall under both S. 47 and O. A suit will lie to get rid of a decree which has been obtained by fraud: and if the decree has been vitiated by fraud, the execution proceedings become null and void and will be set aside by the Court.

The provisions of S. 811, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, are reproduced in O. XXI, r. 90, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, with this important modification that an application for setting aside a sale can now be made, not only on the ground of material irregularity but also on the ground of fraud in publishing or conducting the sale. Consequential alterations have been made in the provision of O. XXI, r. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, so that the prohibition contained in the 3rd clause of that rule has a wider scope than that of the corresponding provision of the Code of 1882.

The execution of a certain decree was transferred to the Collector under S. 68, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. The property was attached, sold and purchased by the decree-holder. The objection of the judgment-debtors before the Collector, after confirmation of sale that the decree-holder had fraudulently kept them in ignorance of the pendency of the execution proceedings having been overruled, a civil suit for recovery of the property was filed instead of preferring an appeal to the Commissioner as contemplated by r. 45 of the Rules of the Local Government. Held that the suit was barred by O. XXI, r. 92 (8), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. Held also that the suit could not be treated as an application under

A decree like any other document is open to construction and it must be construed so as to conform with the judgment. The remedy by construction is only appropriate if the language is ambiguous. If the language is plain and there is no ambiguity, the proper remedy for a variance between the decree and the judgment is to apply for the amendment of the decree. The executing Court should not make alteration in the decree under the guise of interpretation, but must execute it as it stands. Maharaj Kumar Shoshikanta Acharjya Chowdhury v. Raja Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury, 36 Ind. Cas. 500.

In support of an application for execution made in 1913 for realisation of the balance of the decretal amount due on a mortgage decree made absolute in 1898, S. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, which provides that the repeal of an enactment shall not affect any right acquired under the enactment repealed or affect any legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right, was relied on, and it was contended that S. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure (1908) did not apply as the decree was passed when the previous Code of 1882 was in force, and inasmuch as S. 280 thereof did not apply to mortgage decrees, the application was not time-barred.

Held, that the application was governed by S. 48 of the present Code of 1908 and was time-barred as it could not be said that the decree holder acquired any right under the Code of 1882 within the meaning of S. 6 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 (a).

Held further, that, assuming that there was an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of S. 19 of the Limitation Act by the judgment-debtor in March 1902, it would give the decree-holder only three years from the time of such acknowledgment within which the decree-holder would be entitled to apply for further execution of the decrees.

That the passing of the Code of 1908 could not be held to give retrospective operation to the acknowledgment of 1902 in such a way as to give the decree-holder a fresh period of 12 years within which to apply for further execution.

The words "a fresh period of limitation" in S. 19 of the Limitation Act do not refer to the term of 12 years prescribed by S. 48 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Mahanth Krishna Dayal Gir v. Must. Sakina Bibi, 20 C.W.N. 952=1 Pat. L.J. 214=34 Ind. Cas. 27.

for a final decree before further execution—Application for order absolute—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Arts. 181, 182.

There is nothing in the language of O. XXXIV, rr. 4, 5 of Act V of 1908 which expressly says that mortgage decrees passed before the new Code came into operation must be regarded in the nature of preliminary decrees and that, therefore, it would be necessary to have a final decree passed before there can be any further execution.

The fact that the application that was made after the new Code came into operation did not pray expressly for a final decree but asked for execution, could not affect the decree which was already in force and alter its nature.

To a case of this kind S. 48 of the new Civil Procedure Code applies and the decree-holder would be entitled to get an order absolute for sale within a period of 12 years from the date of the decree (a).

Art. 182 of the Limitation Act and not Art. 181 governs such a case. If the application for execution is made within 12 years of the decree and 3 years from the date of the last application, it is not barred by limitation. Balaji Rao v. Harirama Chetty, 32 Ind. Cas. 39.

Moore, J.—The property of a deceased Rajah must be regarded as assets in the hands of his legal representative for the purpose of S. 50, Civ. Pro. Code (a).

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

Where a decree is passed against a party as the legal representative of a deceased person, it is for the decree-holder in the first instance to prove that some assets came to the legal representative, and the onus is then shifted on the latter to show how the assets were applied. Once it is admitted or proved that the legal representative has come into possession of assets belonging to the estate of the deceased, it is for him to satisfy the Court as to the extent of the assets received and to account for them (b).

The rents and profits received by him are assets just as much as the real estate and the legal representative is bound to account also for the same (c).

The earlier part of S. 101, Transfer of Property Act, states the doctrine of merger. An extinguishment of the debt will ordinarily take place, where the mortgagee becomes also absolute owner of the equity of redemption, for then the equitable estate becomes merged in the legal. The effect of the proviso to the section which states the exception to the rule of merger, is (1) to enable the person in whom the two titles are united to keep the incumbrance alive, and (2) to declare that the incumbrance should continue to subsist, where the result would be for his benefit. Ordinarily the only object and advantage of keeping an incumbrance alive is that it may be used against the holder of a subsequent incumbrance (d).

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—The doctrine that a widow could, by her conduct, treat the savings out of the income of her husband's estate as her separate property and that then it would become property at her absolute disposal so that her alienations thereof could not be questioned by her husband's reversioners, cannot be extended so as to give her the right to treat all the income as her absolute property not available to her husband's creditors (e).

Moore, J.—A mere right to future maintenance is not liable to attachment and sale. The prohibition contained in S. 60 (n), Civ. Pro. Code, is presumably based on grounds of public policy (a).

A receiver cannot be appointed in execution to collect the future maintenance and apply it in satisfaction of the decree.

S. 51 (d), Civ. Pro. Code, merely declares in general terms the powers of a Court to enforce execution, one of which is by the appointment of a receiver. R. 1 of O. XL of the Civ. Pro. Code gives power only to that Court, in which the suit is brought or by which the property has been attached, to appoint a receiver. The said right to receive future maintenance is not property and cannot be attached.

The maintenance allowance granted in this case is 'not a 'debt.' A debt must be specific, existing and definite, and not merely a sum of money which may or may not become payable at some future time, and the payment of which depends upon contingencies which may or may not happen (b).

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—Whatever the law in England, Courts in India are bound by the Transfer of Property Act, the clear implication of S. 6, cls. (d) and (h) of that Act being that a right to receive future maintenance cannot be validly alienated. A transfer not recognised by the Transfer of Property Act as legally effective cannot create any right in the alleged transferee (c). Falikandy Mammad v.

A sale held in contravention of the first clause of S. 63 is not a nullity, but is merely irregular.

More notice of an attachment by a superior Court to the Court which ordered the sale cannot oust the jurisdiction and the sale cannot be treated as a nullity (a)

The title of a purchaser at a Court sale, not himself in fault cannot be impaired at law nor in equity by showing any mere error or irregularity in the proceedings. Errors and irregularities must be corrected by a direct proceeding. If not so corrected they cannot be made available by way of collateral attack on the purchaser's title.

There cannot be a collateral impeachment of a Court sale and a direct impeachment is possible only to the parties to the proceedings or persons interested therein in the manner prescribed by the Code. Persons not parties to such proceedings cannot impeach a Court sale merely on the ground that the sale was in contravention of S. 63 of the Code (b). Narayanan Nambudri v. Tawker J. The objects of S. 64 is clearly to prevent fraud on decree-holders and to secure intact the rights of attaching creditors as well as of creditors who have obtained their decree and are entitled to satisfaction out of the assets of the judgment-debtor, and it is immaterial whether their decree had or had not been passed before the time when the transfer was effected. Kali Kumar Saha v. A purchase made of property while it was under attachment is void, within the meaning of S. 64, Civ. Pro. No relief can be given to him in respect of any right accruing to him out of a purchase which is in itself void.

An attachment of immoveable property is complete if the procedure contemplated in O. XXI, r. 54, is adopted.

An entry in the Touzi Register is no part of the procedure contemplated in O. XXI, r. 54. It is sufficient that the attachment was (142-a) S. 64 and O. XXI, r. 54—Attachment in execution—Transfer of Property after attachment—Equities between decree-holder and auction-purchaser.

The object of S. 274, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, corresponding to O. XXI, r. 54, of the present Code in describing particular ways for notifying the attachment is to give notice to the judgment-debtor not to alienate the property and to the public not to accept any alienation from him. As between the decree-holder and auction-purchaser the failure to issue such a notice may or may not be a mere irregularity, but as between the decree-holder or auction-purchaser on the one hand and an alienee on the other, different equities would come into operation, if no prohibitory order is issued to the judgment-debtor, prohibiting him from transferring the property (a).

An alienation effected during an attachment is only voidable at the instance of the decree-holder. But if the decree-holder does not choose to avoid it and expressly permits it to be notified at the time of the sale, he cannot be allowed subsequently to plead its invalidity owing to its having been effected during the attachment. Lala Bhagwan Das v. The effect of S. 64 of the Code is not to invalidate for all purposes the transfer of property which has been previously attached. The effect is of a limited character. A private alienation of the property after attachment is not null and void against all the world, but only against the creditor who obtained the attachment.

When an application is made in conformity with r. 89 of O. XXI of the Code, it cannot be said that any question arises as to a claim enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of S. 64. Therefore a transferee of the property attached in execution of a decree may apply under O. XXI, r. 89 of the Code for setting aside the sale on payment of the amount specified in the rule. Gosta Behari

The object of provisions in S. 64 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to secure to the creditor protection of his rights obtained by the attachment against all subsequent acts of his debtor which may imperil his obtaining the fruits of his decree through the attachment which has been effected. A creditor can only attach the right, title and interest of his debtor at the date of attachment, and he has no ground for complaining if prior to his attachment the debtor has created an obligation against him touching the property.

The provision in O. XXXVIII, r. 10 of the Code is not limited to rights in rem.

A conveyance, therefore, of a property executed after its attachment before judgment by a creditor, in pursuance of a contract dated before the attachment, should prevail, inasmuch as it was merely carrying out an obligation which was incurred prior to the attachment. Madan Mohan De Sarkar v. No suit lies for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to certain properties on the ground that they had been purchased by the defendant in a Court sale benami for the plaintiff and that the defendant had no right at all in those properties, even though the defendant has subsequent to the purchase, recognised the title of the plaintiff. S. 66 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, is merely declaratory of the real meaning of S. 317 of the Code of 1882 (a).

A document whereby a benami purchaser at a Court auction renounces his claim to the property purchased without conveying any title thereto is a release deed pure and simple and not an assignment of the rights of the releasor, and a person claiming under such a document cannot be regarded as himself the purchaser by 'the purchase certified by the Court' treating the name of the benamidar as a mere alias for him.

The principle of the decision in 35 C. 551 is not applicable to transactions in which the law requires the name of the actual purchaser to be certified in a document by the Court.

O. XXI, r. 94, and S. 66, Civ. Pro. Code, cannot be construed in different ways.

S. 66, Civ. Pro. Code, does not apply to cases of contest between two persons, each claiming to be the real beneficiary under an admittedly benami Court auction-purchase.

An order passed by a Magistrate under S. 144, Crim. Pro. Code, is not conclusive as to possession and is no bar to a suit for confirmation of possession instituted before such order is served upon the plaintiff. Ramaswami Aiyar v. Yenkapallur, 8 L.W. 233—(1916) M.W.N. 184—33 Ind. Cas. 1000.

An order under S. 78, Civ. Pro. Code, ordinarily embodies expressly or impliedly that (1) the application of the creditor is generally valid, (2) that fund in Court is available towards satisfying his claim, and (3) he is entitled to a particular portion of it.

When the objection to the order under S. 78 is based on the invalidity of the execution application or on the character of the fund in Court, the question is between the judgment-debtor and individual creditors, not the creditors as a body, and the decision on it is really given under S. 47 although ostensibly under S. 78 and an appeal lies thereon.

Where, therefore, the 1st Court rejected a claim for rateable distribution on the ground that the fund in Court belonged to the judgment-debtor as a separated member while the decree was against his family property.

(154) S. 78, O. XXI, r. 65—Consent decrees—Execution sale—Auctioneer nominees of parties—Purchase-money received by auctioneer whether "receipt of assets"—Rateable distribution.

A consent order is a mere creature of agreement and carries out the agreement between the parties. It is nevertheless an order of the Court and possesses one at least of the essential characteristics of an order made by a Court of justice, namely, it is an order capable of execution by the Court(a).

The employment of agents for the conduct of an execution sale is clearly contemplated by r. 65 of O. XXI of C.P.C. The fact that the Court appoints a nominee of the parties to a consent decree to conduct the sale without attachment and notice does not render it the less a sale by Court(b).

When a sale has been held by a Court in execution under O. XXI, r. 65, receipt of purchase-money by the agent is, for purposes of S. 78, equivalent to receipt of assets by the Court.

The policy which underlies S. 78 obviously is to fix the point of time when the entire body of persons entitled to claim rateable distribution should be finally ascertained; that point of time is the moment when the entire purchase-money has been paid by purchaser. It is immaterial whether the purchase-money has been actually paid into the treasury or into the hands of a person employed by the Court to hold the sale. John Caraplet Galstann v. ~ The plaintiff gave a notice of suit to Government under S. 80 of the Civ. Pro. Code on the 2nd May 1912. In the meanwhile, the Mamlatdar threatened to demolish the property which was the subject-matter of the suit. The plaintiff, thereupon, filed the suit on the 19th June 1912, praying for a declaration that a piece of land in front of his house belonged to him and for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with his enjoyment of it. It was objected that the suit was bad as having been brought within two months from the date of the notice.

Held, that the suit was not barred by the provisions of S. 80 of the Civ. Pro. ~ During the pendency of a suit, the parties to it referred the matters in dispute between them to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. The award having been delivered, the plaintiff applied to the Court, under O. XXIII, r. 3, to record the award and to pass a decree in accordance therewith. The defendant disputed the legality of the award on the grounds (1) that the arbitrators had exceeded their jurisdiction and (2) that they had refused an opportunity to the defendant to call witnesses:

Held, that the plaintiff had adopted a wrong procedure in applying under O. XXIII, r. 3; that he was bound to apply to the Court under second schedule to the Civ. Pro. Code, and that on such an application the defendant was entitled to raise his objections and be heard upon them.

O. XXIII, r. 3, only refers to the adjustments of suits wholly or in part by any lawful agreement or compromise.

No application can be made to obtain a decree on an award except as provided for in S. 89 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Under S. 89, the provisions of the second schedule govern all arbitrations in a suit or otherwise except such arbitrations as are specially excluded. An arbitration between the parties to a suit without an order of the Court has not been excluded and must, therefore, come under the provisions which deal with arbitration without the intervention of the Court. *Shavaksha Dinsha Davar v. cumulative—Court's power to frame a scheme, limitation to.

A Court has power to frame a scheme in respect of a temple subject to the superintendence of a Temple Committee.

The English and Indian authorities bearing on the question considered.

A statutory body does not become functus Officio by reason of changes in its constitution (a).

Per Wallis, C. J.—The effect of Ss. 3 and 7 to 12 of Act XX of 1863 is to transfer to the Temple Committee the powers exercised by the Board of Revenue under Reg. VII of 1817 in the case of temples in which the nomination of the Trustee, Manager, or Superintendent was vested in, or subject to the confirmation of Government, Ss. 4 to 6 dealing with cases in which the right of appointment was not vested in the Government.

Ss. 14 and 18 of Act XX of 1863 do not empower the Court to frame a scheme for the management of the temple affairs (b).

It was clearly the intention of the Legislature that the extensive powers conferred on the Board of Revenue by Reg. VII of 1817 should, after the enactment of Act XX of 1863, be exercised by the Temple Committees. Courts should therefore be very slow to construe the latter Act in such a manner as to impede the due exercise of those powers.

By merely making one of the trusteeships in a temple hereditary, the Board of Revenue did not deprive itself of its authority to appoint additional trustees.

A temple managed by three trustees, one of whom is hereditary and the other two nominated by the Temple Committee, falls under S. 3 of Act XX of 1863.

In the case of temples managed by a statutory body, the Court is entitled to assist that body and introduce certain changes which it is not open to that body to introduce or which are admitted by them to be desirable (c).

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—It is not competent to the Board of Revenue under Reg. VII of 1817 to divest themselves of all responsibility for management by handing over the affairs of a Devasthanam to hereditary trustees.

The remedy by suit given to the public under S. 14 of Act XX of 1863 is not exhaustive but only a limited right and does not interfere with the general right of the subject under S. 92, Crim. Pro. Code. The two remedies are cumulative.

The power of settling a scheme is not within the competence of the Temple Committee. A Civil Court alone has this power and the jurisdiction of the Civil Court has not been ousted by the creation of the Temple Committee. In formulating the scheme, however, Courts should not unduly interfere with the powers entrusted to Committees.

It cannot be said that a Court has no power to frame a scheme simply because a statutory body had certain powers conferred upon it suited to the exigencies of the situation at the time of the creation of that body. It would be disastrous in this country if Courts were to refuse to intervene on the ground that a statutory body has been created to exercise supervision over the trust.

The powers delegated to the Board under Reg. VII of 1917 and on Temple Committees under Act XX of 1863 are analogous to those of visitors in England.

Nature of visitatorial powers considered. Sitharama Chetty v. Ramanujam Chetty, 3 L.W. 43=80 M.L.J. 29=19 M.L.T. 25=32 Ind. Cas. 211=39 M. 700.

(164) S. 92—Administration suit—Suit by one executor against another to take account—Suit triable by the Subordinate Judge—If questions relating to charitable bequests should arise, directions could be taken by Advocate-General or the Collector from the District Court—Practice and Procedure.

One of the executors appointed by a will sued his co-executor in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the First Class, praying that the defendant should be held responsible for all sums of money lent by him to his friends and relations or proved to have been mismanaged during the period of his sole management, and for a permanent injunction restraining the defendant from managing without the consent of the plaintiff and from preventing the plaintiff from managing. The Subordinate Judge found that the property under the will was worth about Rs. 89,500 out of which private legacies amounted to Rs. 19,500 and the rest Rs. 70,000 were to be used for purely charitable and religious purposes. He, therefore, held that the suit should have been brought under the provisions of S. 92 of the Civ. Pro. Code, into the District Court, and dismissed the same. On appeal, the Joint Judge held that the suit was properly brought in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge and sent it back for trial on the merits. The defendant having appealed:

Held, that the suit having been a general administration suit brought by one trustee against another with whose conduct he was dissatisfied, was one which could be entertained by the Subordinate Judge of the First Class.

Per Curiam.—"If any question relating to charitable bequests should arise in the present case before the Subordinate Judge, his proper course would be to give notice to the Advocate-General in order that that officer might decide whether any action should be taken under S. 92 of the Civ. Pro. Code in order to get any of the specific relief referred to in that section. It would be quite possible for the Subordinate Judge to continue the administration of the estate up to the point of separating the funds appropriated for particular charities as to which schemes would have to be framed, and holding these funds in the possession of a Receiver until the Advocate-General or the

The first settlement of the Nattukkottai Chetties in the Madura District was at "Ilayathakudi" and the term "Ilayathakudi Nagarthars" comprises the whole community of Nattukkottai Chetties.

The several branches of the Nattukkottai Chetty community are each known by the name of the temple to which it is particularly attached and the term "Ilayathakudi Kovil Nagarthars" comprises those families only whose principal place of worship is at Ilayathakudi.

The grant of Inam lands to a temple is strong evidence of its public character (a).

Where an ancient temple whose founder was not known, was shown to have been in possession of large Inam grants from the pre-British Sovereigns, and was open to public worship, and the rites and ceremonies observed in it were the same as those observed in admittedly public temples and where it was also shown that a temple subsidiary to the suit temple was admittedly a public temple and the funds of the two were mixed up.

Held (1) that the temple was a public temple,

(2) that private ownership of such a temple should be strictly proved, and

(3) that the action of the managers of the temple in excluding two local zamindars who had quarrels about property with the temple was no sufficient proof that the temple was private.

A caste or section of a caste can own a temple (b).

S. 589, Civ. Pro. Code (XIV of 1882), is applicable to a temple which is the subject of a public charitable trust even though managed by a caste (c) & (d).

A particular section of a caste which consists of several families not shown to be otherwise than very distinctly related to one another is a section of the public within the meaning of S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code.

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

The facts (1) that the Nattukkottai Chetties levied a poll-tax among themselves and added largely to the income of the temple, (2) that the temple was used for the public meetings of the caste and (3) that the funds of the temple were spent on buildings and other expenditure on behalf of the caste are no evidence that the temple is private property.

The past user of a temple is not binding on the Court framing a scheme under S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, but in framing a scheme, the past user may well be taken into consideration and need be departed from only wherever necessary.

V and others, the reversioners of a deceased Hindu, who claim to be entitled to the office of the trustee of certain public charitable trust, instituted a suit for a declaration that they are the present trustees of the endowment and as such, entitled to conduct the charities, that the alienation made by the widow of the last male holder of the office in favour of others is void and does not affect their rights. The plaint also contained a prayer that, if necessary, the widow may be removed from her office of the trustee and also one for possession of the properties, account books, etc. Held that the suit could not be maintained without the sanction required by S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908 (a).

The alienation of the office by the widow, though a breach of trust, did not create a vacancy in the office.

Until the widow is removed from the office, the plaintiffs have no right to get in. There was no vacancy at the date of suit. Therefore the present suit is one for the removal of an existing trustee and must be brought with the sanction of the Advocate-General as required by S. 92, cl. (2), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, and not otherwise.

The mere fact that the plaintiffs claim a right to the office of trustee cannot be said to bar the application of S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code. Mullangi Venkatasubamma v. Mullangi Venkatarangam Chetty, 31 M.L.J. 280—4 L.W. 264—36 Ind. Cas. 878.

Although under S. 589 of the Code of Civil Procedure there was a difference of opinion whether in a suit brought under that section sanction should not also be obtained under S. 14 of Act XX of 1863, these doubts have been set at rest by S. 92 of the new Code, as sub-cl. (9) makes it clear that the provisions of the section are mandatory and that no suit could be brought for any of the reliefs specified in the section except under the conditions laid down in the section, saving at the same time the jurisdiction of the District Courts under the Religious Endowments Act.

S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, and S. 14 of Act XX of 1863 are not mutually exclusive. A plaintiff has an option to bring his suit under either section for any relief common to both (a).

Under S. 92, the alienees were not necessary parties, and in a suit like the present no relief can be granted as against them. Subramania Aiyar v. Venkatachala Vadhyar, (1916) 2 M. W.N. 351—4 L.W. 444.

Pro. Code, revision under, of decree for costs.*

Where the plaintiffs' suit is dismissed for want of cause of action, the defendant has no right of appeal against some findings of fact which are not in his favour (a).

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

It has generally been the practice of the District Courts to enquire first into the question whether the trust is a public trust or not and this is probably a convenient course. Under S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code, no cause of action arises save in a case of alleged breach of a trust for a public purpose or where the directions of Court are deemed necessary for the administration of such trust.

Where the plaintiffs after obtaining sanction from the Advocate General instituted a suit against the defendant for his removal from the management of a trust which was alleged by the plaintiffs to be a public trust and the defence was that the trust was not a public trust and that there was no misfeasance and the District Judge found that the trust was indeed a public trust but that the defendant had not been guilty of misfeasance and so dis-mitted the suit for want of cause of action with costs to be paid out of the trust estate to the plaintiffs because the defence was that the trust was not a public trust

Held—that when the Judge has come to the decision that there was no cause of action for the suit he could not record a decision binding on the parties that the trust was a public trust and he could not make an order for the pay-ment of costs from the estate as a public trust.

Held further, that the order for costs out of the estate was without jurisdiction within the meaning of S 115, Civ Pro. Code Brij Behari Lal v Shivanath Prasad, 20 O.W.N. 1954—35 Ind Cas. 337.

Where the defendant in a suit failed to appear on the adjourned date of hearing, it is the duty of the Court to hear sufficient evidence on the plaintiff's side to justify the granting of the relief claimed and pressed for. After the passing of the decree the defendant is entitled to apply to the Court which passed the decree for an order setting it aside, and that is his only remedy, though he may challenge the decree by way of appeal upon the ground that the evidence which the plaintiff had adduced was not sufficient to justify the decree. But in such appeal the defendant cannot go into any question connected with his non-appearance at the hearing. The defendant is not entitled to have the remedy by way of application for restoration in the first Court together with a right to raise the same question by appeal against the decree itself. *Mussamat Hummi v. (191) S. 100—Practice—Taking up big original suits after 5-30 p.m.—Prejudice.

A District Munsif called a big original suit pending on his file after 5-30 P.M. one day, and as the defendants were absent, he examined one witness for the plaintiff and gave him a decree. This decree was upheld on appeal. In second appeal it was contended by the defendants on the strength of an affidavit filed by them that they were ready to go on with the case that day, and waited in Court till 5-30 P.M., that they were then told by their vakil that there was no likelihood of their case being taken up that day and that they might go home, that on the strength of that assurance they had gone home, that in their absence the case was called, that their vakil then represented the above facts to the Court as also his inability to cross-examine the plaintiff's witness and an adjournment was prayed for which however was refused and that in consequence they were prejudiced in the conduct of the case. The plaintiff filed a counter-affidavit by his vakil in the Court of First Instance that it was usual for the District Munsif to take up big original suits only after 5-30 P.M., that the defendants had no witnesses ready that day and had told him at an earlier hour of the day that they were going to apply for an adjournment but that he was not aware of the circumstances under which the defendants left the Court-house that day.

Held that, though it was very irregular on the part of a Court to take up for trial and dispose of heavy original suits at that late hour, and though such a practice was neither fair to the parties nor to the witnesses nor to the Court itself or anybody else, and a Court in doing so would not be acting in the best interests of justice, in the present case, having regard to the fact that the defendants were not ready to go on with the case and had not instructed their vakil to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses, and having further regard to the circumstance that they had not filed any affidavit before the lower appellate Court explaining the facts and showing how they were prejudiced, this was not a matter in which the High Court would interfere in second appeal. *Muruga Pillai v. Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

Under the Code of 1908 the powers of a Court of appeal are much wider in respect of remand than the powers of a Court of appeal under the Code of 1883. An appellate Court has power to remand a case even when it has been decided on merits and is not restricted to the disposal of a case on a preliminary issue. Where important questions were disallowed during the examination of the witnesses and as such there was no proper trial of the case in the Court of first instance it is competent to the Court of appeal to remand the case. *Suthir Bala Dutta v. (210) S. 107, O. XLI, rr. 23 and 25—Appeal Court if may remand cases otherwise than under—Addition of parties on appeal and amendment of plaint, if justify remand.

The appellate Court has power to amend a plaint by adding new parties, and when this has been done, the added as well as the original defendants have a right to file fresh written statements and to have the whole case reopened. In such circumstances the appellate Court has power to remand the case for trial, independently of rr. 23 and 25 of O. XLI of the Civ. Pro. Code.

The general power, given by S. 107 of the Code to the appellate Court, of remanding cases for trial by the original Court, is not governed or limited by O. XLI alone, but it is subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed in the Rules and Orders, and the amendment of a plaint and addition of parties in a Court of appeal is one of the conditions prescribed in the Rules and Orders. *Miah Uzir Ali Sardar v. (211) S. 107 (1) (b) and (2), O. XLI, r. 23—Scheme and arrangement of the Code—Lower appellate Court—Powers of reversal and remand—Remand on preliminary point.

The Code consists (1) of that which is termed "the body of the Code," and (2) of the Rules.

The body of the Code is fundamental and is unalterable except by the Legislature; the rules are concerned with details and machinery and can be more readily altered. Thus the body of the Code creates jurisdiction while the rules indicate the mode in which it is to be exercised. It follows that the body of the Code is expressed in more general terms, but it has to be read in conjunction with the more particular provisions of the Rules.

S. 107 (1) (b) Civ. Pro. Code, is subject to the conditions and limitations prescribed by the Rules. In the case of a lower appellate Court, the power of reversal and remand is limited to the position described in O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code. Mani Mohan Mandal v. Ramtaran Mandal, 43 C. 148—38 Ind. The plaintiff brought a suit for declaration and injunction in the Court of the First-class Subordinate Judge at Broach, valuing his claim at Rs. 135. The case was later on transferred to the Court of the joint Second-class Subordinate Judge. The claim was decreed by both the lower Courts; but it was dismissed by the High Court. The plaintiff having applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council, the defendant contended that, as the plaintiff had elected to value his suit at Rs. 135 and conducted it in the Court of the Second-class Subordinate Judge, the limit of whose pecuniary jurisdiction was Rs. 5,000, he could not contend that the subject-matter of the suit was worth Rs. 10,000:

Held, overruling the contention, that the claim being one for declaration and injunction, the plaintiff, by suing in the Second-class Subordinate Judge's Court, seemed to have made neither directly nor indirectly any sort of representation to the defendant as to the real or market value of the property to be affected, as distinguished from the fiscal value which, as the law allowed him to do, he placed upon the relief which he was seeking. *Mohanlal Nagji v. The fact that the plaintiff valued his suit in the Court of the first instance at a sum less than Rs. 10,000 and paid Court-fees accordingly, does not debar him from raising the point that the property which is in dispute in the appeal to His Majesty in Council is in fact valued at more than that sum. (231) S. 115—Crim. Pro. Code, S. 476—Proceedings taken while a suit is pending—If material irregularity

Where in the course of a civil suit before the District Munsif, the petitioner made a statement which the Court has reason to believe to be untrue as it contradicted a statement made by him in its presence before the case was taken up and the Court proceeded against him under S. 476 immediately after the statement was made without waiting for the completion of civil suit.

Held, per Sadasiva Iyer and Oldfield, J.J., (Seshagiri Iyer, J. contra): That the Court was not bound to wait till substantive proceedings were over before it could initiate action under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, and that its failure to do so did not constitute material irregularity in the exercise of its jurisdiction under S. 115 (c) of the Civ. Pro. Code.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, proceedings must be taken at or immediately after the termination of the trial of the suit or case and the action taken before the suit is closed although not without jurisdiction is a material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction.

Per Oldfield, J.—An accused is not entitled as of right to insist on all his evidence being taken in the substantive proceeding, before sanction is granted against him. And there is nothing in the wording of S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, inconsistent with this conclusion.

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—The words of S. 476 are very wide and an order under it may be based on materials which have not been strictly made legal evidence.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Before a person is asked to stand his trial, it must be fairly clear to the sanctioning authority that there is a probability of a conviction being had. Klug-Emperor v. Code, if lies—Erroneous application of section of law, if open to revision under S. 115, Civ. Pro. Code.

In a suit for dissolution of partnership and for accounts, the plaintiffs, having received a large sum of money from some of the defendants, filed a compromise petition and asked for dismissal of the suit. The other defendants objected to the dismissal of the suit, praying that they might be made plaintiffs and allowed to continue the suit, and the plaintiffs, if necessary, might be made defendants. The Court held that it had no power under the new Civ. Pro. Code to make the transposition of parties asked for, and hence dismissed the suit for non-prosecution. The objecting defendants then asked the Court to draw up a decree so that they might appeal, but the Court did not draw up any decree.

Held—That the Court had ample powers under the new Civ. Pro. Code to make transposition of parties and it ought to have done that.

That it was not bound to pass a decree under O. XXIII, r. 3, and no appeal lies against the order of dismissal.

That the lower Court, having failed to exercise the discretion vested in it under O. I, r. 10, failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in it in refusing to make the transposition prayed for, and hence that order is liable to be set aside on revision by the High Court. Brojendra Kumar Das v. Mere payment without an application under O. XXI, r. 89 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside the sale is not sufficient (a).

It is, however, not necessary that the application to set aside the sale should be in writing. An oral application is sufficient (b).

Where a person with the object of setting the sale puts in a petition stating that he has paid the money into the treasury and the petition contains no formal prayer to set aside the sale, there is nothing to prevent the Court from allowing the petitioner to amend the petition by adding a formal prayer (c).

The High Court will not in a petition filed under S. 115 of the Civ. Pro. Code allow an unstamped memorandum, filed under the Civil Rules of Practice to notify a payment, to be stamped as a petition and to be amended by containing prayers to set aside the sale under O. S. 144, Civ. Pro. Code, is very wide in its terms and is not confined to cases where restitution is claimed on the reversal of a decree in first or second appeal. Provided the decree is varied or reversed, the section applies, however the reversal or variance has been effected (a).

A transferee of a money-decree having applied for the recognition of the transfer and for permission to execute the decree, the judgment-debtors appeared and opposed the same. The objections were, however, overruled and the transfer recognised, with the result that a sum of Rs. 315-14-4 was realised from the judgment-debtors. After the objections had been overruled and before the realisation of the decree amount, the judgment-debtors had filed a suit for a declaration that the transfer was invalid and for an injunction to restrain the execution of the decree and, the taking out of the decree amount which had been deposited in Court. This suit was eventually decreed in favour of the judgment-debtors. The latter then applied in execution to recover from the transferee-decree-holder the amount which had been received by him from the Court in execution of his decree together with interest thereon.

Held, that the order recognising the transfer and allowing execution to proceed which determined a question arising between the judgment-debtor and the representative of the decree-holder was a decree, that the said order was superseded by the decree in the subsequent suit, that the order for payment to the transferee-decree-holder in execution of the first decree and the receipt of money by him in pursuance of that order were in fact superseded by the decree for injunction granted in the second suit, and that consequently S. 144, Civ. Pro. Code, applied to the case, and the judgment-debtors were entitled to restitution. Subbarayudu v. Senhasani, 3 L.W. 236=(1916) M.W.N. 155=19 M.L.T. 236=80 M.L.J. 366=88 Ind. Cas. 739.

Appellants obtained an ex parte decree for rent against the respondents in execution of which they caused the respondents' holding to be put up for sale and purchased it themselves. Subsequently the ex parte decree was set aside, but in the meantime the appellants had been placed in possession and they had reaped the crops on the land.

Respondents filed this suit for the value of the crops taken by the appellants during the time they had possession of the holding. There was no formal prayer that the execution sale may be set aside. It was contended that the suit was barred by Ss. 47 and 144, Civ. Pro. Code.

Held that the words "Court of first instance" show clearly that S. 144 is intended to be confined to cases in which the decree has been varied or reversed by some superior Court or by reason of some order passed by a superior Court. The words "Court of first instance" seem to be used to distinguish the Court which is to grant the restitution from some other Court which has varied or reversed the decree. The suit is not barred by S. 144, Civ. Pro. Code.

Held also that the auction-purchaser being the decree-holder himself, the sale must, as a matter of course, be set aside at the instance of the judgment-debtor, and, the proper course for the present plaintiff respondent to pursue was to present an application under S. 47, Civ. Pro. Code. The High Court accordingly treated the plaint in the present suit as an application under S. 47 and upheld the decree passed by the lower Courts in favour of the respondent. *Chintaman Singh v. Held, that S. 152 of Act V of 1908 is wide enough to enable a Judge to avoid reductio ad absurdum. So, where the time allowed in the judgment and decree to the vendee for removing his materials of the building erected by him on the pre-empted site had expired long before the date of the decision and had consequently become impracticable for him to do so, the Chief Court on an application made by the vendee under Ss. 151, 152 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, amended both the judgment and the decree so as to fix fresh period within which the vendee could remove his materials.

Held, also, that where a vendee by his act or omission deprives the pre-emptor both of the use of the pre-emption, money and the pre-empted property the pre-emptor is entitled to get reasonable interest for the time he is so deprived. In this case 6 per cent. per annum was allowed. Musammatt Bardar Begam v. Jhanda Mal, 170 P.W.R. 1916.

XLVII, r. 1—Scope of—Decree in conformity with judgment—Courts, if can amend decree—Judgment patently erroneous in law, if affects power of amendment—Party, if can apply in execution for amending or correcting judgment and decree—Amendment petition treated as a review.

A Court has no power to vary or amend a decree, when it is in conformity with the judgment, not even if the judgment is erroneous in law, and even if the error be apparent on the face of the judgment.

A party to a suit, who has not appealed against a decree or applied for review of judgment, cannot be allowed in execution proceedings to contend that the judgment and decree are erroneous and to ask that they should be amended or corrected.

In a partition suit, the matters in dispute were referred to arbitration and it was provided that the costs of the parties should be deducted and paid out of the 'raasi amount', i.e., the joint family funds. The interim decree, embodying the terms of the award, was silent as to costs. The final decree, however, directed that defendants should pay the plaintiffs 2 to 4 their costs. The defendants did not appeal against this decree and the plaintiffs, thereupon, applied for execution of the decree as to costs. Some of the defendants then presented petitions under Ss. 151, 152 and 153 and O. XX, r. 6, Civ. Pro. Code, praying that the direction as to payment of costs might be expunged from the decree as it was not found in the award. The Subordinate Judge who heard all the applications together found that the costs incurred by the plaintiff had already been fully paid up and struck out the direction in the decree regarding the payment of costs.

Held, that none of the sections applied to the case and that the order was illegal and ought to be set aside.

The application was, however in the circumstances of the case, allowed to be treated as a review petition and deficient stamp allowed to be paid in the High Court. Tadepalli Pit-chayya v. Tadepalli Subba Rao, 8 L.W. 499.

The original Court passed a decree excluding certain properties claimed by the plaintiff, but upon an application made by him under Ss. 151 and 152, Civ. Pro. Code, the Court modified the decree by including those properties therein. The defendant appealed, but the appellate Court being of opinion that no appeal lay against an order passed under these sections, a reference was made to the Chief Court for orders as to what should be the procedure to be followed in the case.

Held, that under r. 1, O. XLVI, Civ. Pro. Code, the reference was not competent. The object of the aforesaid sections is to supplement and not to replace the remedy provided for in the rest of the Code. The remedy open in this case was one of review of the judgment. Labbhu Ram v. Amir Chand, 73 P.L.R. 1916—105 P.W.R. 1916—35 Ind. Cas. 698.

(302) O. I, r. 8—Suit by plaintiffs as representing a caste section—Meeting of the caste for authorising plaintiffs—Meeting not regularly convened—A number of caste people supporting plaintiff's action subsequent to suit cannot validate the action.

The Dasa Lad Banias of Broach were divided into two sections, known as the Mojumpurias and Sheherias. The headman of the whole caste was defendant No. 1 who collected fees of both the sections separately and entered them in separate account-books. The plaintiffs filed the present suit against defendant No. 1 under

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

O. I, r. 8, for taking accounts from defendant No. 1 and recovering from him the amount that might be found due on such accounts being taken. At a meeting of the Mojumpuria section, the plaintiffs were authorized to bring the suit. The meeting was, it appeared, irregularly convened. Subsequent to the filing of the suit, 112 out of 183 members of the Mojumpuria section expressed their adherence to the position which the plaintiffs were adopting; while 70 members supported defendant No. 1. The trial Court granted both reliefs; but the District Judge granted only the relief as to taking of accounts. On second appeal, Held, (1) that the plaintiffs could not, under O. I, r. 8 of the Civ. Pro. Code, sue on behalf of those numerous members of the Mojumpuria section who were in diametrical opposition to them in the present controversy.

(2) That it was not possible to call in aid the private expressions of consent obtained after suit filed, so as to supply that authority which was admittedly lacking at the time when the suit was in fact filed.

(303) O. I, r. 8—Dedication of land—Purchase by a community—Conveyance of property to pujari of temple for management—Right of community to assert right against pujari's heir claiming property as his own—Proper form of decrees.

A section of the Hindu community raised money for the purchase of a plot of land for the erection of a temple thereon. The property so purchased was dedicated for religious service and entrusted to a member of the community as pujari of the temple: On the death of the pujari the defendant alleging himself to be his heir claimed the temple and its site as his own. Thereupon the plaintiffs having applied to the Court under O. I, r. 8, to be appointed to represent the community, leave was given to them by the Court as required by law. They claimed in the suit that the temple and its site was a religious charitable trust belonging to the members of their community and prayed for an injunction against the defendant. Held that in the circumstances of the case the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain an action against the defendant who set up a title in himself and for a declaration that the property belonged to them (a).

The decree that should be passed in the suit must be that the plaintiffs were entitled to a declaration that the property was a public, religious and charitable trust, and that the defendant had no right or title thereto whatsoever, but was a mere trespasser. The plaintiff was further entitled to an injunction restraining the defendant from interfering with the property in question. Sukhdeo Prasad v. Gopal Misra, 86 Ind. Cas. 976.

(305) O. I, r. 9—Scope and application of—Want of proper parties to suit—Dismissal of suit.

O. I, r. 9, only applies to cases where relief can be given if the necessary parties are joined and the application is within time; but, it has no application to cases where the parties to be joined are barred in the assertion of their rights. If they are barred, then the Court, even though it may join them, can give no relief at all, and the action consequently must be dismissed (a).

If a plaintiff proceeds to trial to recover property which is the joint property of two or more persons, and he omits to join all proper and necessary parties, and if when the case comes to trial, the rights of those who ought to be added as parties to the suit are barred by limitation, then the Court has no alternative but to dismiss the application for want of proper or defective joinder of parties.

"If a necessary party is not on the record, the proper course is to apply to have him joined. If he is not brought on the record at all, or if, when he is brought on the record, the suit as against him is barred by limitation, the whole suit will be dismissed." *Bhagelu Koer v. One Tukaram having died in 1901, his widow Bhagirathi sold in January 1906, two of his fields, Survey Nos. 403 and 404, to Dagdu, and one field, Survey No. 324, to Zagdu. Dagdu, Zagdu and Ukardu were brothers joint in estate. Bhagirathi died in 1909. In 1910, Bahini, a daughter of Tukaram, claiming to be entitled to her father's estate, filed a suit against her sister Tapi and Zagdu to recover possession of Survey No. 324. The suit was dismissed at Bahini's request. Bahini then having sold her right in Survey Nos. 403, 404 and 324 to the plaintiff, the latter filed a suit to recover possession of the lands against Bahini, Tapi, Dagdu, Zagdu and Ukardu. The lower Courts held that, as Bahini omitted to sue in respect of Survey Nos. 403 and 404 in 1910, the plaintiff was barred, by the Civ. Pro. Code, O. II, r. 2, from preferring his claim to those numbers in the present suit. The plaintiff having appealed:

Held, that the suit was not barred under O. II, r. 2, of the Civ. Pro. Code, inasmuch as the causes of action in the two suits were different, the two sets of facts which required to be proved in both suits in order to enable the

A default having been made, the mortgagee sued for profits only as the land was in possession of third parties. Subsequently the mortgagors came into possession of the land and the mortgagee sued for possession:

Where it appeared from certain leases that the causes of action as regards minimum royalty and excess royalty were the same, but the lessor sued only for the minimum royalty which had fallen due at the date of the suit:

Held, that he was precluded by O. II, r. 2 of the Civ. Pro. Code, from suing again for the excess royalty, even though, in decreeing the previous suit, the Court expressly reserved the plaintiff's cause of action in respect of excess royalty.

O. II, r. 2, sub-r. (8) of the Civ. Pro. Code does not authorize the Court to split up the plaintiff's cause of action, but only to allow the plaintiff to pursue the reliefs in respect of the same cause of action at different times.

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

Where the plaintiff sued for royalties due on a mining lease during a specified period, excluding from his claim certain previous arrears which were also due, on the ground that certain amounts paid by the defendants during the period of suit had been appropriated in discharge of these previous arrears, but the Court held that the payments should have been appropriated in discharge of a portion of the arrears sued for.

Held—that a subsequent suit for the recovery of the arrears excluded from the claim in the previous suit was barred by O. II, r. 2 of the Civ. Pro. Code

Even an accidental or involuntary omission by a plaintiff of a portion of his claim is covered by the rule (a).

The Court would proceed to consolidate suits, if at all, only where the consolidation is asked for before the trial of the suits begins, and the evidence to be given is common to both.

(828) O. II, r. 6—Separate trial—Causes of action essentially of different character.

The case that is contemplated by O. II, r. 6, which authorises the Court to exclude a cause of action and directs a separate trial, is a case where the causes of action joined in the same suit are essentially of different character. In such a case the Judge has the power to direct a separate trial of the two different causes of action.

Plaintiff sued against two classes of defendants; first, against certain persons who were formerly the executors of her husband's will and, secondly, against certain persons who had been constituted as trustees to a certain charity established by her deceased husband under a scheme settled by the District Judge under a compromise entered into between the persons who were the executors and the then guardian of the plaintiff, she being at that time a minor.

The plaintiff alleged that the scheme settled by the District Judge was obtained by fraud and that it was not binding on her. The lower Court excluded the first cause of action from the suit. Held that the facts alleged by the plaintiff arose out of the facts that were common to both the causes of action. Therefore the lower Court was not justified in excluding the first cause of action under the provisions of O. II, r. 6. Nandaram Das v. Hari Charan Gangopadhyaya, 36 Ind. Cas. 29.

The provisions of O. III, r. 4 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, are clear and imperative, and the Courts have no power to relax them.

An act or appearance by any pleader, not duly appointed by the person for whom he is to act, is no act or appearance in law.

"Where a pleader is expressly empowered to employ a colleague to act for or with him he may make the appointment. But if he does so, he must obey O. III, r. 4 (1) of the Civ. Pro. Code. The only exception is that provided by cl. (8) of the same rule. Where a pleader, duly authorised by a power-of-attorney to act in this behalf, appoints a legal practitioner of the classes described in cl. (9) to act for him, the latter is of course not under any obligation to produce written authority. But if the pleader appointing him has no express written authority to appoint a barrister or advocate, the latter cannot legally appear for him. It is desirable that the bar will give special attention to these provisions of the law, and regulate their practice accordingly, so as to avoid such failures of duty and loss to parties as the unauthorized delegation of work must involve." (Per Stanyon, A.J.C.)

In Barar, a practice appears to be growing up among pleaders of orally delegating their duties to one another. This is a form of laxity which cannot be recognized because it is distinctly illegal. It is also obviously irregular: and when it goes to the extent of delegating the important duty of presenting a memorandum of appeal to a pleader not appointed by the appellant, who signs a power not given to him, the procedure borders upon professional misconduct. (Per Stanyon, A.J.C.)

A pleader whose name is omitted from the body of the vakalatnamah is not a duly appointed pleader, and an appeal presented by him is not properly presented, even though the omission might be only due to an oversight. The fact that no objection was taken till a very late stage would not validate the appointment of a pleader which was not made properly (a). Dhannoolal v. Mt. Bajl, 19 N.L.R. 189.

Proper enquiries and real and substantial effort should be made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found, and proper effort made to find the defendant in the place where he ordinarily resides or carries on business (a).

R. 17 of O. VI of the Code of Civil Procedure is in more general terms than the corresponding S. (59) of the Code of 1882. It leaves questions of amendment of pleadings to the discretion of the Court, but the discretion must be exercised in accordance with settled judicial principles.

The general rule is that any amendment allowed must be such as is either raised in the pleadings or is consistent with the case as originally laid; and the state of facts and the equities and grounds of relief originally alleged and pleaded by the plaintiff should not be departed from.

A suit to enforce a mortgagor's right of redemption cannot be amended so as to convert it into a suit to enforce a right as owner. Nauk Te v. Ma Hnin, 9 Bur. L.T. 150 = 8 L.B.R. 418 = 36 Ind. Cas. 5.

In a suit to recover money the plaintiffs sought in their plaint to bring the claim within time by relying on a letter written by the defendants. It was contended by the defendants in their written statement that the suit was "not saved by the letter put in from the bar of limitation." The trial Judge held that; in view of the above state of pleadings the letter must be accepted as proved; and decreed the claim. The lower appellate Court having differed from this view, and reversed the decree, the plaintiffs appealed:

Held, reversing the decree that the trial Court was right in thinking that in the above state of the pleadings, the letter must be accepted as admitted between the parties and therefore unnecessary to be proved. *Laxmi-

Remand, power of High Court as to—Pleadtiff to prove his case in.*

Sanderson, C.J.—The fundamental principle of law is that the plaintiff, when he comes to Court, must prove his case, and he must prove it to the satisfaction of the Court.

Under the Civ. Pro. Code (1908), such proof can be dispensed with and the allegations in the plaint considered as admitted, only in undefended cases of bills of exchange, promissory notes and hundis as contemplated in
O. XXXVII, r. 2 of the Code.

O. VIII, r. 5 of the Code does not apply to undefended cases. It is clear from the wording of that rule that it is only intended to apply to a case where a pleading has been put in by the defendant.

Per Curiam.—O. VIII, r. 5, does not apply where there is no written statement and it does not justify a decree without any evidence where no written statement has been filed.

Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.—O. VIII, r. 5, is really a rule of construction of the defendant's pleading.

The provision in O. IX, r. 6, for the Court to "proceed ex parte" in undefended cases means

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

Sanderson, C.J.—It would be unreasonable to conclude from S. 191, Penal Code, that it was ever intended that a plaint, which has got the usual verification by the plaintiff, could be adopted by a Court of Justice as sufficient proof of the facts which are contained in the plaint.

Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.—Because a false verification may be the basis of a prosecution under S. 191, Penal Code, that is, it may come within the definition of "False Evidence" for the purposes of the Penal Code, that does not make a verification evidence on which a decree can be founded in a civil suit whether the defendant appears or not.

Woodroffe, J.—Verification does not dispense with evidence. The object of verification of the plaint is to fix on the plaintiff the responsibility for the statements which it contains and to afford a guarantee of his good faith. Verification of pleadings may be by persons other than those who have personal knowledge of facts and who may verify same, as in the present case, on information and belief of the facts being true.

Sanderson, C.J.—A Court would not be justified in allowing the plaint to be put in as evidence of the facts on which the plaintiff wished to rely.

In the present case, which was one for breach of contract and unliquidated damages, the defendants had taken no steps to defend and the trial Judge gave a decree for full amount claimed by the plaintiffs without taking any evidence:

Held on Appeal—That the plaintiffs should be called upon to prove all the material facts which are necessary for the proof of their case, i.e., not only the cause of action upon which they rely but also the actual amount of damages they have in fact sustained.

Held also—that in this case where the claim is for unliquidated damages, it was not incumbent on the defendant under O. VIII, r. 8, to deny specifically the allegations of fact regarding damages, and the Court should even then make some enquiry to ascertain the damages to which the plaintiff would be entitled.

Mookerjee, J.—The defendant, merely because he did not appear, cannot, in the present case, be in a worse position in this respect, than what he would have been in if he had appeared and filed a written statement.

Woodroffe and Mookerjee, JJ.—Where a plaintiff did not offer any evidence, strictly speaking, the suit should be dismissed.

Per Curiam.—Having regard to the fact that a written statement was not filed under a bona fide mistake and to the circumstances of the case, it was remanded for re-hearing with liberty to defendant to put in a written statement and adduce evidence.

Mookerjee, J.—Although there is a provision in the Code for remand in certain specified circumstances, it cannot legitimately be contended that our powers are restricted thereby and that we cannot make an order of remand if exigencies of the case demand that such an order should be made. J. B. Ross and Co. v. C. R.

O. XX, r. 19, Civ. Pro. Code, covers also claims for equitable set-off.

The words 'legally recoverable' in O. VIII, r. 6, Civ. Pro. Code, include all unsustainable claims whether barred by limitation or otherwise.

Though it is well settled in Madras that claims for unliquidated damages may be raised by way of equitable set-off if they arise out of the same transaction as the one in suit, yet such a set-off will not be allowed if the claim in respect of such set off had become barred on the date of suit (a).

Though in cases where there is a fiduciary relationship between the parties as in the case of trustee and cestui que trust or where there is accountability as in the case of mortgagor and mortgagee, even barred claims are taken into account in passing the final accounts, the benefit of such exception cannot be extended to cases of lessor and lessee.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Whether the cases which allow barred claims being taken into account in passing the final accounts are rightly decided. Vyavan Chetty v. Nataraja Dealkar, 8 L.W. 34 = 30 M.L.J. 59 = 32 Ind. Cas. 80 = 39 M. 939.

In execution of a decree obtained against B, certain properties were attached. B's son G preferred an objection under O. XXI, r. 58, which was summarily rejected by its belated appearance. He then brought a regular suit for a declaration that the property was not liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree against his father, but that suit was dismissed for default in 1912. The decree-holder, owing to failure to secure an adequate bid in 1912, had at that date withdrawn his execution, but presented a fresh application for sale by auction in 1915 and proclamation of sale was made. Plaintiff (G) again brought the present suit, alleging that the proclamation of 1915 gave him a fresh cause of action and asking for the same declaratory relief as in the former suit of 1912.

Held, that the suit was time-barred (Vide Limitation Act, Art. 11).

The fresh proclamation of 1915 furnished no fresh cause of action. The cause of action in 1915 as in 1912 was the threat levelled against the plaintiff's title, the attachment and proclamation of auction connoting and importing a denial of any right of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff, not having proceeded with the prior suit of 1912, nor having withdrawn it with leave to bring another suit, he could not agitate the matter again (a).

Held, that the suit is barred also by O. IX, r. 9, Civ. Pro. Code, for in both the cases the cause of action, vis., the threatened annihilation of plaintiff's asserted right, is the same. Gopal Singh v. Ganpat Rai, 66 P.R. 1916—130 P.L.R. 1916—117 P.W.R. 1916—35 Ind. Cas. 321.

A suit for sale on foot of a mortgage was instituted against several defendants. Some of the defendants appeared but as against the other defendants the suit proceeded ex parte. A decree was passed against all the defendants but ex parte as against the absent defendants. The decree of the lower Court was modified. An application was then made to the original Court by one of the absent defendants to set aside the ex parte decree:—Held, that the original Court had jurisdiction to set aside the decree passed by it against the absent defendant.

Where an applicant for setting aside an ex parte decree is no party to an appeal against that decree either as appellant or respondent, and the appellate Court has not adjudicated upon his case, the decree of the Court of first instance does not merge in that of the Court of appeal. The petitioner obtained a mortgage decree on contest against one defendant and ex parte against another defendant. The former preferred an appeal against the decree but his appeal was dismissed. The decree-holder then applied for execution and caused the mortgaged property to be sold and himself purchased the property. Thereupon the other defendant, against whom the ex parte decree had been passed, applied for setting aside the decree against him.

This defendant and the plaintiff then arrived at some sort of agreement to the effect that on payment of the decretal amount by the defendant the decree-holder should relinquish his claim to the property. The defendant accordingly paid the amount set out in the original decree, but the decree holder objected to the deposit. The Court, however, overruling the objection set aside the ex parte decree. Held that the first Court had no longer jurisdiction to entertain an application under O. IX, r. 13, in respect of the mortgage decree, inasmuch as appeal had been preferred against the original mortgage decree. Held also that the judgment-debtor, who paid the money into Court in pursuance of certain arrangement, could take such steps as he might be advised to take for enforcing the compromise arrived between the parties in the first Court. *Raj Gobind Singh v. A suit was filed for possession of a house. On the date fixed the case was not taken up by the Court and a second date was fixed. On the adjourned date the plaintiff not being ready asked for another date and it was granted. On the third date the plaintiff with his witnesses appeared. Some witnesses for the defendant had been summoned, but neither the defendant nor his pleader appeared. The Munsiff heard the witnesses of the plaintiff and passed a decree in his favour. The defendant upon appearing made an application for the re-hearing of the case, but it was rejected on the ground that the Munsiff had no jurisdiction and the defendant might appeal in the regular way. The defendant then preferred an appeal against the decree and the Judge dismissed it. The defendant then preferred second appeal: Held that the decree passed by the Munsiff in the absence of the defendant was a decree ex parte, and upon the dismissal of his application for re-hearing he could have appealed against the order to the District Judge, but, as he had preferred an appeal against the decree which appeal was dismissed on the merits, the High Court could not interfere. Hummil v. O. XI, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), applies to proceedings in probate. Under that order there are only two methods of discovery, one by interrogatories and the other by an order directing discovery of documents in the possession or power of the other side.

In probate proceedings, an affidavit of assets actually received can therefore be obtained only by the first method, namely, by interrogatories.

Under O. XI, r. 2, Civ. Pro. Code, the Judge has not any power to settle interrogatories, but he can only decide what should be administered.

The dicta in English cases with regard to the more extensive powers of Courts in matters of probate, seem to imply that the strictest relevancy in the interrogatories may not be required, but the Courts would certainly be obliged to exclude anything offensive or improper in the same way as in any other case. Anilabala Das v. In the course of a suit the plaintiff wanted to deliver to the defendants certain interrogatories. Though there was no doubt as to the precise case set up by the defendant in their written statement, plaintiff wanted to know what the evidence was upon which the defendants rested their case. With this end in view he delivered interrogatories for ascertaining what documents the defendants had in support of their case and the particulars of those documents. The lower Court disallowed the interrogatories on the ground that they were of a fishing nature. Held, that though the plaintiff might have proceeded under O. XI, r. 13, Civ. Pro. Code, for discovery of documents he did not do so. The plaintiff was not entitled to ascertain the particulars of documents relied upon by his adversary. Held, that the lower Court was justified in disallowing the interrogatories. Upendra Nath Ghose v. The Court, being of opinion that the rule was not applicable at that stage of the case, did not grant the adjournment and the appellate Court also did not think it proper to allow the plaintiff another opportunity to produce additional evidence.

Held, on second appeal that, although r. 1 of O. XVII, Civ. Pro. The money was duly paid and a formal receipt passed; but the payment was not certified to the Court. Notwithstanding this, the plaintiff applied to the Court to execute the decree, making a false averment in the application, under S. 285 (e) of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 that there had been no adjustment of the decretal amount. The lower Courts declined to recognise the payment or adjustment, by virtue of O. XXI, r. 2 (8) of the Civ. Pro. Code, and ordered the execution proceedings to go on. The defendant having appealed:

(420) O. XXI, r. 2—Satisfaction or adjustment of decree—Partners holding a joint decree—Payment to two out of three partners, when valid—Shares in the decree debt, definiteness of—Joint Hindu family and partnership compared—Liability under decree, discharge of.

A payment to two out of three partners who are joint decree-holders cannot bind the third, unless the payees have been appointed by the other decree-holder as his agent for the purpose, or unless it is admitted or proved that the several joint decree-holders own separate and definite shares in the decree-debt, and a payment so made cannot have the legal effect of satisfying or adjusting the decree even in part (a).

The status as such agent must appear from the decree itself or should be expressly created subsequent to the decree, and the position of the payee as manager of the joint Hindu family of the decree-holders or as a member of the partnership holding the joint decree cannot lead to any inference of such agency (b).

Per Oldfield, J.—The manager of a joint Hindu family cannot give a discharge of a joint decree-debt of the family without the concurrence of the other members, and there is no difference between a manager and a member of a partnership in this respect.

Code, merely forbids effect being given to an uncertified payment when it is set up as a defence to an application for the execution of a decree and when such application is made by a person who is admitted or proved to be the owner of the decree rights. It has no application to cases where the right itself of the applicant to execute the decree is questioned even though the facts relied on showed that the decree had been adjusted.

A transferee of a decree, who is a benamidar for one of the judgment-debtors, cannot be allowed to execute the decree under O. XXI, r. 16, Civ. Pro. Code.

An application under O. XXI, r. 16, Civ. Pro. Code, presented by a transferee of a decree for the recognition of his transfer and for permission to execute the decree was opposed by one of the judgment-debtors on the ground that the transfer was benami for another judgment-debtor and that the decree had in fact been satisfied by payment of the amount to the original decree-holder. The lower appellate Court found that the transfer was really benami and dismissed the application.

Held, that it was incumbent on the transferee, first, to prove his right under the transfer set up by him, that, until that was done, the question of adjustment of decree could not arise, that O. XXI, r. 2, had no application to the case, that the moment the transfer was found to be benami, the Court was bound to dismiss the application, and that consequently the refusal of the lower appellate Court to recognise the transfer was legal and proper. *Ramayya v. Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

On an application to execute a decree the judgment-debtor on 12-11-1909 filed a petition stating that the decree had been fully satisfied out of Court. But this petition was filed after time. The execution application was ordered to be struck off with the consent of the decree-holder. On the decree-holder filing a fresh application for execution on 15-7-1914, the judgment-debtor objected that it was barred by reason of the order of the Court on 12-11-1909. But it was contended for the decree-holder that his consent was secured by mistake and that the order of 12-11-1909 was a nullity since the petition was barred. Held that the order 12-11-1909 was the record of an adjustment of the decree certified to the Court which could be recognised under O. XXI, r. 2 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, that if the decree-holder made a mistake in giving his consent to the order, it did not vitiate the order, though it was open to the decree-holder to move the Court by way of review; that if the petition by judgment-debtor setting forth full satisfaction was out of time, the order passed thereon was not a nullity; and the only course left to the decree holder was to have appealed against the order of 12-11-1909. Since he has failed to do so, the order became final. Maung Po Myang v. Palaniappa, 35 Ind. Cas. 369.

XXXII, r. 7, Civ. Pro. Code.*

The judgment-debtors in this case applied for recording satisfaction of the decree, stating that they had entered into an arrangement with the decree holder according to which they had executed a sale deed to the latter, but that the latter would not allow it to be registered. The decree-holder (counter petitioner) denied the correctness of some of the above allegations. The lower Court, without recording any evidence, rejected the application to record satisfaction, on the ground that the sale deed, not having been registered, could not pass title to the vendee, and that, until the deed was registered, the question whether satisfaction of the decree should be recorded could not be gone into. Held, on appeal, that the lower Court was wrong in summarily rejecting the application without allowing the parties an opportunity of establishing their respective allegations.

The words "to show cause" in S. 258, Civ. Pro. Code (1882), which corresponds to O. XXI, r. 2, Civ. Pro. Code (1908) do not mean merely to "allege cause nor even to make out that there is room for argument but both to allege cause and to prove it to the satisfaction of the Court," and it is incumbent upon the Court to (430) O. XXI, r. 2 (3)—Effect of not certifying—Instalment decrees—Limitation—No payment made.

An instalment decree was passed which provided that, on failure to pay any one instalment, the decree-holder would be entitled to execute the entire decree. The decree-holder put in an application for execution alleging that four instalments had been duly paid but default had been made in respect of the fifth. The payments had not been certified under O. XXI, r. 2 of the Code. The judgment-debtor denied any payment and contended that the application was time-barred:—

Held that the application was time-barred (1) because, assuming that no payment had been made, the time began to run from the date when the first instalment became due; and (2) because the payments not having been certified, the Court executing the decree could not recognise such payments.

The practice in these provinces is that, when payments are made in Court or out of Court, there is a record on the execution file showing that the payments have been certified and recorded. It would obviously not be within the spirit of O. XXI, r. 2 of the Code that the "certifying" of the payments on foot of a decree should rest entirely with a decree-holder. *Chatter Singh v. In a case where the description of property in decree was amplified in the application for the execution of decree, the proper course for the Court was to advertise for sale the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtors in the property as described in the decree and then enter for purposes of identification the description given by the decree-holder in the application for execution, in order that intending purchasers might have an idea of the value of the property.

An execution petition returned by the Court for amendment but not re-presented yet operates as a step-in-aid and gives afresh starting point for limitation (a).

of puisne encumbrancer against mortgagee—Different capacities.

Certain persons were impleaded as defendants to a suit for sale on certain mortgages as purchasers of a portion of the equity of redemption. The suit was decreed. Those persons had brought a suit against the mortgagees for possession of certain other property and mesne profits; that suit was decreed. The decree-holders in the suit for possession applied for the execution of the decree for costs in their favour, and the mortgagee decree-holders prayed that the amount due to them from the applicants under the decree on the mortgage might be set off against the amount due to the applicants under their decrees:—

Held that, under O. XXI, r. 18, Civ. Pro. Code, there could be no set-off, inasmuch as the applicants filed distinct characters in the two cases. A person against whom a decree foreclosing his right to redeem a property from sale is passed in his character as a puisne mortgagee or an attaching creditor is a judgment-debtor to that decree in a character different from the one in which he holds a decree made in his favour personally and which is enforceable against his judgment-debtor by the arrest of his person and the attachment of his property. In the one case he has obtained his decree for costs in his individual and personal capacity. In the other he is not ordered to pay any sum of money in his individual and personal capacity but is only given an option to do so if he likes to save from sale some property in which he is interested. *Sheo Shankar Kualapuri v. The object of O. XXI, r. 19 Civ. Pro. Code, is to prevent each side executing a decree in respect of sums due whether for costs or otherwise under the same decree.

There is nothing in O. XXI, r. 19, Civ. Pro. Code, to prevent a plaintiff, who holds a joint and several decree against two defendants (who under the same decree are individually entitled to different amounts for costs, which in the aggregate exceed the amount due to the plaintiff), from taking out execution of the decree against one defendant alone for the balance due to him by both defendants until the other defendant makes an application in execution to recover the amount due to him by the plaintiff under the decree.

The words ‘two parties’ in the phrase ‘two parties are entitled to recover sums of money from each other’ in O. XXI, r. 19, Civ. Pro. Code, mean the two parties or sets of parties, may be made—Order when may be set aside.

An application under O. XXI, r. 41, Civ. Pro. Code, which is made ex-parte on a verified tabular statement, is in order.

It is open to the Court to hear the objections of the person summoned, before he is actually examined, and he must apply on summons to have the order for examination set aside.

The object of O. XXI, r. 41, is to obtain discovery for purposes of execution, to avoid unnecessary trouble in obtaining satisfaction of money decrees. It is a useful rule, but orders for discovery may operate harshly against the party directed to give discovery and ought not to be lightly made. An order for personal examination is likely to operate still more harshly, and cause unnecessary harassment and obviously ought not to be made unless the Court is satisfied about the bona fide of the application and urgent necessity for it.

Such an application, however, ought not to be discouraged. It may perhaps be usefully encouraged to prevent unduly dilatory, troublesome and expensive execution proceedings. It can be made at any stage of the execution proceedings and it may be made even before all other methods are exhausted. National Bank of India, Ltd. v. A.K. Ghuznavi, 43 C. 285=34 Ind. Cas. 287.

All that can be done is to warn him that if he fails to pay the amount due by him into Court he may be subjected to a suit. P.L.M. Firm v. Daley M. Stacey, 38 Ind. Cas. 169.

SIR CHARLES FOX, C.J. and MR. PARLETT, J.

(460) O. XXI, r. 46 (3)—Money paid under compulsion of legal process, suit to recover, if lies—Bona fides of party receiving payment—Attachment of debt ostensibly payable to other than judgment-debtor—Necessity of enquiry as to who is real creditor—Duty of Court to guard against its orders prejudicing party not before the Court.

A sued B for recovery of money and obtained an order for attachment before judgment. The property attached was a debt due ostensibly from C to D but the debt was attached on the allegation that B and not D was the real creditor and the Court issued a prohibitory order on C. A obtained an ex parte decree in his suit against B, and C was then called upon to pay into Court the money due from him ostensibly to D. C deposited the money in Court on an order being made that the money would be retained in Court till the adjudication of the question whether B or D was beneficially interested therein. No enquiry was made into this question and without notice to C or D the Court on the application of A paid out the money to him. D subsequently sued C and recovered judgment against him on the debt. C now sued A to recover the money which he had deposited in Court and which without notice to him or his creditor D had been withdrawn by A. Both the Courts below concurrently found that not B but D was the real creditor of C.

Held, that, though the principle is that where money has been paid by the plaintiff to the defendant under compulsion of legal process, which is afterwards discovered not to have been due, the plaintiff cannot recover it back in an action for money had and received, there must be bona fides on the part of the party who has got the benefit of his opponent's payments in order to bring this principle in force. If the person enforcing a payment under legal process has therein taken an unfair advantage or acted unconscientiously, knowing that he had no right to the money, the principle laid down above may not prevent the plaintiff from recovering the money back (a).

That in the present case the defendant was able to appropriate the money by what constituted a grave abuse of the process of the Court and the principle laid down above had no application.

That the money deposited in this case did not cease to be the money of the plaintiff merely because he had brought it into Court on the faith of a conditional order which directed its retention in Court pending enquiry into the question raised as to who was the real creditor, and the Court had full authority to compel the defendant to bring back the money into Court to be repaid to the plaintiff.

O. XXI, r. 46, cl. (3), contemplates a case where there is no dispute that, if the suit results in a decree against the defendant or there is a pre-existing judgment against him, the money is recoverable thereunder from the depositor.

There being such a dispute in this case, it was incumbent on the Court to make an enquiry, and the conditional order was the proper order to make in this case.

The Court has inherent power to guard against an abuse of its process and to ensure that its orders do not operate to the prejudice of persons who have no notice of the proceedings. Harinath Choudhuri v. Haradas Acharyya Choudhuri, 20 C.W.N. 188=23 C. L.J. 163=43 C. 269.

The essential requisite of an operative order under O. XXI, rr. 58 to 62 which would necessitate the institution of a suit within one year is that there must be some investigation. If there is no investigation of any kind there can be no operative order and the bar of one year's limitation does not apply to such a case. But there is no authority for the proposition that where a Judge has passed an order after a perfunctory investigation such an order is not an operative order. The order is equally operative whether the investigation has been satisfactory or unsatisfactory. Bal Makund v. Salyed Maqud Ali, 19 O.C. 357.

(483) O. XXI, r. 62—Order by Court to notify prior encumbrances without preliminary enquiry—Mention of monies due or them in sale proclamation—Description of encumbrances not notified—Duty of purchaser to pay encumbrance.

In execution of a decree the Court directed without holding any preliminary enquiry, but with the consent of the decree-holder's pleader, that certain encumbrances on the property to be advertised for sale might be notified for what they were worth. The order was passed without any notice to the judgment-debtor. In the proclamation of sale the mortgage monies were mentioned under the heading of prior encumbrances without a statement either as to the dates of the mortgages or the persons to whom the said monies were due, and in the certificate of sale the entire sum was lumped up together and described as a "bar" or encumbrance notified at the time of auction. Held, that from the above circumstances it was not possible to conclude that the Court had directed the sale of the attached property, subject to the liens notified in the manner laid down in S. 282, Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, corresponding to O. XXI, r. 62 of the present Code.

ordinary creditors—English and Indian Law.

The property in suit belonged to V. He sold it to plaintiff at a time when he was heavily involved in debt. Defendants had a number of decrees against V for monies due to them before the date of sale to plaintiff, and they attached the property in execution of their decrees.

Plaintiff filed a claim petition, which was rejected on the decree-holders' plea that the sale was invalid under S. 53, Transfer of Property Act. Thereupon the claimant filed the present suit for a declaration that the property belonged to him by sale and that V had no interest therein. On second appeal by plaintiff, it was contended that, as defendants had not sued to set aside the sale in favour of plaintiff before they attached the property, they were not entitled to resist the plaintiff's claim in this suit. Held, that this contention should be allowed.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—There is nothing in the Hindu Law which is inconsistent with S. 53, Transfer of Property Act. At any rate S. 53 may be taken as indicating the principles of equity, justice and good conscience which ought to guide Courts in the absence of specific legislative provisions (a).

On the language of S. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act, it is open to any creditor to impeach a conveyance made by his debtor; provided he alleges in the plaint that the sale was intended to defraud him and others similarly placed. A decree in such a suit will not give any personal rights to the litigating plaintiff, but would enure for the benefit of all creditors like himself (b).

There is nothing in the words of S. 53 to differentiate between the position of the decree-holder and that of an ordinary creditor in this respect.

If the sale is void or is found to be a sham transaction, it will not be necessary either for the creditor individually or conjointly with others to sue to set aside the sale. But if it is only voidable, the creditors can have no remedy against the property conveyed until the sale is set aside. It is well settled that, in cases of voidable transactions, until the transaction is avoided, it continues in force (c).

The English Law on the above points discussed (d). Palanulandi Chetty v. M.V. Appavu Chettiar, 30 M.L.J. 565=19 M.L.T. 390=34 Ind. Cas. 778.

property before order on the claim-petition—Limitation Act, Sch. II, Art. 11.

In a suit against an order on a claim-petition, the plaintiff is not confined to the relief which can be given by the Court that heard the claim; but is entitled to ask both for declaration of his title to the property, and for all consequential reliefs, e.g., recovery of its value where the property has been sold prior to the order on the claim-petition.

Such a suit comes within Art. 11 of Sch. (495) O. XXI, r. 66—Execution—Sale proclamation—Duty of Court—Purchaser's remedy in event of improperly conducted sale.

A purchaser at a Court sale of immovable property buys at his own risk and there is no warranty of title or guarantee that the property will answer to the description given of it, unless the sale is vitiated by fraud on the part of the decree holder or the judgment-debtor (a).

In sales under the direction of the Court it is incumbent on the Court to be scrupulous in the extreme and very careful to see that no taint or touch of fraud or deceit or misrepresentation is found in the conduct of its ministers. The Court, it is said, should at any rate not fall below the standard of honesty which it exacts from those on whom it has to pass judgment. The slightest suspicion of trickery or unfairness must affect the honour of the Court and impair its usefulness. It would be disastrous, it would be absolutely shocking, if the Court were to enforce against a purchaser misled by its duly accredited agents a bargain illusory and unconscientious (b).

By O. XXI, r. 66, a duty is cast upon the Court to use all possible materials before it in drawing up a proclamation of sale which will give such information about the property to be sold as may be as fair and as accurate as possible. Where the presiding Judge has not availed himself of the materials before him, they being such as would have enabled him to avoid the trouble afterwards occasioned, the purchaser who has in fact been misled should have a remedy.

The remedy would be either for a proportionate refund of the purchase money for the missing acres or for a cancellation of the sale. A. M. Hashim Isphany v. N. A. P. K. Chetty Firm, 8 L.B.R. 427=9 Bur. L.T. 169=33 Ind. Cas. 1003.

The absence from the sale proclamation of a valuation of the property to be sold, if it had not a deterrent effect on the minds of intending or possible bidders, is not a material irregularity.

Though a sale officer, in allowing an intending bidder for several lots to deposit his one-fourth share of the purchase-money at the conclusion of the sales of all the lots, instead of at the conclusion of the bid for each specific lot, is an irregularity, yet it is for the judgment-debtor to prove that such irregularity materially prejudiced him and resulted his substantial loss. Mohammad Ali v. The words in r. 90 "entitled to a share in a rateable distribution of assets" refer to decree-holders who are entitled to a rateable distribution under S. 73 of the Civ. Pro. Code.

The right to dividend before the Official Receiver is not contemplated by the rule. It is a right contingent on proof of debt before the Official Receiver and was not established at the time of the application.

Where the judgment-debtor has, subsequent to the sale of his property, been adjudged insolvent, he ceases to have any existing interest in the property and cannot apply for setting aside the sale.

The allegation that the bidders conspired with the auction purchaser to put down the price is no ground for setting aside a sale under Civ. Pro. Code, O. XXI, r. 90 (a).

The words in r. 90 "where interests are affected by the sale" refer to existing interests in the property sold. The phrase cannot be extended to the claims of creditors, for that would involve (1) the proof of claim in the execution proceedings and (2) a construction which would make the words "the decree-holder

The plaintiff was auction-purchaser of certain property at a Court-sale. After the purchase made by him a suit was brought by a third party against the judgment-debtor for possession which was successful. The plaintiff applied to be made a party to that suit, but his application was refused. The auction-sale was never set aside. The present suit was brought for the refund of purchase-money against the judgment-debtor and the decree-holder: Held, that having regard to the provisions of O. (549) O. XXII, r. 9, cl. 2—Suit for malicious prosecution against manager of joint Hindu family—Abatement—Cause of action—Survival—Legal representative applying for setting aside abatement—Refusal—Appeal.

When a Court treats a suit as having abated owing to the cause of action not surviving, there is no right in the plaintiff's legal representative to apply under O. XXII, r. 9, cl. (2), Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, to set aside that order of abatement. Cl. 2 of r. 9 applies only to cases where the abatement takes place in consequence of an application not having been made within the time limited by law to bring in the legal representatives. An order of the Court declaring that a suit has abated owing to the cause of action not surviving is a decree, and it determines that the right of the plaintiff ceased to exist on his death, and therefore, falls within the definition of a decree, there being no appeal provided for in the Code from that order "as an appeal from an order" (see exception (a) to S. 2, Civ. Pro. Code).

The cause of action for a suit for damages caused by the malicious prosecution of the manager of an undivided Hindu family does not, on his death, survive to the remaining coparceners, even as regards that portion of the claim which related to the loss incurred by the estate in the defence of the criminal case brought against the manager, the cause of action being a single and indivisible one in a personal action. An agreement by the parties to a suit to refer a dispute to arbitration does not come within the scope of O. Where, however, the parties presented a petition to Court, and agreed that the case should be finally disposed of in one way if a simple fact was found to exist, and in another way if it was found not to exist, the agreement came within the terms of O. XXIII, r. 3 of the Code, as no further judicial action was necessary; and the agreement being capable of enforcement, the losing party should not be entitled to repudiate it after the fact, on which it depended, had been ascertained (b). *Khobhari Sah v. It is matter of some doubt as to whether under the provisions of the present Civ. Pro. Code, it is legal for the Court in person to hold any local investigation. There are two principles applicable to a local enquiry. One of these is that the result of it should be made a matter of record in order that the party adversely affected by it may have an opportunity of meeting it, and the other is that the enquiry should be used only for the purpose of enabling the Judge to understand the evidence and not for the purpose of finding his decision thereon. Anant Lal Sahu v. In a redemption suit all the defendants mortgagees were members of a joint Hindu family. The manager of the family, who was a defendant, having declined to act as guardian ad litem for one of minor members, the Court at once appointed the Nazir as such guardian in without issuing the notices required by O. XXXII, r. 3, cl. (4), Civ. Pro. Code. The Nazir did not put in any defence. The manager fully contested the suit which was decreed in appeal and the mortgage was accordingly redeemed. Subsequently the minor brought a suit for a declaration that the former proceedings were void as against him and for possession as mortgagee. Both the lower Courts found that the minor plaintiff was a member of a joint Hindu family living under the care and guardianship of the manager aforesaid. No fraud or collusion in the former proceedings was established.

Held, that although there had been grave irregularity in the appointment of the guardian ad litem for the minor defendant in the former suit, yet, as the manager of the family had fully contested the suit, the minor had in no way been prejudiced, and that there had been an effective redemption of the mortgage which was binding on the minor.

The moment it is shown that there has been no fraud and that the minor's interests have not been prejudiced by the irregularity, the minor's right to set aside the proceedings must be denied.

If the appointment of a guardian has been irregular, it does not necessarily follow that the minor must be deemed to have been prejudiced. That is an issue of fact and has to be established by evidence. Ram Barechha Ram v. Tarak Tewari, 14 A.L.J. 589 = 33 Ind. Cas. 805.

—Prior suit for partition—Minor parties—Reference to arbitration—Decree in accordance with award—Appeal from decree—Compromise in appeal—Leave of Court not obtained either to arbitration or to consent decree—Effect—Minor's right of suit to avoid the decree—Prior partition suit re-opened with reference to all parties.

The present plaintiffs, who were minors, were parties to an earlier suit instituted by the present first defendant for partition. That suit was referred to arbitration and a decree was passed in accordance with the award. The present plaintiffs' father appealed from the decree. The appeal was compromised and a decree was purported to be passed therein by the consent of the parties. Neither the reference to arbitration nor the consent decree was with leave of the Court under O. XXXII, r. 7, Civ. Pro. Code.

The present plaintiffs brought this suit for declaration that the consent decree did not bind them and for setting it aside and for other reliefs.

Held, that it was competent to the minors to institute the present suit and obtain a declaration that the decree on the award does not bind them.

Held also, that the effect of avoiding the decree in this case was to re-open the suit for partition not only with respect to the minors but also with respect to all the parties to the suit.

The agreement contemplated in Civ. Pro. Code, Sch. II, paragraph I. et seq, is an "agreement with reference to the suit" under O. XXXII, r. 7, and it is not validly entered into on behalf of a minor where the guardian of the minor purports to bind the minor without the leave of the Court expressly recorded and thus exceeds the authority given to him by the said rule. *Davuluru Vijaya Ramayya v. Appellant—Death of guardian ad litem during pendency of appeal—Appeal disposed of without fresh guardian—Fresh guardian appointed in execution proceedings—Minor's property sold without objection—Minor whether can sue for declaration that decrees and execution sale were invalid.

In execution of a decree obtained by one G against two minors V & N and one K, the husband of N, on a pro-note executed by K, the 1st defendant in the suit and the guardian of the minors, certain properties were sold and purchased in Court-auction by the appellant. The decree was passed on 20-4-1906. On 30-8-1906 defendants preferred a joint appeal. At the time of presenting the appeal, the minors were represented by their maternal grandmother S as guardian ad litem. S died on 24-9-1906, but this fact was not brought to the notice of the Court. The appeal was dismissed on 9-7-1907. On 12-9-1907, the decree-holder transferred his rights under the appellate decree to T. During the execution proceedings M, the mother of defendant K and the mother-in-law of one of the minors, was appointed guardian ad litem of the minors. The properties were sold in Court-auction without objection and delivered to the purchaser on 20-8-1908. The minors V and N sued for a declaration that the decree and the execution proceedings thereon were not binding on them, as they were not properly represented in the appeal, the guardian ad litem having died during the pendency of the appeal, and the appellate decree was obtained by fraud.

It was contended that the minors and K, the husband of one of them, raised a common defence to the suit, that they were represented by the same vakil at the hearing of the appeal, that their interests were duly protected, that there was no sufficient reason for disturbing a judicial sale which was properly conducted without any objection, and that the Court and the decree-holder were ignorant of the minor appellant's guardian's death when the appeal was argued and decided.

Held that, no guardian for the minors having been appointed, they were to all intents and purposes not parties to the appeal at all. That being so, the Court has no jurisdiction to sell the properties of persons who were not properly represented on the record, and as against them the decree and sale were a nullity. *Chundury Krishnayya v. An application for leave to sue as pauper ought to be dismissed without enquiry into the poverty of the applicant unless it discloses a cause of action.

Lottery is a game of chance in which the loss or gain of the prize is wholly dependent on the drawing of lots (a).

A lottery is really a bet between each subscriber and the promoter, the subscriber betting the price of his ticket that he will win, the promoter betting the total subscription that he will not.

There is no difference between "gaming and wagering" as used in the English Gaming Act and in the Indian Gaming Act XXI of 1848 and the expression "by way of wager" in the Indian Contract Act, and participating in a lottery is gaming or gambling (b).

If the money won in a lottery is paid to a third person as agent for the winner, the taint of the money would be purged by its passing into the hands of a person who was bound to account and the winner could bring a suit for recovery of the money as from an agent.

Secus if the person has taken away the money alleging himself to be the winner. (c) Mg. San Ya v. The Indian Telegraph Association Club, 9 Bur. L.T. 228.

(618) O. XXXIV, r. 14—Meaning of the term 'mortgagee'—Application of rule.

The term 'mortgagee' in r. 14 of O. XXXIV of the Code was intended to mean the holder of a subsisting and effective mortgage which could still be set up by the mortgagees against a purchaser or would-be purchaser of the mortgaged property. A mortgage which has become inoperative or time-barred should not be deemed to be a mortgage which should bar the sale of the property. A simple mortgage was made of certain property on January 18, 1901, payable after two years. A suit was brought upon foot thereof against the heirs of the mortgagor, the suit being framed as one for a decree for money under S. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act, owing to the loss of a portion of the mortgage security, or, in the alternative, for the usual decree for sale upon a mortgage. The Court granted the former prayer making the amount realisable out of the assets of the mortgagor. The mortgagees then applied for the sale of the property mortgaged: Held that a suit upon the mortgage having become time-barred, there was no legal bar to the sale of the mortgaged property under O. XXXIV, r. 14, Civ. Pro. Code. Ghedil Lal v. Saadat-un-nissa Bibi, 14 A.L.J. 902=39 A. 36=35 Ind. Cas. 907.

In this case an application was made by the plaintiff for attachment before judgment of certain properties belonging to the defendant. Summons was issued to the defendant to furnish security for a certain amount or to show cause against it, and it was further ordered that certain goods belonging to the defendant should be attached until further notice. The defendant paid into Court the amount specified in the summons but subsequently became an insolvent.

Held that the plaintiff had no charge on the money paid into Court as against the Official Assignee of the insolvent (a).

There is nothing in the language of r. 5 of O. XXXVIII of Civ. Pro. Code, to give the plaintiff a charge on the money furnished as security for this purpose, and, as in default of the security being given, the property is ordered to be attached, and it is well settled that such attachment before or after judgment does not confer title on the attaching creditor, it would be most anomalous that the plaintiff should acquire a charge on money which is merely paid as security for the production of the said property and to render attachment unnecessary.

When he furnished security by paying money into Court in obedience to an order issued under O. XXXVIII, r. 5 of the Code of Civil Procedure such payment will not create a charge in favour of the plaintiff. Erelkulappa Chetty v. The Official Assignee of Madras, 39 M. 903 = 32 Ind. Cas. 190.

The order contemplated by cl. (1) of r. 6 of O. XXXVIII of the Code is an order of attachment; the attachment which the Court is directed by cl. (2) of the said rule, to withdraw, is a conditional attachment made in terms of cl. (3) of r. 5.

A puisne mortgagee does not lose his rights as mortgagee simply because he attached the surplus sale proceeds. He in his capacity as puisne mortgagee has a charge over the surplus sale proceeds in Court after the property was sold at the instance of a prior mortgagee.

An attachment before judgment cannot by itself give a simple creditor priority over a mortgagee. (630) O. XXXIX, r. 2—Temporary injunction—Breach—Refusal to commit—Appeal—Subsequent dismissal of suit, if affects Court's jurisdiction to pass orders on committal application previously presented—Attachment order, if should precede committal order.

An appeal lies to the District Court from an order of the District Munsif refusing to take action under O. XXXIX, r. 2 (3), Civ. Pro. Code, for an alleged breach of a temporary injunction granted under O. XXXIX, r. 2 (2).

The subsequent dismissal of a suit does not affect the power of a Court to deal with an application for committal for breach of a temporary injunction presented while the suit was pending.

An order for attachment of properties is not a condition precedent to the validity of an order of committal for breach of a temporary injunction. Suppl. v. Sayid Kunhi Koya, 3 L.W. 420 = 19 M.L.T. 314 = 30 M.L.J. 523 = (1916) M.W.N. 328 = 39 M. 907 (F.B.) = 34 Ind. Cas. 598.

(631) O. XL, r. 1—Powers of Receiver—General powers of management of an estate

whether includes power to appoint Karnam—Effect of S. 15, Madras Act II of 1894—Receiver or Court whether 'proprietor.'

The term 'proprietor' in S. 4 of Madras Act II of 1894 includes any person who is in lawful management of the estate otherwise than as agent or servant of the proprietor or as mortgagee or lessee.

The powers of a Receiver appointed by a Civil Court under O. XL, r. 1 of the Code (as in the present case) are entirely conditioned by the terms of his appointment, subject to any subsequent modification by the Court under which he holds the appointment. Cl. (d) of the rule gives the Court complete discretion as to the powers to be conferred on the Receiver; and the Court may limit his powers in any way it thinks fit. But where the powers conferred amount to general powers of management, the effect of S. 4 of Madras Act II of 1894 would appear to be to attach to the Receiver the special powers conferred on a proprietor by the Act, and subject to any restrictions arising out of the terms of his appointment, there can be no question that he should be regarded as a proprietor within the meaning of the Act.

Whatever may be the control exercised by the Court on the Receiver, the Court cannot be deemed to be the "person in lawful management," for it only exercises control over the estate by the appointment of a Receiver and, until such appointment, is unable to exercise any powers of management (O. XL, Civ. Pro. Code). Secretary of State v. Komaragiri Janardhana Rao, 30 M.L.J. 456=32 Ind. Cas. 207.

O. XL, r. 1 of the Civ. Pro. Code does not provide that the appointment of a receiver should be confined to a suit.

A proceeding for the appointment of a common manager is a proceeding in the nature of a suit within the meaning of S. 141 of the Civ. Pro. Code, and a receiver can be appointed during the pendency of such a proceeding, if it should appear to the Court just and convenient to appoint a receiver.

Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—(Continued).

In cases of emergency, when the issue of notice to other parties may so delay the proceedings as to defeat the object of the order, the Court has to pass such order ex parte, leaving the party aggrieved to object to it either in the Court making the order or by way of an appeal to a higher Court. *Asadali Chowdhury v. O. XLI, r. 38, read with O. XLI, r. 4, would seem to give the Court power to interfere with a decree, if that decree was based upon grounds common to all the defendants, although only one of such defendants had appealed against that decree. It is a question in each case to be judged upon the circumstances whether the decree appealed against has proceeded on a ground common to all.

There is no justification for the proposition that a defendant who suffers a decree to be passed ex parte against him cannot benefit by the appeal of his contesting co-defendant.

The object of rr. 4 and 38 of O. XLI is to prevent contradictory decisions in the matter of the same suit. Ram Tahal Singh v. Sukumar Rayaln, 1 Pat. L.J. 143—35 Ind. Cas. 547.

So the surety is not entitled to be discharged on the death of the decree-holder. Such a suretyship is not a continuing guarantee within the meaning of S. 130 of the Contract Act. The provisions of O. XLI, r. 31, Civ. Pro. Code (=old S. 574) are not applicable in their entirety to the dismissal of an appeal under O. XLI, r. 11 (=old S. 551), and every case must stand on its own merits.

But the discretion given by O. XLI, r. 11, is not an arbitrary discretion but a judicial discretion. The Judge of the appellate Court should at least show that he understood the case and considered the grounds of appeal; and in cases where questions of fact are involved, he should write a full judgment after going through the records. A suit to set aside an adoption was dismissed by the trial Court on the ground that no fraud was proved to have been practised on the adopting widow. It was urged in appeal that the adoption should be set aside on the ground of undue influence. The lower appellate Court, being of opinion that the transaction was unconscionable, granted leave to amend the plaint and remanded the suit to the trial Court in order that it "should, after taking a supplementary written statement, frame the issues raised by the new pleadings and decide the case on the merits." The defendants having appealed:

Held, (1) that the lower appellate Court had committed a material irregularity, inasmuch as it could re-appreciate the evidence and allow necessary amendments of the pleadings consistent with the case made before that Court, but it could not require the trial Court to reconsider the whole case de novo and write another judgment;

(2) that there was nothing to prevent the lower appellate Court from giving relief if it found a case of undue influence established, since such a case would not be inconsistent with the allegations in the pleadings, as undue influence was a branch of fraud in equity, and invited the same relief under S. 38 of the Specific Relief Act. Narayanbhat Bhimbhat Joshi v. refunded—S. 13, Court Fees Act—Ss. 562, 564, Civ. Pro. Code (1882).

The Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, contains only a single Rule expressly allowing a Court of first appeal to remand a case for a second decision by the original Court, namely, O. XLI, r. 23, which is an amended version of S. 562 of the Code of 1882; and it is only when a remand is made under this Rule that S. 13, Court Fees Act, permits and directs the refund of the Court-fee paid on the memorandum of appeal. S. 564 of the earlier Code, which expressly forbade a remand for a second decision, except under S. 562 thereof has not been reproduced in the present Code, because it was found to be unduly restrictive, and experience had proved that exceptional cases sometimes occur in which defects of trial are so radical as to be incurable otherwise than by a re-trial de novo; and the discretion of the appellate Court was left unbound to provide for such cases. But the policy of the law, and therefore the intention and rule of the law, remains that, except under O. XLI, r. 23, no case shall be remanded for a second decision by the trial Court which can finally be disposed of by the first appellate Court; and, for this purpose, plenary powers have been given to the latter tribunal under several Rules of O. XLI, of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1908. Jagannath v. Maruti, 12 N.L.R. 126=36 Ind. Cas. 241.

The Ganges Sugar Works Company made an application, under Sch. II, r. 17 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to file an alleged contract to submit to arbitration. The Court of first instance dismissed the application on the sole ground that the agreement not being under the seal of the company was invalid. No evidence was recorded. There were several other objections to the agreement, e.g., fraud, vagueness, misrepresentation, etc. The High Court reversed the decree of the Court below and remanded the case for trial of the other issues under O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code. After the remand the Court below tried the case and decided against the objector. An appeal from that decree was pending in the High Court. The objector filed an application for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council from the order of remand:

Held that, that having regard to all the circumstances, the order of remand in the present case could not be called a "final order" within the meaning of S. 109 of the Code, nor was there a question of law of general importance so as to lead the High Court to grant the requisite certificate. Nuri Malin v. The plaintiff brought a suit for pre-emption based on the Muhammadan Law. He alleged that he had made the demands but did not specify the day on which he had done so. Upon appeal the District Judge made an order that the plaintiff should be examined "in order to enable him to pronounce judgment." The District Judge purported to take action under O. Where the appellate judgment is one of reversal the aggrieved party is entitled to a consideration of the points upon which the lower Court relied for the purpose of giving the successful party a decree.

Where an appellate Court had disposed of an appeal in the following words:—'I am unable to agree with the Munsif that this entry (Record-of-Rights) is proved to be wrong. The evidence is not, in my opinion, sufficient to come to such a conclusion.'

Civ. Pro. Code, 1882, did not contain provisions similar to those found in O. XLI, r. 33, Civ. Pro. Code, 1908, introduced for the first time in the new Code (a).

A person erroneously exonerated in the Court of first instance can be added as party by the appellate Court (b).

If there is already a memorandum of objection seeking to make such a person liable and the appeal is pending, a High Court will not interfere in revision with an interlocutory order of the lower appellate Court making him a party.

As to the question whether under O. XLI, r. 22 sub-rr. (3) and (4) an appellate Court can make a party exonerated by the first Court, a party to the memorandum of objections though he was not made a party in the appeal memorandum, no final opinion was given. *Rebaler Babu Reddi v. The appellant filed a memorandum of appeal in time and also filed on the same date an application, in accordance with O. XLIV, r. 1, Civ. Pro. Code, for leave to appeal as a pauper. The latter application was dismissed on 31-12-1914 during the Christmas holidays. On the re-opening day, i.e., 4-1-1915, the appellant wanted time to pay the necessary Court-fees on the appeal memorandum and he was granted time till 25-1-1915 within which date he paid the necessary Court-fee. It was contended that when the application for leave to appeal as a pauper was dismissed, the unstamped appeal memorandum also must be deemed to have been rejected. Held, that the appeal was not out of time (a).

It was found that the value of the subject-matter of the suit was placed by the plaintiffs in their plaint at less than Rs. 10,000 and no objection was raised by the defendants as to the said valuation. The question now was whether in view of the above facts, the defendants were entitled to say that the true value of the property in dispute on appeal was over Rs. 10,000. Held that the value of the property was a question of fact and that the question had been settled by the defendants and their own admissions. They could not now be heard to say that in spite of their admissions, the property was worth over Rs. 10,000 and claim that they had a right to have this matter investigated for the purpose of determining the question of their right to appeal to the Privy Council. *Jagannath Bakhsh v. Where an appellate Court is seized of a case, and is empowered by law to grant the relief claimed by an applicant, the latter should have recourse to the appellate Court and not to the original Court.

Therefore, where a party to an appeal can present his case to the Court of appeal by way of cross-objection or otherwise, an application for review to the original Court is incompetent and cannot be maintained.

The pendency of an application for review in the original Court does not preclude the appellate Court from hearing the appeal, and if the appellate Court in its discretionary power refuse to entertain an application for extending time for filing cross-objections, the Chief Court on second appeal will not interfere without adequate reason.

There is nothing unreasonable or contrary to law in awarding full costs to a successful co-defendant. The Punjab Sindh Bank, Ltd., Lyallpur v. Ram Kishan, 156 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 529.

XLVII, r. 8—Decree of Division Bench of High Court of two Judges found erroneous, giving plaintiff more than he claimed—Application for amendment before one of them—Jurisdiction of single Judge to amend decree—Court in granting application for review if bound to re-hear whole case—Re-hearing of case by single Judge without authority from Chief Justice—Jurisdiction.

An application for amendment of a decree made in favour of the plaintiff by a Division Bench of the High Court of two Judges was moved by some of the defendants before one of them (the other Judge having left the Court) and a Rule was issued on the plaintiff to show cause why the decree should not be set aside or amended, or why such other order should not be made as might seem fit, on the ground that the decree purported to give plaintiff a relief not claimed by him. The Judge made the Rule absolute, and then in terms of r. 8, O. XLVII, Civ. Pro. Code, proceeded to re-hear the case with the result that the judgment and decree of the Division Bench were amended. The plaintiff appealed against this last decision.

Held—(Per Jenkins, C.J. and N.R. Chatterjee, J.)—That in the absence of an order by the Chief Justice authorising the learned Judge alone to sit for the hearing of the case, his decision was without jurisdiction.

The case thereafter was heard before the Regular Bench, the Judges whereof refused to re-hear the whole case, and, confining themselves to the point of amendment only, passed a decree amending the judgment and decree. Some of the defendants having applied for review of this last decree, on the ground that the learned Judges should have re-heard the whole appeal.

Held—That the decree of the Division Bench stood amended, as soon as the Rule to amend it was made absolute, and all subsequent proceedings were superfluous.

That as the last decree of the High Court only affirmed that order, it was not necessary to set it aside.

Disputes arose among the parties and they were referred to arbitration without the intervention of the Court. The arbitrator was required among other matters to ascertain what was the divisible property of the family and to divide it up. In doing so he awarded to one D an unmarried member of the family an extra sum equivalent to what had been spent in marriages of other members. He was also required to decide about the appellant's right of residence in the family house. There were other matters about certain expenses referred to him which were withdrawn by the parties. The arbitrator gave an award deciding all questions except the last two. He stated that the appellant and other members of the family had agreed that the lady would be allowed to live in a certain house and he therefore did not think it necessary to give any decision upon the question. He further stated that, as he was asked not to decide the question about expenses by all the parties, he did not decide it. The Court below passed a decree in accordance with the award. Held, the order being one filing an award in an arbitration without the intervention of the Court, an appeal lay against it.

Held also, that the arbitrator was justified in awarding D, an extra sum equivalent to what has been spent in marriages of other members.

Held also, that the agreement of the parties whereby the appellant was given a right to reside in the family house did not absolve the arbitrator from deciding the question.

Held also, that when the parties withdraw certain questions from the arbitrator they cannot complain of there being no decision on those questions. Hari Kunwar v. Lakshmi Ram Jaul, 14 A.L.J. 481=38 A. 390=35 Ind. Cas. 833.

During the negotiations preliminary to the execution of a mortgage-deed, the mortgagor agreed to pay certain commission on the loan, since the money had been lying unused during the period of the negotiations. It was found that the mortgagor had not been deceived or taken by surprise nor had there been any improper pressure or unfair dealing in the matter of the execution of the mortgage-deed. Both the mortgagor and mortgagee knew perfectly well what they were doing. Their acts were voluntary and in pursuance of a deliberate bargain.

There was no mistake of fact, no pressure, and no advantage taken of the position of the mortgagor. The parties were completely on equal terms. Held, that the mortgagor could not plead non-liability for the commission paid, in a suit brought to enforce the mortgage. Babu Narendra Bahadur v. on its assets when the Company is a going concern is incident to its right to carry on business; but no such charge can be created after the Company has actually stopped business or after the debenture-holder has intervened under the powers reserved to him to stop the business by obtaining the appointment of a receiver or petitioning for the winding up of the Company.

But where the debenture deed provides that the Company should have power to go on carrying on business and creating charges after the happening of any of the events which determine its right to carry on business, the right to carry on business is not determined automatically by the happening of the events indicated, but continues until the debenture holder intervenes to show his desire that it should cease, as by applying for a receiver (a).

It is of the essence of a floating security that it should remain dormant until the undertaking charged ceases to be a going concern, or until the person in whose favour the charge is created intervenes (b).

A charge created in favour of officers of the Company and not registered as required by S. 68 of the Indian Companies Act of 1882 is void (c).

A person who does not hold any office in the Company at the time the charge is created, is not an officer of the Company within the meaning of S. 68 of the Indian Companies Act of 1882. Balasubramania Aiyar v. Kandasami Pillai, 32 Ind. Cas. 91.

(6) S. 136, object of—Decree in favour of bank—Revision proceeding by defendant judgment-debtor—Liquidation of bank during pendency of revision proceedings—Leave of Court if necessary to proceed with revision petition.

It is necessary to obtain the leave of the Court before proceeding with certain revision proceedings against a decree in favour of a plaintiff Bank which went into liquidation during the pendency of the revision petition.

The revision proceeding against the decree obtained by the Company is a proceeding "against the Company" within the meaning of S. 136 of the Companies Act, and consequently cannot be proceeded with without the leave of the Court.

The object of S. 136 is to prevent all litigation against the Company except with the consent of the District Judge, and all proceedings in which the Company is either a defendant or a respondent are proceedings against the Company.

A revision is no essential or inevitable portion of a suit, and there is no authority for holding that a suit and a revision are synonymous terms. Milawa Ram v. People's Bank of India, 91 P.R. 1916=36 Ind. Cas. 618.

An order winding up a Company has the legal effect of discharging all its servants including its Managing Director and consequently such a Director is incompetent to institute proceedings for the Company after the winding up order has been made (a).

The appointment of Director continues, however, for the purpose of appealing against the winding up order and for the enforcement of their liability (b).

No appeal lies at the instance of the Managing Director of a Company which has been wound up against an order appointing an Official Liquidator or against an order refusing re-hearing of the appointment proceedings since the Director's appointment has ceased at the time of presentation of the appeal and he is not therefore competent to prefer the appeal on behalf of the Company. *South Indian Mills Co., Ltd. v. Held, that a debt due on a pro-note by a contributory is "money due from him to the Company" within the purview of S. 150 of the Companies Act (1882).

Held also, that under S. 150 of the Companies Act, the Court has, upon a summary application presented to it, the power to direct the contributory to pay not only all moneys due from him as a member, but also any debt due from him to the Company. The jurisdiction is permissive, but when a case is made out for the exercise thereof, it should not be declined unless very cogent reasons to the contrary are shown (a).

Semble.—The marginal note to a section cannot be relied upon in clearing up the ambiguity in the text of the written law, but it may with advantage be referred to when it confirms the conclusion warranted by the language of the section. *The Lahore Bank v. (11) S. 151. See No. 4, supra.

(12) S. 163—Appeal against orders made in winding-up proceedings—Limitation—Extension of time—Principles—Special circumstances.

Held, that the general principles for extending time in winding-up appeal cases are as follows:

(i) The object of the Act (VI of 1882), being that matters should be settled speedily and that winding up proceedings should not be protracted unduly, an extension of time will not be granted except under 'special' circumstances;

(ii) in the absence of 'special' circumstances, a litigant who has obtained a judgment which, by expiration of the time limited for appeal, has become absolute, ought not to be deprived of it;

(iii) a person who applies for an extension of time must show, not on equity properly so called, but something which entitles him to ask for the indulgence of the Court to relieve him from the legal bar that is imposed by the Act of the Legislature (a).

Held, also, that, under S. 169 of Act VI of Companies Act (VI of 1882)—(Concluded).

1882, the "special circumstances" which entitle a person to ask for extension of time require that he will not be granted the indulgence unless he can satisfy the Court that he himself has acted with reasonable diligence and that the delay in prosecuting his appeal was due either to the respondents' conduct or to some action or inaction on the part of the Court below (b). *Blahen Das v. (13) S. 169—Appeal—Code of Civil Procedure (1908), O. XXI, rr. 53, 63.

The right of appeal under the provisions of S. 169 of the old Companies Act is co-extensive with the right of appeal conferred by the Code of Civil Procedure. Hence where in liquidation proceedings a person described as the proprietor of a firm was directed to pay a certain sum as a contributory, and the order was sent to the District Judge of Agra to be executed, and another person claimed to be sole proprietor of the firm which claim the District Judge declined to adjudicate upon, held that the claim purported to be under O. XXI, r. 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Order passed was under r. 63 of the same order and consequently there was no appeal. *Santi Lal v. The proviso to S. 38 of the Indian Companies Act, 1913, should not be confined to the last clause, but must be read as a general reservation imposed on all the clauses of the section.

The conditions precedent to the existence of an appeal under S. 38 are that the lower Court should have directed an issue to be tried in which some question of law was raised, and that that Court should have come to a decision on such issue.

(2) Documents, inspection of—Report of Company's agent for the express purpose of laying it before Company's Solicitor, whether privileged.

A letter written by an agent of a Company giving details of a claim, in pursuance of an order of the Company to submit reports in all cases of claims of a serious nature, not merely as an ordinary duty but expressly to be laid before the Company's Solicitor, is privileged, and its inspection cannot be granted in a suit for such a claim if there is nothing to show that the letter was sent for any other purpose. Yang Tze Insurance Association, Ltd. v. (3) Company accepting certain person for many years as director—Right of third person to question his powers—Share-holder estopped.

When a Company is shown to have accepted a certain person for many years as its director and has never on any occasion repudiated any of his acts as such, it is not open to one who has no concern with the Company to challenge the appointment of such director or to contest his authority to act on behalf of the Company.

A share-holder taking part in almost all the general meetings of the Company and joins also in the annual appointment of its director without taking exception to his appointment is debarred by his conduct from objecting to the validity of such director's appointment or to his authority to act for and on behalf of the Company. Imperial Oil, Soap and General Mills, Co., Ltd. v. Wazir Singh, 31 Ind. Cas. 595.

RATTIGAN and SHADI LAL, JJ.

(4) Company, director of, duties of—Meeting of directors—Personal interest of directors.

No one who has a duty to perform shall place himself in a situation in which his interest conflicts with his duty and he must not make profit by the trust.

A director of a company cannot, as a rule, enter into a contract with the company for profit to himself. The directors of a company are agents of the company and trustees of the share-holders of the powers committed to them.

Where the intention of the articles of a company was that the company should only be bound if two of the directors exercised authority, considered its interests and acted on its behalf, the appointment of one of the two directors who were alone present at a meeting of the directors as managing director and co-editor of a paper run by the company held to be invalid since there was in law and in fact only one director acting on behalf of the company the other being incapacitated by his personal interest. Ramaswami Iyer v. Madras Times Printing & Publishing Company, 32 Ind. Cas. 350 = 38 M. 991.

Compensation.

(1) Improvements—Compensation—Bona fide belief as to title.

It was found that the defendant had rebuilt the houses in dispute having purchased the same while the plaintiff's suit for possession was pending against the persons from whom the defendant had purchased the houses. It was further found that the defendant and his transferees had a bona fide belief that their title was good.

Held, that the defendant was entitled to claim compensation from the plaintiff before decree for possession could be executed by him.

(2) Compromise decree how far operates as res judicata—Compromise decree relating to properties outside the scope of the suit—Effect—Registration whether necessary.

So far as it relates to the properties within the scope of the suit a compromise decree is res judicata, but so far as it relates to properties outside the scope of the suit, such a decree, if the terms of the compromise are embodied within the decree, is judicial evidence of an agreement to transfer an interest in the property. It is not necessary in such a case to register the compromise petition. Bhiseswar Ram v. Mahadeo Pahan, 1 Pat. L.J. 208=36 Ind. Cas. 290.

(1) Advancement—Meher—Conveyance of property in satisfaction of meher—Consideration not necessary—Suit for possession—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), Arts. 142, 144.

In 1898, the plaintiff's husband sold to her two houses by a registered document for Rs. 1,700 (babashahi) in satisfaction of her meher (dowry). In one of the houses conveyed, the plaintiff's husband continued to reside as before till his death which took place in 1911. On his death, the defendants having taken forcible possession of the house, the plaintiff sued to recover possession. The lower Courts rejected the claim first on the ground, that the document was not supported by consideration and, secondly, that the claim was barred by limitation. On appeal:

Held, that the document being a document of advancement needed no consideration to support it.

—1.—Of Acts.

(1) Where the language of a statute, in its ordinary meaning and grammatical construction, leads to a manifest contradiction of the apparent purpose of the enactment, or to some inconvenience or absurdity, hardship, or injustice, presumably not intended, a construction may be put upon it which modifies the meaning of the words, and even the structure of the sentences. *Aiyasamier v. (2) High Court—Original side—Right of audience enjoyed by practitioners for long time cannot be taken away except by express words or by necessary implication.

An act passed several years after the right of audience of certain legal practitioners on the original side has been enjoyed, cannot be construed as taking away that right in the absence of provision in plain terms or by necessary implication. Namberumal Chetty v. Narasimhachari, 31 M.L.J. 698=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 529.

COUTTS-TROTTER, J.

(3) Act to be done at particular meeting convened in particular way, when valid—Notice of Agenda—Proceedings of meeting when valid.

If a particular act must, by statute, be done at a particular kind of meeting, convened in a particular way, no meeting can do that act which is not a meeting of that particular kind or has not been convened in that particular way. The members of the body must have notice of what it is proposed to do at the meeting, or its proceedings will be invalid. Ordinarily, it will be sufficient if they have notice of the substance of what is proposed, unless the statute in terms enacts that the notice must not only give the substance of what is proposed but must call it by its statutory name. *In re G.A. Though the Indian Contract Act, 1872, purports to deal only with "certain parts of the law relating to contracts," it would appear that, where it does treat with a subject in a way at variance with the law of England, it should be regarded as exhaustive, and binding on the Courts in India. *Ballabhdas v. (1) Document—Construction—Mortgage or charge—Covenant to pay whether can be implied.

Where a document had been executed by the stake-holders and subscribers to a chit containing the usual provision that the prize-winner should execute a security bond before he gets the prize money :

Held on a construction of the document that it amounted to a mortgage and not merely charge. The mere fact that there was no express covenant to pay, when one must necessarily be implied, will not affect the construction of the document. Subramania Iyer v. (2) Mortgage by conditional sale or sale with covenant to purchase—Test.

In the case of a dispute as to whether a document is a mortgage by conditional sale, or a sale with a covenant for re-purchase, the test is the intention of the parties to be gathered from the language of the documents themselves, viewed in the light of the surrounding circumstances (a).

It is a rule of law dictated by common sense "that prima facie an absolute conveyance containing nothing to show that the relation of debtor and creditor is to exist between the parties does not cease to be an absolute conveyance, and becomes a mortgage merely because the vendor stipulates that he shall have a right to re purchase (b). (Per Lord Cranworth). Jhanda Singh v. Sheikh Wahib-ud-din, 31 M. L.J. 750=20 M.L.T. 529=21 C.W.N. 66=14 A.L.J. 1189=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 570=38 A. 570=19 Bom. L.R. 1=5 L.W. 189=36 Ind. Cas. 38.

(3) Mortgage—Construction of covenant—Clause as to payment upon mortgages receiving less than the stipulated amount of profits—Sum payable on redemption.

A mortgage-deed provided that the mortgagor would be entitled to redeem on payment of the principal amount of the mortgage, and that the mortgagor would have nothing to do with the profits of the mortgaged property nor would the mortgagee get any interest so long as the mortgagee remained in possession. It then provided that should there be a deficiency of profits, then the mortgagor would pay the deficient amount with interest at 2 per cent. per mensem, from his own pocket. In a suit for redemption, held, that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem on payment of the principal amount only of the mortgage, there being no covenant that the deficiency of the profits was to be added to the principal at the time of redemption. Ali Ahmad v. Kalka Prasad, 14 A.L.J. 986.

(4) Deed, construction of—Deed between owner of soil and capitalist—Transfer of land, effect of—Partnership.

In this case one J entered into an agreement with B and T the terms of which were recorded in a document. The important clauses of that document were as follows:—"I, J gave in writing that there is a karia which takes its supply from Dhoro Naro. In all the rights and interests of the lands within the limits of this karia, and in this karia, I take B and T as partners with myself having one-third share. From this day, in this karia and in all the rights and interests of the land one-third share is and shall remain in force and there are two shares of mine and will remain as such. We become and shall remain bound and responsible with each other according to the following terms." Then followed the conditions under which money was to be advanced, whatever money was required for cultivation without interest; if they failed to pay as required they were to be liable for interest at a certain fixed rate. J was to make all the arrangements for the cultivation and to sell the produce at a certain rate. All advances were to be paid out of the sale-proceeds and the net profit was to be divided in certain proportion. J was to be allowed to retain the whole produce out of the Kharif crop and six jirebs out of the Rabi crop. It was also declared that the partnership would continue to remain for ever from generation to generation and would be agreed to by the heirs and executors of J.

Held on a construction of the above document (1) That the said doc! did not create a transfer of one-third share of the land and water-course to B and T but that it created a partnership between the parties by which the whole land was transferred to the partnership as a partnership asset and treated as partnership property, the owner of the soil having agreed to provide the land and B and T having agreed to provide the required capital.

(2) That the above said partnership was terminable at will and that on the termination of such partnership, the relief of B and T was by a suit for partnership accounts and not for partition and possession of one-third share in the land.

(3) That on the termination of such partnership, B and T could not remain under a liability to finance the partnership which no longer existed, and that in taking accounts of such partnership their liability to find money every year for cultivation must be assessed and debited against them on taking accounts. Billawal v. Giammal, 10 S.L.R. 58=35 Ind. Cas. 652.

PRATT, J.C. and CROUCH, A.J.C.

(5) Construction of document—Sale of land—Vendor and purchaser—Intention to transfer the whole of the share of the vendor in a village—Inadvertent omission of certain plots in the list attached—Omission immaterial—False demonstration—Pleader, authority of—Withdrawal of a plea—Withdrawal binding on the party.

Where on the true construction of a sale-deed it appears that the intention was to transfer shares, the vendor's intention being to transfer the whole of the share in a certain village, if in the list attached to the sale-deed certain numbers were omitted by mistake, that cannot make any difference on the effect of the sale-deed and the transferee will get title to the entire share intended to be conveyed and the maxim 'falsa demonstratio non nocet' applies to the case.

A pleader has full authority to withdraw any plea which had been raised in the case and the party cannot be heard to contend that the pleader had no authority to do so and such plea is not thereafter open to the party in the appeal. Surajpal Singh v. Debi Bakhsh Singh, 34 Ind. Cas. 390.

(6) Sale followed by agreement for re-purchase—Construction—Onus.

(7) Construction of document—Transaction whether sale or mortgage—Surrounding circumstances.

The mere fact of the conditions on which the mortgage can be redeemed being onerous, would not be sufficient to justify the Court in coming to the conclusion that the transaction which purported to be a mortgage was a sale. The surrounding circumstances have to be looked to. Muhammad Quasim v. Sheo Sing Swami Jangam, 32 Ind. Cas. 192.

(8) Construction of document—Wajib-ul-ars—'Farar' meaning of.

The word means an absconder. There must be something

- (1) Bequest of property in which the testator has reversionary interest—Will by Hindu widow—Affirmation by reversioner.

Where a testator bequeathed his entire property, moveable and immovable of which he was then in possession and that of which he might obtain possession thereafter to his nephew. Held that the will covered the entire property which the testator held at the time of his death, including the property in which the testator had a reversionary interest on the date of the bequest and which he afterwards inherited, although in his lifetime he did not take any steps to acquire possession.

A Court is bound to give effect to every word of the will without change or rejection, provided an effect can be given to it not inconsistent with the general intent of the whole will taken together, but if that cannot be done, the general intent has to be pursued, though it may involve the rejection or transposition of a particular superfluous or misplaced word(a).

A will by a Hindu widow is absolutely void (b) and no affirmation by a reversioner, unless it amounts to a renunciation by him of his reversionary interest, can validate it. Dhamsa Bakhsh Singh v. Jagmohan Singh, 32 Ind. Cas. 209.

(1) Anticipatory breach—Delivery by instalments—Damages—assessment of.

In a case of an anticipatory breach of contract involving deliveries in several instalments in several months, the true measure of damages would be the sum-total of the differences between the market rates at the appointed times for delivery in each month and the contract price.

Per Sanderson, C.J.—Where a contract only limited delivery of goods by shipments during certain months and no specific instalments for delivery were mentioned:

Held, that the buyer was not bound to accept delivery of the whole lot of the goods either at the beginning or at the end of the period limited in the contract.

Per Woodroffe, J.—Where a question is one of pure fact and there is evidence to support the finding of the Court of first instance, it is incumbent on the appellant to show that the finding is clearly erroneous for the appellate Court to reverse that finding.

Per Mookerjee, J.—Where a contract is for delivery of goods by shipments during several months, in the absence of an express agreement to that effect, an agreement to accept delivery by instalments may be inferred from the conduct of the parties and the circumstances of the case.

In the absence of any indication to the contrary, the instalments must be deemed to have been intended to be distributed rateably over the period appointed for the delivery of the whole quantity of the goods. *Billaalram Takuraldas v. (2) Corporate body—Title to land, if passes by admission—Bengal Local Self-Government Act (III B.C. of 1885), S. 138 (d), rules framed under—Rules 93, 98—'Regulating the power,' if includes regulating the mode of transfer—Immoveable property vested in District Board, how to be transferred—Statute, construction of—Interpretation at the time of enactment—Rule 98 mandatory—Mandatory enactments, if and when directory—Suit, if liable to be dismissed—No title—Contract, when rescinded—Party, when can resile from the contract—Evidence—Corporation, if can retain money—Cross-objection—Appellant—Party affected—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), O. XLI, rr. 29 (3), 33—Limitation Act (1908), Sch. I, Art. 113.

Title to land cannot pass by a mere admission when the statute requires a deed (a).

Rule 98 of the statutory rules made by the Lieutenant-Governor under S. 138 (d) of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act is to be read along with r. 93 and is mandatory and not directory. Hence no immoveable property vested in a District Board can be validly sold except with the previous approval of the Local Government and except by an instrument under the common seal signed by the Chairman and by two members of the Board.

The expression 'regulating the power' in S. 138 (d) of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act, when applied to a Rule made thereunder, is comprehensive enough to include not only rules which restrict the power of alienation to property of specified value and kind, but also rules which regulate the mode in which the alienation is to be effected. A power to regulate assumes the conservation of the thing which is to be made the subject of regulation.

Rules 93 and 98 made under S. 138 (d) are not ultra vires.

The Courts in construing a statute will give much weight to the interpretation put upon it, at the time of its enactment and since, by those whose duty it has been to construe, execute and apply it, although such interpretation has not, by any means, a controlling effect upon the Courts and may be disregarded for cogent and persuasive reasons (b).

No universal rule for the construction of statutes can be laid down to determine whether a mandatory enactment shall be considered directory only, or obligatory with an implied nullification for disobedience; it is the duty of Courts of justice to try to get at the real intention of the Legislature by carefully attending to the whole scope of the statute to be construed (c).

Where powers or rights are granted with a direction that certain regulations or formalities shall be complied with, it is neither unjust nor inconvenient to exact a rigorous observance of them as essential to the acquisition of the right or authority conferred (d). On the other hand, where a public duty is imposed and the statute requires that it shall be performed in a certain manner or within a certain time or under other specified conditions, such prescriptions are intended to be directory only, when injustice or inconvenience to others, who have no control over those exercising the duty, would result, if such requirements were deemed essential and imperative. The test is, do the statutory prescriptions affect the performance of a duty or do they relate to a privilege or power?

When a public body or a company is established by statute or incorporated for special purposes only, and is altogether the creature of statute law, the prescriptions for its acts and contracts are imperative and essential to their validity.

Cases on the subject referred to.

A suit need not be dismissed, merely because the authority for its institution, such as a certificate under the Pensions Act, or S. 78 of the Land Registration Act, or S. 60 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, or S. 4 of the Succession Certificate Act, is not produced with the plaint. But it is otherwise, where the plaintiff had no title at all at the date of the institution of the suit.

Where there was an offer by the District Board to A to reconvey the land to him upon payment of Rs. 25 as actual expenses of acquisition, and the offer was accepted by him by a deposit of the amount, an enforceable contract was constituted. As the contract was for re-transfer of the land for Rs. 25, neither r. 102 nor r. 103, which applies respectively to contracts in excess of sums of Rs. 50, and Rs. 500, had any application.

The strict rule of the ancient Common Law was that a corporation could only act under its seal and was not bound by written contracts not under seal. This rule, however, was relaxed in many cases at an early date, and where a corporation is acting within the scope of the legitimate purposes of its institution, even parol contracts made by its authorised agents raise implied promises, for the enforcement of which an action may well lie, specially where there is no express statutory requirement of a contract under seal and the benefit of the contract has been enjoyed by the corporation (e).

The exception based upon the doctrine of part performance cannot be applied where the contract is, by statutes, positively required to be under seal.

One contract is rescinded by another between the same parties, when the latter is inconsistent with and renders impossible the performance of the former; but, if, though they differ in terms, their legal effect is the same, the second is merely a ratification of the first, and the two must be construed together; where the new contract is consistent with the continuance of the former one, it has no effect unless or until it is performed.

Cases on the point referred to.

Where parties enter into a contract which, if valid, would have the effect, by implication, of rescinding a former contract, and it turns out that the second transaction cannot operate as the parties intended, it does not have the effect, by implication, of affecting their rights in respect to the former transaction.

Where one party, by acts and conduct, evinces an intention no longer to be bound by the contract, the other party will be justified in regarding himself as emancipated from continued liability under the contract.

A clear and precise evidence of a mutual intention to determine or abandon the contract is required by Court.

The demand of a return of the deposit is not by itself conclusive evidence of an intention to abandon the contract. But, where such demand is accompanied by other conduct consistent only with an intention to rescind, the vendee who has so acted cannot later on seek specific performance, for a non-existent contract cannot be specifically enforced.

A suit for specific performance of a contract is to be brought under Art. 113, Sch. I of the Limitation Act, within 3 years from the date when the performance is refused.

Where a corporation receives money or property under an agreement which turns out to be ultra vires or illegal, it is not entitled to retain the money. The obligation to do justice rests upon all persons, natural and artificial; if one obtains the money or property of others without authority, the law, independently of express contract, will compel restitution or compensation (f). The relief is granted, not upon the illegal contract, nor according to its terms, but on an implied contract of the corporation to return, or failing to do that, to make compensation for property or money which it has no right to retain; to maintain such an action is not to affirm but to disaffirm the illegal contract (g).

Contract—(Continued).

A respondent can urge cross-objection against another respondent, if he is a party affected. In this respect O. XLI, r. 22 (3) of the Code of Civil Procedure has materially altered the law. Mathura Mohan Saha v. Ramkumar Saha, 23 C.L.J. 26=20 C.W.N. 370=43 O. 790=35 Ind. Cas. 305.

(3) Construction—Admissibility of extrinsic evidence—Rate of payment for work done under a contract—Over-all rate, effect of an.

The rate of payment for work done under a written contract to execute it is determined by the terms of the contract, and consequently extrinsic evidence as to the rate of payment allowed for such work to another contractor or to same contractor under another contract is irrelevant and inadmissible.

Under the terms of the contract in this case, the schedule of rates of payment specified under one head a certain rate for carting permanent-way material and under another head the rate for carting explosives, and the note referred to in the schedule fixed conditions of carriage of cement and explosives. The question in dispute was as to the rate of payments for carting cement.

Held, that cement was permanent-way material and the rate of payment for carting cement was that specified in the schedule for carting the permanent-way material; that the note did not fix the rate of payment, and the conditions which attached to the carriage of cement were not the same as those which attached to the carriage of explosives; and that although both explosives and cement were to be carried under special instructions and the carriage of cement might consequently be more costly than other permanent-way materials, yet the rate of carting permanent-way materials was fixed as an over-all price, and the fact that one article might be more costly to handle than another did not affect the rate of payment under the terms of the contract. Seth Jaswant Lal v. —Refusal to do duties assigned—Claim for salary—Contract Act, S. 54.

A reference under S. 69 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act is competent though no formal order was passed granting a new trial or declaring that the suit has been revived before the notice was issued to the defendant on an application under S. 38 (a).

Held also, in the absence of any express contract as to the duties of the plaintiff as co-editor at the time of his appointment, the Managing Director of the Company publishing the newspaper was entitled as a matter of law to vary the plaintiff's duties and the hours of his attendance at the office from time to time, provided such variation was not unreasonable or inappropriate to his appointment as co-editor, and that the defendant-company was not bound to pay to the plaintiff his salary for the period during which he failed to perform the duties so required of him. Ramaswami Aiyar v. (5) Privity of contract—Gift by grandfather—Deposit with a relative—Limitation Act, Art. 60—Distinction between a loan and a deposit—Presumption.

Where the grandfather of one P intended to make a gift to her of Rs. 2,000 and, in fact, made the gift and asked the defendant who was a relative of his to hold the money for her and give it to her when she attained her majority or when she might demand it with interest at a certain rate, held, no question of privity of contract arose. There was a completed gift by the grandfather and the defendant agreed to hold the money in deposit for the donee and to pay it with interest to her at a particular rate. No question of privity of contract arises and the plaintiff can sue to recover the amount from the defendant. The transaction is clearly in the nature of a deposit of money in the hands of the defendant and Art. 60 of the Limitation Act applies.

Seshagiri Iyer, J.—There is only a thin difference between a loan and a deposit. Where money is to be paid on the happening of a certain specified event or on demand, the transaction should be regarded as a deposit payable on the happening of the event or on demand and not as a loan. If there is any doubt as to whether a transaction amounts to a loan or a deposit, the presumption is that it is a deposit and not a loan. Narayanan Chettiar v. The plaintiff entered into a contract with the defendants for building their house, one of the terms of the contract being that, when the plaintiff completed the work, the defendants would get their Engineer to measure the same and pay immediately all the moneys due. When the plaintiff presented, on the completion of the work, his final bill certified by the defendants' Engineer, the defendants submitted the bill to another Engineer, and finding that the measurements included in the bill were excessive, consented to pay only for the re-measurements. The plaintiff having sued to recover the amount of the bill :—

Held, that the defendants were bound to pay under the bill, and if they discovered that their Engineer had made mistakes, they had their remedy against him.

Where the parties agree that a building contractor shall be paid according to the final certificate of the architect and that certificate is issued, the employer cannot impeach it except on the ground of fraud. If the architect is incompetent and makes mistakes in preparing the final bill, then the employer has his remedy against the architect, but the building contractor is bound to be paid. All Mahomed Rahimtulla v. (7) Sale of goods—Calcutta Baled Jute Association's Contract—"Home guarantee" clause—Effect—Dispute between Calcutta buyer and Calcutta seller—Arbitration in London between Calcutta purchaser and London purchaser—Effect upon Calcutta seller.

By a contract dated 2-3-1914, plaintiffs, a firm of Jute balers in Calcutta, sold 500 bales of Jute to the defendant firm for being exported to London.

The contract form used was that of the Calcutta Baled Jute Association and it contained a clause known as 'Home guarantee' to this effect "weight, condition and quality guaranteed by sellers at port of destination." Defendants sold the Jute to a London buyer who however refused to take delivery owing to its inferior quality. The matter was referred to arbitration in London in accordance with the terms of the London Jute Association's Contracts and an award was given against the defendants. Plaintiffs sued in Calcutta to recover the price of the 500 bales of Jute from the defendants.

The defendants contended that they were not liable on the ground that, under the bye-laws of the Calcutta Baled Jute Association which were incorporated in the contract, plaintiffs had guaranteed the : weight, condition and quality' of the goods at the port of destination ; that the goods had been invoiced back to the sellers in accordance with the award, and that plaintiffs and defendants were bound by the London award and to give effect to it by the plaintiffs taking back the Jute at a certain price.

Held, that the 'Home guarantee' did not say that a London award in a submission by the Calcutta purchaser and the London purchaser in accordance with the rules of the London

Association Contract would be binding in a dispute between the Calcutta seller and the Calcutta buyer ; and that, to make such an award binding upon a total stranger to the London submission, there should be a clear and unambiguous agreement to that effect, and such a term cannot be implied in this case.

Held also that, though it may be correctly contended that a contention about quality between the Calcutta seller and the Calcutta buyer may be validly referred to arbitration in London, the meaning of the "Home guarantee" clause cannot be extended by making an award between the Calcutta purchaser and the London purchaser binding upon the Calcutta seller. Ram Dutt Ramkissen Dass v. (8) Construction of contract—Sale of goods—Contract of sale of goods—Orders for purchase limited to a certain maximum—Liberty to vendor to send or not to send the goods.

On the 25th April 1914, the plaintiffs agreed to purchase Alizarine goods of the defendants at 7 as. 9 p. per pound. A shifting scale of commission was allowed upon the agreed rate, the discount varying according to the amount which should be purchased up to 300 drums in the course of a year. The above agreement was made subject to certain conditions, chief among which were : (1) when an order of plaintiffs reached the defendants the latter should send the goods, if ready in their godown ; (2) the goods should be credited according to the date of despatch and the defendants were at liberty to send or not to send every single article out of those comprised in the order. On the 29th April 1914, the defendants agreed to, and approved of, the above transaction. The plaintiffs ordered out 36 casks of Alizarine dye from the defendants, which were duly sent. In July and August 1914, they ordered out more casks but the defendants said at first that they had no goods in stock and wrote afterwards that they were unable to supply the goods owing to the war. In January 1915, the plaintiffs called upon the defendants to deliver to them the remaining 264 casks, and on their failure to do so, filed the present suit to recover Rs. 71,400, being the difference between the contract price and the market rate of the commodity. The trial Court dismissed the suit, on the ground that the writing of the 25th April 1914 created no valid and binding contract between the parties. The plaintiffs having appealed :—

Held, (1) that the omission, from the writing of the 25th April 1914, of the maximum which might be ordered, was no reason for not giving effect to its terms, provided any order had in fact been given ;

(2) that, as soon as an order was received by the defendants from the plaintiffs, there was a binding contract for the supply of goods mentioned in the order, though, until such an order was received, it would be open to the defendants to withdraw from the transaction by giving notice to the plaintiffs (a).

Contract—(Continued).

(3) that the condition which gave liberty to the defendants to send or not to send every single article out of those comprised in the order of the plaintiffs did not import a power in the defendants to refuse altogether to perform an order which they had received. Gani Latif v. Where the purchaser at an execution sale bona fide believes that the objections put forward by the judgment-debtor to the validity of the sale are sufficiently serious to necessitate his entering into a compromise with the judgment debtor and accordingly does so and there is no suggestion that the objections were put forward in bad faith, it cannot be said that there is no consideration for the compromise.

An executory contract for the conveyance of land is not a mere right to sue and is transferable. A right to sue is no doubt involved in it on breach of its stipulations but before breach there is also the right to conveyance.

The term 'mere right to sue' is only applicable to cases where there has been a complete breach sounding in damages and where the specific enforcement of the contract cannot be obtained.

The Transfer of Property Act, 1882, does not contain an exhaustive enumeration of what is assignable by the Law of British India and an assignment is not invalid merely because it is not covered by the provisions of that Act. All contracts can be assigned which are capable of specific performance.

An executory contract to convey land by one Hindu co-parcener does not die with the promisor, but can be enforced against a surviving co-parcener of the deceased promisor, if it is shown to be beneficial or necessary.

A mere right to specific performance under an executory contract to convey land cannot be the subject of mortgage.

The cardinal feature of an Indian mortgage being that the mortgagor and no one else is the owner of the property mortgaged, a document which by its express terms validates and confirms the ownership of a person other than the suggested mortgagor cannot be treated as a mortgage.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The considerations which govern the liability of a Hindu co-parcener are the same whether the contract is executed or executory. The enforceability of a contract must be traced back to the date of the agreement and not to the date on which the decree is to be passed. There is nothing in the Hindu Law to warrant a departure from this rule.

S. 27 of the Specific Relief Act embodies a general principle applicable to every one in this country. Venkateswara Aiyar v. Raman Nambudri, 8 L.W. 435=19 M.L.T. 329=33 Ind. Cas. 696.

(11) Construction—Principle on which a stipulation or understanding is to be implied in a written contract.

The law recognises the fact that men assume that the words of the contract will be understood in their trade meanings, and that the terms of their agreements will be governed by the well-recognised usages of the callings to which they relate, and it necessarily looks to these usages to ascertain the real thought of the contract. It finds that merchants do not write all the terms of their contracts, but rely upon the knowledge and good faith of one another as to matters so well-known that special reference to them would be burdensome and unnecessary, and that they accordingly agree upon many of the terms of their contracts by mere silence; what these terms are, must be shown by parol evidence. Lakurka Coal Company, Limited v. (12) Deposit—Sale of immoveable property—Earnest money—Time when essence of the contract—Failure to complete within stipulated time—Effect—Right to damages—Deposit, nature of—When forfeited.

Where it is alleged that time is of the essence of the contract, it is meant that the particular time mentioned for completion is the predominant constituent element of the contract without which it would not be what it is, and such that, if the time be allowed to pass without the contract being completed, it is fair and reasonable to consider that the promisor has definitely and finally refused, and rendered it impossible, to carry out the contract.

In cases of the sale of immoveable property, time is not of the essence of contract, unless it be quite clear that the parties specially agreed that it should be so (a).

Where time is really of the essence of the contract, failure to complete by specified time gives right to the promisees to immediately rescind. But where it is not of the essence of the contract, he has a right to damages only. But in any case the contract must be performed within a reasonable time.

A deposit is paid as a guarantee for the performance of the contract, and where the contract goes off by default of the purchaser, the vendor is entitled to retain the deposit. But in order to enable the vendor so to act, there must be acts on the part of the purchaser which not only amount to delay sufficient to deprive him of the equitable remedy of specific performance, but which would make his conduct amount to a repudiation on his part of the contract (b). *Doulatram Valabdas v. P, a childless widow, was greatly attached to her grand-niece, the plaintiff, and valued her companionship, and, on her marriage, was anxious that she and her husband, who was a man of independent means, should continue to live with her, and to this end offered to settle property on her. Plaintiff and her husband being thus induced to come and reside with her, remained with her from 1886 to 1893, between which dates P settles some small properties on plaintiff. In 1893 she wished to settle property of a more substantial value, and with this object in view purchased a property worth Rs. 40,000, but in her own name. The plaintiff's husband, not being satisfied with this arrangement, left P's house and went to reside on his own property. P, thereupon, in order to persuade plaintiff to stay with her, wrote to her husband, pressing him to return, and she also gave plaintiff herself her assurance in writing that the property in question was purchased for plaintiff, that there were incumbrances on the property which were to be discharged, that P would retain the property so long as she was alive, and afterwards convey it to the plaintiff. The plaintiff as well as her husband agreed to this arrangement and, until P's death in 1899, plaintiff and her husband lived with P.

Held—that the letter was a promise quite definite as to its subject-matter, the person who was to be its owner (the plaintiff) and with regard to the time she was to enter into possession, and the same was accepted, and P obtained the consideration she desired, inasmuch as in compliance with the stipulation made by her, the plaintiff and her husband went on living with her.

That there was thus a concluded contract from which P could not rescind and which was specifically enforceable, the law of India not requiring such a bargain to be in writing. (a)

That the dying declaration of P that the property in question had been given away to plaintiff and that possession of the same should be delivered to her after her death, did not constitute a nuncupative will but a re-affirmation and confirmation of the previously concluded contract.

Upon appeal to the High Court by one of the defendants, N, against a decree in ejectment passed in favour of the plaintiff, another defendant, S, who had been made a respondent in the appeal, prayed that the Court, which proceeded to decree the appeal, should make a decree in favour of all the defendants. The prayer was overruled and the decree was in respect of the appealing defendant's unascertained share only. The plaintiff having then obtained leave of the High Court to appeal to His Majesty in Council, S who was not made a respondent in the appeal moved His Majesty in Council to be added as such and for leave to file cross-objections. This was allowed subject to all objections at the hearing. At the hearing it was urged that the cross-objections could not be entertained as (1) no leave had been obtained from the High Court; (2) S's application to His Majesty in Council was time-barred; (3) under S. 544 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882 which applied when the appeal was lodged in the High Court (though it was not disposed of until O. XLI, r. 33 of Act V of 1908 had come into force), S was not entitled to the relief he asked for. These objections were overruled by the Privy Council. *Sri Rajah Malraju Lakshmi Venkayamma Rao Bahadur v. (14) Time as of the essence of contract—Construction—Consent-decree.

Under a consent-decree the plaintiff's house was to be exchanged for one of the defendant's houses after the plaintiff had constructed on his premises a well and a sink; those additions were to be made and the exchange effected by the end of June 1912. The plaintiff failed to carry out the additions within the stipulated time; but two years later he applied for execution. The defendant resisted on the ground that time being of the essence of the contract, so much of the consent-decree was voidable at his option, owing to the plaintiff's failure:

Held, negating the defendant's contention, that time was not of the essence of the contract, for at the time the consent-decree was made the defendant did not regard it as of vital importance that the additions which were to be made to the plaintiff's house before the exchange could be effected should be completed before the 30th June 1912. Bhagwant v. The defendants ordered through the plaintiffs aluminium circles, in shipments of twelve boxes each to be delivered at Madras on C.I.F.C.I. terms. The first consignment was shipped on board SS. Barenfels on the 16th July 1914 and the second on SS. Kybfels on the 25th idem, from a German port. The plaintiffs drew against the defendants for the first shipment, the bill of exchange was presented to the defendants along with the shipping documents and was accepted by the defendants on the 31st July 1914. On the 9th October 1914, the plaintiffs drew a bill of exchange as regards the second shipment; it was presented to the defendants who accepted it on the 10th November 1914. Both bills were not honoured on due dates of payment. Owing to the outbreak of war, SS. Barenfels was seized as a prize; but she was allowed to finish her voyage, when she delivered the defendant's shipment at Madras on the 8th June 1915. The defendants accepted the cargo and paid the amount of the first bill. The plaintiffs sued to recover from the defendants interest on the amount of the first bill from its maturity to the date of payment and for the amount due on the second bill with interest:

Held, (1) that, as regards the first bill, the defendants obtained all that they were entitled to obtain under the C.I.F. contract when the bill was presented to them for acceptance, that is to say, good shipping documents; that, as they accepted them, the risk thereafter was entirely their own and they were not entitled to refuse payment on maturity; and that having refused payment on maturity they were liable for overdue interest after that date;

(2) that, as regards the second bill, inasmuch as the bill of lading had become a void contract before it was tendered to the defendants on the 10th November 1914, there was at the time a failure of consideration for the acceptance of the bill of exchange, and the defendants were, therefore, not bound to pay at maturity.

In the ordinary course of business, a seller on C.I.F. terms is entitled to be prepaid by his buyer on presentation to the latter of valid and legal shipping documents.

Contracts entered into between subjects of countries, which were at peace when the contracts were made, are not necessarily abrogated by the breaking out of hostilities between those countries. Unless the contracts are of a very special kind, the effect of war is not to avoid them totally but merely to suspend the remedies of one or other of the parties to them. Such contracts would doubtless remain in abeyance during the continuance of hostilities but upon their ceasing no good reason can be shown why the rights still enforceable should not be duly enforced, the Governments of the parties to such contracts having now re-established all peaceful and normal relations.

Hence, where a contract requires continuous performance of mutual duties by the parties to it and such duties cannot be so mutually performed during the continuance of a war, and further suspension of such mutual rights and obligations for an indefinite period go much beyond merely placing the contract in abeyance, the contract becomes, on the outbreak of war, void, inasmuch as taking it up upon cessation of hostilities would be something more than renewing it, would, in fact, be substituting for it an entirely new contract. A like rule would doubtless be applied to the case of partnership between subjects of belligerent states.

All contracts of affreightment are put an end to by the outbreak of hostilities between the Governments of the shipper and the shipmaster. Marshall & Co. v. Naginchand, 18 Bom. L.R. 915.

Executory contracts concluded before the outbreak of war even with an alien enemy are merely suspended during the war as regards the right to performance and right of action, and are avoided or dissolved only in certain circumstances, among them, if their performance necessitates intercourse with the enemy during the war (a).

A agreed to sell goods to B to be shipped in June, July and August 1914 in equal proportions. The first shipment was duly delivered. The second shipment was on its way seized by the Ceylon Government but was subsequently released and arrived late. B was willing to take delivery on paying the price and usual lading charges, but owing to disputes between the parties as to payment of extra charges caused by the seizure of the ship by the Ceylon Government, A refused to deliver B the documents of title to enable him to obtain delivery, and eventually sold the goods to third parties.

Held, that though a promise is excused by a supervening impossibility caused by act of law, a temporary interruption of the voyage followed by a release of the goods does not avoid the contract, and that A having broken the contract which subsisted in spite of the seizure was liable to pay damages to B (b).

As a general rule unconditional contracts are not dissolved by their performance becoming impossible owing to war. Sett v. Madhoram Hurdecass, 33 Ind. Cas. 540.

(20) Shipping contract—Carriage by sea—Shipper and shipowner, their rights and liabilities—Omission to call at appointed port—Breach of contract—Damages, suit for.

It is well settled that engagements to ship goods and to keep space for goods must be punctually performed and a shipper is bound to have his cargoes ready to ship when the ship calls. But a shipper may dispense with the ship's calling at the port, if he is not ready with his cargo for shipment.

Where the defendants bound themselves under a contract to ship the plaintiff's cargo at Cuddalore during the months of July and August by the defendant's steamer, and the defendant's steamer arrived at Madras on the 7th August 1914, ~~on~~ route for Cuddalore but the plaintiff was not in a position to ship any cargo and in answer to the repeated enquiries made by the defendant's agent the plaintiff intimated to him his inability to ship any cargo and promised to let him know after consulting his buyers if he was in a position to ship and the steamer after waiting at Madras till the 21st August proceeded to Calcutta.

Held, that under the circumstances, the plaintiff shipper had dispensed with the defendant's steamer calling at Cuddalore, there was no breach of contract on the part of the defendants in not having shipped the cargo and that therefore the plaintiff's suit for damages against the defendant company was not maintainable. *Govinda Pillay v. If there is only an agreement on the part of a minor to buy and on the part of a major to sell and nothing more, and the former afterwards refuses to perform his part of the contract, the latter would not be able to hold him liable under the contract because a minor is not, under the Indian Contract Act, competent to make a contract which is defined as being an agreement enforceable by law. But where in addition to the agreement the minor has paid the price and has obtained a transfer of the property, the transfer cannot be held to be void, especially as it is the act of the seller who is at the time competent not only to contract but also to make a transfer of his property to any one he likes (a). right in certain immovable properties in favour of the brothers of S.

Held, per Sadasiva Aiyar, J. (Moore, J., diss.) that, as the document was intended to be and was actually 'caused' by the threat, it was voidable as having been brought about by coercion, that it was immaterial to whose prejudice the threat was made, that prejudices to the life of S was sufficient to bring it within the definition of coercion, and that the document was further invalidated by the fact that it was brought about by undue influence, inasmuch as it was executed at a time when the executants were distressed in mind owing to the strength of the threat and when their mental capacity was temporarily affected by reason of such mental distress.

Quare.—Whether prejudice or injury to sentiments, feelings, or supposed spiritual welfare is also contemplated in the definition of 'coercion' in the Contract Act?

The line between coercion and undue influence is sometimes thin and it is possible to conceive of cases where the act might fall under both heads.

Per Moore, J.—That the words, 'to the prejudice of any person' occurring in S. 15, Contract Act, must be read with both branches of the section, that prejudice to the life of S was insufficient in law to bring the threat within the definition of 'coercion' or 'undue influence,' and that consequently the document was valid' Chikkam Ammiraju v. Where a hundi was given with a view to stifle the prosecution, the Courts cannot give a decree on the hundi (b).

Where one party used his position as prosecutor to secure monies which, but for the arrest, he would not have got, the principle of the parties being in pari delicto cannot apply. In a suit to recover money so paid the defendant should not be estopped from proving that the money which he seeks to retain was really due to him (c).

(14) S. 18 (2)—Misrepresentation—Ability to discover truth—Hotel keeper—Landlord and tenant—Right to sue for rent—Breach of contract—Distraint.

The defendant wrote to the plaintiff, proprietress of a hotel, enquiring if certain accommodation for his family was available and asked if the accommodation required could be had in the same block as the dining hall. The plaintiff sent plan of a cottage in the close proximity of the hotel and stated that the accommodation was not available in the main buildings. The defendant made no further reference to any desire to get rooms in the main buildings and stated that he would be glad to take the accommodation offered by the plaintiff from the beginning of April next for the season and repeated the terms agreed to, viz., Rs. 300 per mensem including board. On the 12th April the defendant's wife took possession of the flat but left it on the 16th of April, the main and the only relevant reason assigned being the distance of the flat from the main buildings which was found to be 182 yards.

The plaintiff sued for recovery of rent for a period of 4 months calculating rent at Rs. 180 per month.

The Munsif dismissed the suit on the ground that defendant had been induced to enter into the contract by reason of misrepresentation falling under sub-S. 2 of S. 18 of the Contract Act.

The Divisional Judge agreed with the Munsif that there had been such misrepresentation, but he further found that the contract was not voidable because the defendant had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence. He disagreed with the finding of the Munsif that the relation between the parties was that of landlord and tenant and held that the plaintiff was only entitled to sue for damages for breach of the contract. He granted the plaintiff a decree for Rs. 100 as damages.

Held, (1) that the defendant had the means of discovering the truth with ordinary diligence; (2) that there was nothing to show that the defendant attached importance to proximity to main buildings and there was no good reason to suppose that the plaintiff ought to have anticipated that the defendant would be specially particular regarding the question of distance; (3) that as between the parties the position of the plaintiff was not that of an inn-keeper but of a boarding house-keeper who receives his boarders by special arrangement and makes such bargain as he chooses as to the price to be paid by him; and that the status of landlord and tenant existed between the parties.

In the absence of a plea that the amount which the plaintiff had charged on account of rent of the premises only was disproportionate, the Chief Court granted a decree for full amount of the claim.

If the agreement for the payment is that a lump sum be paid in respect of board and lodging there is no right of distress for the recovery of such payment, but if the boarder is entitled to the exclusive occupation of a room or part of a room and an agreed rent is payable in respect of his occupation such rent may be distrained for. A.L. It is obviously impossible for a Court of justice to give effect to a contract, the meaning of which it is unable to find out with reasonable clearness. So a condition in a partnership written contract which gives one party the right to specify the share of profits to be assigned to the other but which does not afford the slightest indication as to the proportion of losses which one party is to bear in the partnership is void for uncertainty.

A Court cannot undertake to supply defects or ambiguities according to its own notions of what is reasonable, for this would be not to enforce a contract made by the parties but to make a new contract for them (b).

When the terms of a document are ambiguous on the face of it parole evidence is inadmissible to prove the intention of the executant.

Where a partnership was apparently contemplated but the terms thereof could not be ascertained the relationship of principal and agent does not exist.

A plea not set up in the lower Court nor mentioned in the memorandum of appeal even, cannot be raised for the first time in the Chief Court at the time of the hearing. Barkat Ram v. Anant Ram, 31 Ind. Cas. 632.

This was a suit to enforce specific performance of a contract to sell to the plaintiffs for Rs. 4,500 a 4-anna share in a village together with cultivating rights in sir. By the terms of the contract, the first defendant undertook to apply, under S. 45 of the C.P. Tenancy Act, for sanction to transfer his sir land without reservation of the right of occupancy. The contract also provided that the first defendant should pay Rs. 1,000 as damages, if he should refuse to sell the property after obtaining sanction. The first defendant applied for sanction, but sanction was refused, and thereupon he sold the property, without cultivating rights in sir to second defendant. The plaintiffs in this suit asked that the first defendant should be made to execute a sale-deed for the property including cultivating rights in sir, or in the alternative, to execute a sale-deed, reserving cultivating rights in sir, for a smaller consideration of Rs. 3,500.

Held that, S. 32 of the Contract Act, the contract for the sale was contingent on the grant of sanction, and the contract cannot be specifically enforced at all since the sanction was refused, and there was no alternative contract to meet the event of its being refused.

Held also that, Ss. 14 and 15 of the Specific Relief Act have no application to the case. These two sections refer to cases where the inability to perform the whole contract was not contemplated by the contracting parties. Where, as here, the contracting parties knew of and contemplated the possibility of the whole contract being incapable of performance, for reasons beyond the control of either of the parties, the sections have no application. Before a vendor of produce can give delivery on behalf of his purchaser to a European Firm, it is necessary for the purchaser either to make a contract for the sale of goods to the European Firm or otherwise to arrange that they shall take delivery on his behalf and to hand to the vendor a delivery order requesting the firm to accept the goods against such and such contract or on his behalf.

Generally, the vendor is under no obligation to see that the purchaser takes delivery within time all that he has to do is to offer delivery within time and to give all customary assistance to the purchaser in taking delivery. (Vide Contract Act, S. 38).

The drawings of samples and analysis are acts to be performed by the buyer in order to satisfy himself that the goods tendered for delivery are according to the contract. S. 38 (3) of the Contract Act requires that the buyer shall have this facility, and therefore tender must be made sometime before the date specified in the contract.

But where, on tender, goods are accepted subject to analysis, the buyers could only refuse to accept delivery on the ground that the goods were not of the contract quality. Firm of Ruttonji Burjorji v. Firm of Motamal Bhag-Chand, 9 S.L.R. 160 = 32 Ind. Cas. 720.

Under the terms of S. 43 of the Contract Act the landlord is entitled to get a decree for money against any one or more of the tenants. A Court for rent is the common indebitatus Court, viz., a Court to recover a debt. That clearly falls within the provisions of S. 43 and the promisee is entitled to require performance by any one or more of the promisors. The mere absence from India of one of the promisors in a suit in British India, where no plea in abatement or a similar plea is permitted, is not a fatal bar to the suit. There cannot be any objection to the maintainability of a suit against some of the heirs of a tenant to recover the rent that has accrued due after the death of the tenant. *Rai Bahador Lalit Mohan Sinha Roy v. Where a suit against several joint promisors was dismissed on the ground that the kabuliat which was the basis of the suit was fictitious and where pending the appeal one of the defendants died and the appeal was given up against his heirs.

Held, that the plaintiff cannot rely on S. 44 of the Contract Act and that he cannot proceed against the others for the entire claim.

As in the case, the contract was found to be illusory and of no effect so far as the deceased defendant is concerned, this is not a case of giving release to one of several joint promisors.

Held that, S. 43 of the Contract Act cannot be invoked because the plaintiff did choose to bring a suit against all joint contractors and the contest proceeded on the basis of a joint contract.

If the Court were to give a decree against the other defendants, it would work injustice upon them, in that supposing they were jointly liable they would not be entitled to claim contribution against the heirs of the deceased defendant who has, by the decision of a competent Court, been declared to be not liable.

Held further, that in the absence of the representatives of the deceased defendant, the plaintiff cannot sue for the shares of the defendants on record for their shares cannot be determined in the absence of those representatives. *Jogesh Chandra Chackrabutty v. (51) S. 47—Sale—Vendor's duty to tender goods at the time specified—Delivery of Railway receipt not sufficient—Bombay Cotton Trade Association Rules, 17.

The plaintiff agreed to sell to the defendant 200 bales of cotton—March delivery—between the 15th and 25th. The contract was expressed to be governed by the Rules of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association; and provided that in no circumstances was the contract to be cancelled. One of the Rules of the Association required that the vendor was bound to tender a delivery order backed by the goods before 1 P.M. on the due date. In the event of his failure to do so, the buyer was entitled to (1) cancel the contract; (2) buy at seller's risk, or (3) close at the room-rate of the day. On the 19th March, the plaintiff gave to the defendant a railway receipt for 100 bales. The defendant applied to the railway authorities for the goods on the 25th; but as he failed to receive any, he returned the railway receipt to the plaintiff on the 26th intimating to him, that, by reason of non-performance of the contract by the plaintiff, the same was cancelled. The plaintiff alleged that the terms of the contract excluded cancellation, and that, had the defendant informed him of the non-delivery of 100 bales on the due date, he had another 100 bales ready for delivery. The plaintiff, therefore, sued to recover the difference between the contract rate and the market rate on the due date:

Held, (1) that it was the plaintiff's duty to satisfy himself that the goods covered by the receipt had actually arrived before the due date, and if he failed to do so he would not be absolved from the obligation of tendering the delivery order backed by the goods;

(2) that the plaintiff having been in breach could not sue to recover damages on the contract. Mukanchand Rajaram Balia v. Nihalchand Gurmukhral, 18 Bom. L.R. 96=32 Ind. Cas. 944=40 B. 517.

(55) S. 56—Contract with enemy—Trading with enemy—Hostile Foreigners Trading Order—Impossibility of performance—War avoids all contracts with enemies.

On the 18th February 1914, the defendants (a German joint-stock company incorporated at Hanover, having a branch in Bombay under the sole management of a German subject) agreed to purchase from the plaintiffs waste produced in the latter's mills for the year ending the 31st December 1914, and to take its delivery at least once monthly at rates specified. A deposit of Government Promissory notes of 3½ per cent of the nominal value of Rs. 2,200 was made by the defendants. On the 4th August 1914, war was declared between Great Britain and Germany. The plaintiffs wrote to the defendants on the 18th idem calling 'upon them to take delivery of waste under the contract. The defendants' manager replied on the 22nd saying that, owing to the present political position, they were not allowed to do business in India, and desired the plaintiffs to keep delivery of waste standing over until business was allowed to be resumed. On the 5th September 1914, the manager was interned as an alien enemy at Ahmednagar. The plaintiffs called upon the manager on the 11th November to take delivery of the waste; and again on 3rd December wrote to him to comply with notice of November on or before 8th December—a time, which was subsequently extended to the 16th idem. The manager relied in reply upon

S. 56 (2), Contract Act. The Hostile Foreigners Trading Order was issued on the 14th November 1914. The defendants applied to the Local Government for permission to carry on their local business; but permission was not granted till 8th February 1915. The plaintiffs sold the waste by auction and sued to recover damages occasioned to them on such sale; and claimed to retain the deposit towards such damages:

Held, dismissing the suit, (1) that, owing to circumstances arising from the outbreak of war, it had become impossible for the defendants to perform their part of the contract;

(2) that, even assuming that it only became impossible after the 14th November, the granting of further time up to the 16th December by the plaintiffs for taking delivery waived any breach committed before that date;

(3) that the defendants were entitled to a return of their deposit under S. 56, Contract Act.

(56) S. 56—Term of contract impossible to perform—Period fixed for performance—Test of impossibility.

In a suit for damages for breach of contract, the main term of which was to supply 151 bales of cotton twist of a particular quality manufactured by the Raipur Mills within 75 days, the defendant set up that this item of the contract was impossible of performance. The District Judge held that the yarns mentioned in the contract were not available at Ahmedabad Raipur Mills at the time of the contract (Ex. A) and the contract was therefore impossible of performance.

Held, that the real test of impossibility is whether it was practically impossible for the defendant to get the quality of yarn contracted for within the time fixed in the contract. Sooryaprakasalingam Garu v. Shaw Teikam-lal, (1916) 2 M.W.N. 131=35 Ind. Cas. 625.

Ss. 60 and 61 of the Contract Act provide a very simple Code of Procedure analogous in all particulars to the law of appropriation that prevails in England. If the debtor does not appropriate, and he has the first right, then the creditor may appropriate, and he may appropriate to any particular debt or to any particular portion of a running account. But if neither party appropriate, S. 61 is an enabling section, which entitles the Court to declare that such payments shall be appropriated, in discharge of the debts in order of time.

Where there is a running account and payments are made extending over the entire period of that account from its inception to its end, the Court should imply that the payments made shall be applied in discharge in the order of date in which the debts were contracted (a).

The general rule is, that the party who pays the money has a right to apply that payment as he thinks fit. If there are several debts due from him, he has a right to say to which of those debts the payment shall be applied. If he does not make a specific application at the time of payment, then the right of application generally devolves on the party which receives the money. But there is a third rule, viz., that where one of several partners dies and the partnership is in debt, and the surviving partners continue their dealings with a particular creditor, and the latter joins the transactions of the old and new firms in one entire account, then the payments made from time to time by the surviving partners must be applied to the old debt (b). *Bishun Perkaash Narain Singh v. (62) S. 62—Absence of privity of contract—Direction to purchaser to pay vendor's debt—Right of creditor to enforce such undertaking.

Where in a sale deed the vendor directed the vendee to pay off certain debts due by him to certain creditors, such creditors of the vendor can institute a suit against the vendee and recover the amount due to them, though they had no notice of the agreement between the vendor and vendee in respect of payment of their debts.

The right of a stranger to enforce an agreement in such cases is in the nature of a trust or quasi contract. The claim in such cases is not based on novation of contract or a substituted contract. The purchaser is treated as a trustee of the vendor's creditors for the money reserved in his hands for their benefit. Dwarka Nath Ash v. Priya Nath Malki, 36 Ind. Cas. 792.

The plaintiffs consigned, under a charter-party, 2,500 bales of cotton for Genoa on board a steamer belonging to the defendants, and paid Rs. 32,160 for freight. The steamer, however, did not leave the harbour and abandoned the voyage, as the Government prohibited the import of cotton into Genoa. Eventually, the steamer unloaded her cargo; but the defendants required the plaintiffs to deposit with them Rs. 12,000 to cover the expenses and loss incurred by the ship. The plaintiffs having paid the amount under protest, sued to recover the amounts of freight as well as deposit:

Held, (1) that the case was governed by S. 65, Contract Act, and the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount paid by them in advance for freight;

(2) that the defendants were entitled to reasonable expenses in unloading, etc., of the cargo.

The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendants the whole amount paid by him to save the property, a portion of which was held by him as a tenant under defendant No. 1. There was an alternative case, viz, that, if the plaintiff was held liable to contribute, then, a decree for proportionate amounts might be passed against the defendants.

The primary Court held that the plaintiff was a co-sharer and liable to contribute, and on that footing gave a modified decree to the plaintiff. The plaintiff did not appeal against that decree. On second appeal by defendant No. 2:

Held, that, as the suit was one for contribution by a sharer in joint property in respect of a payment made by him of money due from a co-sharer, it was exempted from the cognizance of Small Cause Courts Act under Art. 41 of the second schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, and second appeal lay to the High Court.

S. 69 of the Contract Act was intended to include the case not only of personal liability, but all liabilities to payments for which owners of lands were indirectly liable, those liabilities being imposed upon the lands held by them (a).

Plaintiff and defendant No. 1 were co-sharers of a taluk. The share of the defendant No. 1 was purchased by defendant No. 2 in execution of a mortgage decree. Prior to the purchase of the defendant No. 2, the landlord of the taluk had obtained a decree for arrears of rent of the taluk and after the purchase by defendant No. 2 put up the taluk to sale in execution of the rent decree, when the plaintiff deposited the entire amount due to the landlord and saved the taluk:

Held, that defendant No. 2 was a person "bound by law to pay" within the meaning of S. 69 of the Contract Act, although his liability was not a double liability like that of the plaintiff.

That the plaintiff was a person "interested in the payment of money" within the meaning of S. 69, as he was "bound by law to pay" by reason of the liability attaching to the land.

That defendant No. 2, in the absence of any thing to denote the contrary, purchased the land charged with the rent which was due in respect of it at the time of its purchase, and there being no privity between him and defendant No. 1, the judgment-debtor, he could not recover from the latter the money which he Defendant's holding having been advertised for sale in a rent decree plaintiff claiming to be a mortgagor thereof deposited the amount to avert the sale and defendant benefited by such payment. Defendant however impugned the right claimed by plaintiff and asserted the mortgage to be a mere forgery.

In a suit by plaintiff to recover from defendant the said amount the mortgage having been found to be a forgery, held the plaintiff had no legal right to recover the amount. He was not a person having any interest in the property within the meaning of S. 170 (3) of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the alleged interest being fictitious and non-existent and that plaintiff ought not to have been allowed to make the deposit.

Nor was plaintiff a person interested in the payment of the money within the meaning of S. 69 of the Contract Act. Interest means 'lawful interest' and not an interest from his own point of view in making the payment. The payment also was not 'lawful' within the meaning of S. 70 of the Contract Act.

The mere enjoyment of the benefit of the payment is not sufficient to support an implied contract to repay. The obligation to repay cannot be determined merely by nice considerations of what may be fair or proper according to the highest morality and specially having regard to the fact that defendant protested against plaintiff making the deposit it is impossible to say that there was any implied undertaking to repay. *Panchkori Ghosh v. During the pendency of proceedings for sale of mortgaged property in execution of a decree for sale upon the mortgage, defendant No. 2, who held a decree for money against the mortgagor, had the property sold in execution of his decree and purchased the property himself. When the property was thereafter put up to sale under the mortgage decree the mortgagor borrowed a sum of money from the plaintiff and paid off the mortgagee. The property was then sold by the mortgagor to the plaintiff for the sum borrowed as also for a further sum paid. The plaintiff having been ejected from the property by defendant No. 2 sued to recover the consideration money from the mortgagor; and as regards the money paid to the mortgagee, he claimed to stand in the shoes of the mortgagee and asked that the amount should be recovered by sale of the mortgaged property or from defendant No. 2 personally, under S. 70 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff's claim to compensation under S. 70 of the Indian Contract Act was not established, inasmuch as the payment was made not only without the consent, but without the knowledge, of defendant No. 2, the object of the payment being to benefit the plaintiff himself:

(2) that the plaintiff who was a stranger paying off a subsisting mortgage was entitled to be subrogated to the position of the mortgagee; and was therefore, entitled to recover the sum paid to the mortgagee by sale of the mortgaged property. *Tangya Fala v. - (90) S. 74—Penalty, if limited to money—Stipulation to convey immovable property in default, whether a penalty.

The stipulation by way of penalty contemplated by S. 74 of the Indian Contract Act need not be a stipulation to pay a certain sum of money alone. It may be any other stipulation, to wit, an agreement to convey property.

A entered into an agreement to purchase certain immovable property from B for Rs. 10,000. A for completing the sale borrowed from C, Rs. 6,500 under an arrangement whereby A agrees to pay C, the said sum of Rs. 6,500 on a certain date. In default he agreed to execute a conveyance for Rs. 6,500 alone in favour of C of the immovable property which he purchased from B. In a suit by C against A for specific performance of the agreement to convey.

- (91) S. 74—Deposit by purchaser—Stipulation as to forfeiture if purchaser makes default—Relief against forfeiture—Earnest money, nature and origin of—Costs.

In every case governed by the Indian Contract Act, 1872, where a deposit is made by a purchaser with the vendor as part payment in advance of the purchase-money, subject to a stipulation that it shall be forfeited if the purchaser shall make default, S. 74 of that enactment applies, and gives the Court a discretion to deal with the question of forfeiture on equitable principles.

To come within the principles applicable to earnest-money, such a deposit must be something paid over at the time of entering upon the bargain, and those principles cannot rightly be applied to any future payment to be made under the contract.

Though the Indian Contract Act, 1872, purports to deal only with "certain parts of the law relating to contracts," it would appear that, where it does treat with a subject in a way at variance with the law of England, it should be regarded as exhaustive, and binding on the Courts in India.

There are deposits by way of earnest varying from a mere symbol of sincerity to as much as one-half of the purchase-money, and there are also conditions of forfeiture made applicable to all proportions of the price, from a mere fraction to all but a mere fraction thereof, in the varying circumstances of contracts which have come before the Courts in England. To meet the varying equities arising in these cases the Judges resort to artificial rules of construction for the purpose of deciding whether a sum, deposited and agreed to be forfeited in case of default by the party depositing, was only an earnest of the bargain or liquidated damages, or a penalty; the real object in each case being to administer equity and relieve parties from their oppressive contracts; and for this purpose a fictitious intention has sometimes been ascribed to the contracting parties by the employment of extremely artificial rules which have perplexed English lawyers themselves, and made it impossible to find any general rule equally applicable to all cases. It is natural to assume that the Indian Legislature sought to resolve this complex question into one simple rule, embodied in S. 74, Indian Contract Act, to the provisions of which S. 64 is, subject. (Per Batten and Stanyon, A.J. Cs.)

The nature and origin of earnest money explained (a).

The mere fact that the parties erroneously described as earnest-money the first instalment of purchase-money does not, make it really earnest-money.

Contract Act (IX of 1872)—(Continued).(92) S. 74—Interest—Penal rate.

A stipulation that interest in a bond should run at higher rate, if payment is not made on the due date, from the date of bond, is penal and cannot be enforced, since such stipulation cannot have retrospective effect. It is entirely in the discretion of Court to award interest in such cases at such rate as it deems proper. Sonal Singh v. Randhir Singh, 35 Ind. Cas. 624.

SUNDAR LAL, J.

(93) S. 74—Provision regarding payment of interest on default—Compound interest—Relief against penal clause—Assessment of compensation—Conduct of parties.

The word "penalty", when used in relation to contracts, is a liability agreed to by parties to be imposed as a vindictive punishment on the party committing the breach of contract, and not merely as reasonable and even liberal compensation to the other side injured by the breach of the contract. It is a liability agreed to by the parties to be imposed as a punishment on the party committing the breach of the contract.

Until the amendment of S. 74 of the Contract Act, the doctrine laid down for the most part in Indian Courts was that an agreement to pay enhanced interest from date of default was not a penalty within the meaning of the unamended section and must be enforced. But the amendment of the section declared that, if the contract contained any other stipulation by way of a penalty the Court should award not the penalty stipulated for, but reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount of the penalty, and further explained that a stipulation for increased interest from the date of default may be a stipulation by way of penalty.

In the case of an agreement to pay compound interest at the same rate as the simple interest agreed on, the debtor fixes the price paid for the accommodation at a progressive rate and the element of punishment or penalty is absent. But where the parties agreed that, if the debtor does not keep his engagement to pay the interest by due date either at the non-progressive rate when the interest first falls due, or at the progressive rate on subsequent defaults, the element of punishment appears. A penalty then arises for non-compliance with the conditions (a).

A penal clause is not "invalidated by S. 74 of the Contract Act. The clause remains effective, but the amount awarded as compensation for its breach is left to the discretion of the Court up to the maximum fixed by the clause. In determining the amount of compensation the Court should examine the evidence showing the conduct of the parties subsequent to the execution of the deed embodying the contract (b).

A mortgage-deed contained inter alia.

(a) A primary obligation to pay certain amount in fifteen instalments with simple interest at 8 per cent. per annum payable six-monthly on balance due after payment of instalments due.

(b) A secondary obligation to repay, in case of default of instalments, compound interest at 12 per cent. per annum with six-monthly rests on each instalment or part of an instalment not paid by due date.

(c) Another secondary obligation to repay, in case of default of interest due, compound interest at 12 per cent. per annum with six-monthly rests on the balance of interests not paid by due date. Held, that the stipulations, (b) and (c), are stipulations by way of penalty within the meaning of S. 74, Contract Act, as amended by Act VI of 1899 and had to be relieved against. *Babu Narendra Bahadur Singh v. (94) S. 74—Penalty in compromise decree—Power of executing Court to interfere.

A Court executing a compromise decree is competent to go behind the terms of the decree.

Where a compromise decree provides that out of the amount claimed and costs a decree be passed for Rs. 400 after deducting Rs. 508 remitted by the plaintiff and that the defendant do pay the said amount in certain stipulated instalments and that in default of payment of any instalment, the whole amount shall become payable at once together with a sum remitted, there is no penalty whatever. The case is precisely an ordinary one of discount for prompt payment. But where in addition to this stipulation, which is one merely restoring the original principal if the conditions of remittance are not fulfilled, there is a further provision that interest shall be paid on the whole amount at 36 per cent. per annum, this provision strictly comes within the purview of S. 74 of the Contract Act. Having regard to the unconscionable nature of the original bargain the plaintiff is not entitled to any interest by way of compensation. Jamil Fakir v. Ram Lal Ghose Chowdhury, 32 Ind. Cas. 697.

Where a mortgage-bond provided that each one of the mortgagors was liable for the whole amount of the mortgage, a subsequent verbal agreement providing that each individual mortgagor was to be liable only for his proportionate share of the amount being one materially varying the terms of the bond cannot be proved in evidence. S. 92 of the Evidence Act bars proof of such agreement.

A release of one of the mortgagors will not operate as a release of the other joint mortgagors though the mortgagees did not at the time of release expressly reserve his remedies against the other mortgagors.

A stipulation in a mortgage of immovable property by ignorant and poor mortgagors for payment of interest at 75 per cent. per annum, the loan being one which was intended as a merely temporary loan was held to be a penal provision though the case might not come under S. 16 of the Contract Act and 15 per cent. interest was allowed instead as a reasonable compensation. A provision for payment of one rate of interest only and not alternative rates in different contingencies may be a penal provision when in the circumstances of the case the rate is very high. *Krishna Charan Barman v. Plaintiffs who were fariachs used to purchase loose jute from dealers (beparis) and sell them to, amongst others, defendants' firm at Chandpur. The jute brought by the fariachs used to be stored in a godown called the "fariachs" godown, and according to the usage of trade at Chandpur, the sale was not complete until the jute had been examined, selected and weighed by the purchasing firm. The goods were, however, kept subject to the firm's lien for advances to the fariach, and it appeared that, once the goods were stored in the godown, the fariachs were not allowed to remove or sell them to other persons. Some jute which was stored by plaintiffs in defendants' godown, and was insured by the latter as belonging to the firm, caught fire before it had been tested, selected and weighed and was burnt :

Held, that title in the jute had not passed to the defendants, and the loss fell on the plaintiffs.

That the contract being one for the sale of unascertained goods, what remained to be done by the buyer to the goods appropriated to the contract by the seller was not merely for the purpose of ascertaining the price but was also for the purpose of placing the buyers in a position to say whether and to what extent they would for their part accept the goods offered to them.

That the fact that the seller could not remove or sell the goods from the godown did not show that the property in the jute had passed to the firm.

That the defendants, who had an interest in the goods, were justified in insuring them to protect that interest, and were entitled to receive the whole amount of the policies of insurance to indemnify themselves against their loss and were not bound to apply any portion of it to the plaintiffs' benefit.

When nothing remains to be done to the goods by the seller for the purpose of ascertaining the price, then prima facie the property in them passes although they have not been weighed by the buyer. It would be otherwise in England if the parties intended that property in the goods should not pass until the goods had been weighed.

The Indian Law is the same and the provisions of S. 81 do not exclude the question of intention which is laid down in the English cases as the determining factor. Abdul Aziz Bepari v. Jogendra Krishna Ray, 20 C.W.N. 1224—44 C. 98—36 Ind. Cas. 119.

The Indian Contract Act is an amending as well as a consolidating Act, and beyond the reasonable interpretation of its provisions there is no means of determining whether any particular section is intended to consolidate or amend the previously existing law.

There is no improbability in the Indian Legislature taking the lead of the English in a legal reform, the call for legislative action in India being so much more numerous.

Railway receipts issued to the consignors of goods are documents showing title to goods within Ss. 102 and 108 and documents of title to goods within S. 178 of the Indian Contract Act, and a second buyer in good faith and for consideration who obtains an assignment of such a receipt obtains thereby constructive delivery of the goods represented by the bill, so that the vendor's right of stoppage ceases under S. 102 upon such assignment.

The expression "instrument of title" in S. 103 means the same thing as "documents showing title" in Ss. 102 and 108 and "documents of title" in S. 178 of the Contract Act; the use of different expressions to convey the same sense showing merely that the draughtsman of the Act was not very careful in the use of language.

Where, therefore, a railway receipt is assigned by way of pledge to secure an advance made specifically upon it in good faith under S. 103 of the Contract Act, the vendor cannot, except on payment or tender to the pledgee of advance so made, stop the goods in transit. *Ramdas Vitthaladas Durbar v. In this case a buyer failed to take delivery of goods, and the seller re-sold the goods, in the exercise of a power conferred upon him. In such re-sale, the seller himself bought the goods benami. The seller sued defendant for re-sale damages. The defendant impugned the re-sale as being void. At the hearing the plaint was amended by the addition of an alternative claim for damages based on the market rate. Plaintiff was given a decree for this alternative claim.

Held, (i) that the plaintiff was entitled to renounce the re-sale and pursue his claim for damages based on the market rate.

(ii) A re-sale must be conducted openly and fairly. The inference to be drawn from the plaintiffs buying the shares benami is that they intended to conceal the fact that they had bought in the shares. The onus of showing that the defendant knew that the plaintiffs had bought the shares was therefore on the plaintiffs.

(iii) Where it is not alleged however that the shares were bought in at less than their market value, the question whether or not the defendant knew of the benami character of the sale is immaterial.

(iv) If the plaintiff's conduct had not been so improper with regard to the re-sale, the defendant would have been entitled to have damages assessed upon the basis of the market value.

(v) A plaintiff can sue for damages by way of re-sale and in the alternative for damages based upon the market rate on the due date (a).

(vi) The buyer could have held the seller to the re-sale; and if prejudiced by an improper re-sale could have claimed damages by way of set off, and to be placed in the same position as if the re-sale had been properly held and a proper price obtained (b). Maung Gyl Maung v. A contract was made on the 23rd April 1914 for 125 bales of jute. It was guaranteed to yield after outting 70 per cent. good sacking warp, and the payment was to be made when the buyers (defendants), received the documents from the Railway Company, the vendor (plaintiff) was to receive 90 per cent. of the price and the balance 10 per cent., when the goods were actually delivered. The documents were received by the defendants from the Railway Company on the 23rd July and the goods were actually delivered to them on the 31st July. The goods were found to be inferior in quality. The defendants did not adduce sufficient evidence that they definitely rejected the goods before the 22nd August. In a suit for recovery of price of 125 bales of jute:

Held, that the goods not being in accordance with the contract, the defendants, if they chose, could have rejected them when tendered or kept them for a time reasonably sufficient for examining and trying them, and then refused to accept them.

That the burden lay upon the defendants to prove that they did in fact reject the goods, and as they failed to discharge such onus, they were liable for the price. Klassendoyal Jitsaria v. Askaran Chowthmull, 23 C.L.J. 415=34 Ind. Cas. 290.

(113) S. 118—Contract for sale of goods to be manufactured—Goods tendered inferior to sample—Reference to arbitration—Award directing acceptance of goods subject to allowance—Custom of trade permitting allowance—Custom cannot vary written contract—Delivery of goods manufactured by giving notice and debit entries.

The defendants entered into seven contracts (marked A to G) with the plaintiffs for the sale and delivery of piece-goods of certain specified descriptions at a fixed price. The contracts were made subject to the condition that the defendants were not to give delivery of similar goods to other dealers during the period fixed for delivery under the contracts. The goods sold were under manufacture, the terms common to all the contracts being that the defendants' giving notice that the goods were ready was tantamount to delivery; that the plaintiffs were thenceforward to pay interest at the rate of nine per cent., and also to pay godown rent, insurance charges, etc.

Contract A was for the sale of 251 bales, of which some were delivered and paid for. Disputes then arose between the parties as to 84 bales on the ground that the goods were not according to the contract. The dispute was, under the terms of the contract, referred to arbitration. The arbitrators found that there was a difference in finish, quality, width, and in some cases of design and colour, and they decided that plaintiffs were entitled to an allowance of 0-4-0 per piece on 84 bales. Neither party accepted the award. The plaintiffs claimed that, owing to the difference in quality, they were absolved from accepting and paying for 84 bales.

Under contracts B, C and D, the defendants contracted to sell 658 bales out of which 159 bales were delivered. The plaintiffs objected to receive the remaining 499 bales on the ground that the defendants had broken the contracts by selling similar goods to others during the currency of the contracts.

Of the 305 bales contracted for under contracts E, F and G, 150 bales were duly delivered: the contracts were cancelled as to 42 bales; and 113 remained to be delivered.

The plaintiffs filed a suit to recover 113 bales of piece goods under contracts E, F and G and offered Rs. 7,286 as their price. The defendants counter claimed Rs. 20,280 being the price of the bales of which the plaintiffs failed to take delivery under all the contracts. They pleaded in defence a custom of the trade that the buyer had not the right to reject merely for difference in quality, etc., if the difference was not excessive or unreasonable and could be met by an allowance in the price :

Held, dismissing the plaintiffs' suit and allowing the defendants' counter-claim, (1) that, as the custom set up was inconsistent with the stipulation in the contract that a certain quality of goods should be delivered in return for payment of a certain fixed price, it could not be pleaded (a).

(2) That the parties having referred the question of the allowance to the arbitrators, they were bound by the award.

(3) That as regards contracts B, C and D. the defendants had committed no breach, and their debiting the goods to the buyer and sending them a delivery order for signature marked the period of delivery and rendered the plaintiffs liable for non-acceptance of the goods. *Ruttonsey Rewji v. P stood surety for a debt due by N to S. N died. S sued N's legal representatives and P for the recovery of the debt. The defendants pleaded inter alia that N, at the time of the contract, was a minor, that the contract was void, that the debt was not binding on his legal representatives and that P had not stood surety for payment. The plaintiff withdrew his claim against the legal representatives and elected to proceed against P alone. It was found by the Courts below that N was a minor at the time of the contract, and that, as the plaintiff had by his conduct discharged the legal representatives of the principal debtor from liability, the surety was equally discharged under S. 134, Contract Act.

Held, by the Chief Court, that P, in the present circumstances, must be regarded as the principal debtor, and the fact that the plaintiff withdrew his claim against N's legal representatives cannot affect P's liability to pay whatever amount is found due to the plaintiff on the basis of the contract.

P, who subscribed to the written statement filed by N's legal representatives, must himself be taken to have urged the non-liability of the latter, and it was therefore with his implied assent that they were discharged from liability.

Where the original agreement is void as in the case of a minor's contract in India, the surety is liable as the principal debtor, for, in such a case, the contract of the so-called surety is not a collateral but a principal contract. *Sohan Lal v. Contribution.

(1) Contribution, suit for—Judgment-debtors jointly liable—One judgment-debtor satisfying whole decree—Rule relating to joint tort-feasors not applicable.

A brought a suit against B alleging that the latter had adopted his son who subsequently was entitled to the estate left by B's husband. B filed a counter-suit in which she claimed several lakhs of rupees from A and her other brothers as money payable to her by them as messengers of her estate. Both the suits were compromised, and the compromise was embodied in a decree. Under this it was arranged that the brothers would drop the allegation of the adoption by B of A's son and they agreed to pay her a certain sum of money collected by them. Plaintiffs brought the present suit for contribution against the Collector as representing one of their brothers and alleged that they had paid all the money to the decree-holder without the other brother and his sons contributing anything: Held, that the decree-holder being entitled to recover the whole decretal amount from any one of the judgment-debtors, prima facie he who paid the entire amount was entitled to contribution against the others, unless the latter pleaded and proved special circumstances which would render it inequitable that they should contribute to the satisfaction of the decree.

(3) Suit by two plaintiffs jointly—Entire expenses borne by one plaintiff alone—Right to contribution as against co-plaintiff—S. 70, Contract Act—Applicability.

Where two plaintiffs join in the institution of a suit and the suit is conducted by one plaintiff alone and the entire expenses of the suit are borne in the first instance by that plaintiff, a suit for contribution by him against the other plaintiff could succeed only upon one or other of three grounds: first, that there was an agreement between the two plaintiffs that the expenses should be borne proportionately, or secondly, that the plaintiffs had joined in engaging counsel or vakil and that, after the joint engagement of counsel or vakil, the one plaintiff had paid the counsel or vakil on behalf of both or, thirdly, under the provisions of S. 70 of the Contract Act, which lays down that, where a person lawfully does anything for another person not intending to do so

- (5) Contribution against joint debtors—Satisfaction of money decree by execution of a deed of mortgage—Payment, meaning of—Right of contribution against joint debtor through creditor's claim against him dismissed as barred by limitation.

Where the plaintiff, who was one of several joint executors of a simple deed on the basis of which a decree had been passed against him, satisfied the decree by executing a deed of usufructuary mortgage in favour of the decree-holder and brought a suit for contribution against the other joint executors of the deed, held, that the suit was maintainable.

The principle of 106 Eng. Rep., 286 relied in 19 O.C. 44, would not apply to a case such as this where the plaintiff has executed a deed of usufructuary mortgage and has assigned valuable property to the creditor in order that the profits may be enjoyed in lieu of interest and that the property may be held as security for the payment of the debt. The ratio decidendi in 106 Eng. Rep. 286, was that the plaintiff had satisfied the debt by giving his individual promise to pay and had parted with nothing and had done nothing more than undertake a fresh obligation.

Held further, that although the suit of the creditor against one of the executors was dismissed as barred by limitation, yet the plaintiff was entitled to claim contribution against his heirs in respect of the amount which he has paid over and above the amount that was due from him. Muhammad Ramzan Ali Khan v. Muhammad Nasir Khan, 19 O.C. 347=36 Ind. Cas. 774.

Plaintiff who had paid the mortgage amount in a foreclosure suit by the mortgagee brought this suit for contribution against the defendants alleging that they were benefited by such payment in respect of portions of the mortgaged property alleged to be with defendants. The defendants were not parties to the mortgagee's foreclosure suit. Held that the defendants were not bound by the decree in the foreclosure suit and were under no obligation to pay any money in order to satisfy that decretal debt and so the plaintiff cannot be heard to maintain that he has a right to contribution by reason of the fact that he has paid up any money which the defendants were under a legal obligation to pay. The case cannot possibly fall under the provisions of S. 69 of the Contract Act nor can it be

If the properties in the possession of the defendants were part of the mortgaged property, even then, they not having been parties to the foreclosure suit, their right to redeem still exists and they cannot be compelled by a suit for contribution to pay to plaintiff any portion of the money which he paid under the mortgage decree. *Suraj Din v. - (2) Possession—Co-owner—Co-owner's possession when adverse.

Possession is never considered adverse if it can be referred to a lawful title (a).

The possession of one of the owners of a property is in law the possession of his co-owner, and nothing short of ouster or something equivalent to ouster can put an end to that possession (b).

Where, however, the possession of both the co-owners of a property was terminated by a hostile third party, who claimed to hold the property adversely to both of them, and one of the co-owners subsequently came into possession of the property under a lease granted by the adverse possessor and continued to do so for more than 12 years :

Held, that the title of the other co-owner to the property was extinguished inasmuch as the possession of the property must be referred to the title which the co-owner acquired under the lease and not to his title as a co-owner of the property (c). *Blaeswar Gangooly v. - (1) Member of Board of Studies preparing a list of graduated selections from Persian authors for certain examinations—Approval by Board of Studies—Publishing the same selections—Infringement of copyright.

A, a member of the Board of Studies of the Allahabad University, prepared at the request of the convener a list of graduated selections from standard Persian authors for the use of candidates for certain examinations of the University. In preparing these lists he spent considerable labour, learning and skill. The Board of Studies after due consideration adopted with slight modifications the selections shown in the list as the subject for those examinations in Persian and published the lists for the information of the public generally and of the candidates concerned specially. Subsequently to this, B, a firm of publishers, compiled books from the original authors according to these lists:—Held that A had no copyright in the lists, as by laying the result of his labours before the Board of Studies he placed the lists unreservedly at the disposal of the University authorities. Muhammad Abdul Jalil v. Co-sharers.

- (1) Co-owner—Title, denial of—Joint possession—Ouster, what constitutes.

Where the defendants, who appeared to be co-sharers of the plaintiffs as regards the land in dispute, had all along been denying the title of the plaintiffs, and setting up the interest of a third party, and asserted that they had been in possession of the land under that person:

Held, in a suit for recovery of possession of the land upon declaration of title, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for joint possession (a).

Per Mookerjee, J.—Prima facie, co-owners are entitled to hold joint possession of joint property; consequently, if one co-sharer seeks to defeat the claim of another co-sharer to joint possession of joint property, special circumstances must be alleged and established so as to justify exclusive occupation of the joint property by one of the co-owners.

A co-sharer who has been ousted from joint property is entitled to recover joint possession (b).

To constitute ouster a physical eviction is not essential; if a co-owner is in possession on behalf of or under an adverse claimant under such circumstances as to evidence a claim of exclusive right and title and a denial of the right of the other co-owners, there is an ouster in law.

The acceptance by the defendants of a lease of the disputed land from an adverse claimant, and their entry upon the land in assertion of the title so derived from the adverse claimant, should be deemed to be an ouster of their co-sharers, the plaintiffs (c). Jatindra Nath Ray v. A co-sharer in a village, cultivating land in a patti belonging to others, for which no rent was paid set up a claim to be proprietor by adverse possession. There was no evidence that the plaintiff had ever set up till the time of the plaint, any claim of proprietary right to the land during his period of occupation. Held that the mere cultivation of patti land was consistent with a claim to be a tenant or a proprietor or with the fact of his being a mere squatter; and that as the possession of the land by the plaintiff was not in any way proprietary possession, such as would be evidenced by collection of rent from former tenants or by payment of land-revenue, but only cultivating possession, he could not claim to hold as proprietor by reason of adverse possession after twelve years. Bhagwan Din v. (1) Rules of practice—High Court Appellate Side Rules, r. 33. cl. (c)—Batch appeals—Vakil's fee.

Where a District Judge, in disposing of a batch of Appeals in Summary Suits under the Madras Estates Land Act, fixed the Vakil's fee payable to the successful party in each of the appeals at one rupee, instead of the minimum fee of Rs. 20 prescribed by the rules, held that the direction as to costs could not be supported, as the Court had no power, if it gave costs in each case, to reduce the minimum fee as it did, and that the proper course to be allowed in cases in which a number of appeals had been heard together, involving the same point of law and not requiring separate argument, was to grant the usual costs in first three appeals of the batch and to make each party bear his costs in the other appeals. *Ganiraju v. (2) Court Fees Act (VII of 1870), S. 7 (iv) (f) —Administration suit, nature of—Valuation for jurisdiction.

An administration suit by a creditor is an action for an account within the meaning of S. 7 (iv) (f) of the Court Fees Act. In such a suit, the plaintiff is entitled to place his own valuation on the relief claimed and the valuation for purposes of jurisdiction is identical with the valuation for purposes of Court-fees (a).

An administration suit is in essence for an account and application of the estate of the debtor for the satisfaction of the dues of all the creditors; the whole administration and settlement of the estate are assumed by the Court, the assets are marshalled, and the decree is made for the benefit of all the creditors other than the plaintiff, may come in under the decree and prove their debts and obtain satisfaction of their demands, equally with the plaintiff in the suit, and, under such circumstances, they are treated as parties to the suit. If they decline so to come in, they will be excluded from the benefit of the decree, and yet they will, from necessity, be considered as bound by the acts done under the authority of the Court. Creditors, who have obtained decrees on their claims, should not be formally joined as plaintiffs, unless, it was alleged and proved that their interests would be in serious jeopardy, if the plaintiff had the conduct of the proceedings (b).

But where one creditor sues on behalf of himself and the others for administration of

(3) Suit for declaration that certain ex parte decrees is invalid—Court-fees.

For fixing the Court-fee payable in a suit the Court has to look at the nature of the relief claimed and, for that purpose it must look at the allegations that are contained in the plaint.

To a suit for declaration that a certain ex parte decree declaring that certain alienations were invalid and not binding on the plaintiff a Court-fee of Rs. 10 only is payable. Bagala Suudarl Dehl v. Prosanna Nath Mukerjee, 35 Ind. Cas. 797.

(3) S. 6 (iv) (c) & (v)—Suit for declaration of invalidity of, certain transactions—Prayer for appointment of Receiver—Right of plaintiff to give his own valuation.

In a suit by reversioner for a declaration that certain alienations were not binding on him and for the appointment of a Receiver, so far as the relief for declaration is concerned the plaintiff is entitled to value the reliefs sought by him and pay ad valorem duty on the value of the reliefs as fixed by him in his plaint (a).

As regards the prayer for a Receiver, ad valorem Court fee is payable, because the relief by way of appointment of Receiver is a consequential relief but the plaintiff is entitled to value the relief at his option. - (16) S. 13—Case remanded on appeal as against some respondents—Refund of fee.

S. 13 of the Court Fees Act refers to cases where a decree in favour of the respondents, (i.e., all the respondents where there are more than one) is set aside, and the case is sent back "for a second decision." The proviso refers to cases where the decision in favour of the respondents is set aside qua a portion only of the subject-matter of the suit, but in either case the decree appealed against must be set aside qua all the respondents.

Consequently where the decree of the lower Court was set aside as against some of the respondents, and left standing as against the others and the case was remanded in appeal for a second decision, held that the successful appellant was not entitled to a certificate mentioned in S. 13 of the Court Fees Act. In the matter of Bhagwani, 14 A.L.J. 671.

A claim for possession and for damages for use and occupation after the tenancy has been terminated are not distinct subjects within the meaning of S. 17 of the Court Fees Act, because such claims should properly be included in one suit. But the claim for rent due is however a distinct subject, because a separate suit can be brought for that. It is a subject which arises out of a contract of tenancy, whereas the claim for possession and damages or mesne profits arises out of the tenancy having come to an end and the defendant wrongfully remaining in occupation. *In the matter of A. The provisions of S. 386, Crim. Pro. accused persons had endeavoured to rescue the judgment-debtor in a certain case tried by the Munsif from the custody of the execution peon and the Munsif purporting to act under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, made an order sending up the accused to the Magistrate for trial under S. 225-B, I.P.C.

Held—That the order made was bad for two reasons, viz., that the offence under S. 245-B is not one of the offences mentioned in S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, and that the order was made without making any preliminary enquiry.

That there may be cases where no preliminary enquiry is necessary, for example, in a case where the Judge is trying the case and all the facts which are material to the charge have been brought to the notice of the Judge or have come out during the course of the hearing of the case and the Judge is already in possession of all the material facts on which it is necessary for him to form the judgment. But in a case like the present when the incident took place outside the Court and as to which the Judge himself could have no knowledge and as to which evidence must be called for, unless the Court holds such a preliminary enquiry as may be necessary to enable him to determine whether or not there is any case fit to be sent to the Magistrate, it has no jurisdiction to send the accused under S. 476, Crim. Court—Appeal—Sanction granted by appellate Court—Legality.

L having obtained an ex parte decree against B, caused the decree to be transferred to the Chapra District for execution, and in execution, B was actually arrested in the Chapra District. B instituted a suit to set aside the decrees on the ground that it was obtained by fraud and had the same set aside by decree in June 1914 obtained in his suit. B filed an application for sanction to prosecute L and others who helped him in various ways in his false suit. The Munsif dismissed the application, but on appeal the District Judge directed the prosecution of L and others.

Held that under S. 476, Crim. Pro. Code, the District Judge was authorised to direct the prosecution and to send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest First Class Magistrate, because certain offences referred to under S. 195, Crim. Pro. Code, were brought to his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding (a). Lachmi Singh v. Brijmohan Lal, 1 Pat. L.J. 586.

Construction—Rules of interpretation—Inam—Enfranchisement, effect of—Seigniorage—Right of the Government to levy—Position of the Inamdar same as Zamindar under—Permanent Settlement—Inamdar not a permanent lessee under Government—Ryotwari tenant's position different from Inamdar's—Mad. Acts IV of 1862 and VIII of 1869.

The respondent was an Inamdar holding under a grant from the Nawab of Carnatic dated 1750 which recited that "a perpetual shrotriam was granted," and that the grantee was "to appropriate to his own use, the produce of the seasons, etc." The Inam village was enfranchised in July 1865. Since enfranchisement Government had acquired certain lands in the village from the respondents under the Land Acquisition Act and paid them compensation. It had also purchased stones quarried in the village from the respondents. In the earlier years the Board of Revenue had also declared that the Government had no right to any royalty from the Inamdars. In 1907 the Government claimed and levied seigniorage fee on the stones quarried from the lands of the respondents at a particular rate.

Held, that the grant conveyed all that the grantor had in the soil and that the Government did not acquire any new rights by enfranchisement; on the other hand the Government in enfranchising reserved only a right to quit-rent and parted completely with the freehold in the property.

Held also, that the purchase of stones, the grant of compensation and the earlier declarations by the Board of Revenue, though they did not estop the Government from setting up the present claim for seigniorage, were evidence against that claim.

The ordinary rule in construing the words of a grant is that the same principles of common sense and justice must apply whoever may be the grantor. But where the words are not sufficiently clear to gather the intention of the grant, then the doctrine "that if the King's grant can endure to two intents it shall be taken to the intent that makes most for the king's benefit" applies. Therefore the primary duty of the Court is to try to give a meaning to the document evidencing the grant and to see whether by itself it is not self-contained and plain.

Crown Grants—(Concluded).

In the present case as the grant was unambiguous and clear the ordinary rule of construction applied.

The Inamdar in this Presidency is in the same position as a zamindar who obtained his sunnad by the Permanent Settlement. His position is not the same as that of a ryotwari tenant nor is he a permanent lessee from the Government. Secretary of State v. Custom (General).

(1) Custom of primogeniture—Grants by the Maharaja of Chota Nagpur—Impartibility of the estate—Proof of custom, onus of—Lex loci custom of Chota Nagpur—Meaning of putra paultradi.

Certain grants of jaigirs by the Maharaja of Chota Nagpur to a person related to him or to his descendants dating from 1769 to 1786 were in terms to the grantee and his sons and grandsons (putra paultradi). The family of the grantee had for several generations interpreted the words "putra paultradi" in the literal sense, namely, to mean, son and son's son.

Held—that at the time of these grants the words had not acquired in Chota Nagpur the technical meaning which according to the Privy Council in 24 I.A. 76=1 C.W.N. 387 they came to have by 1868 when used in wills executed in Bengal, and the grants in this case did not convey an absolute estate unconditional and unlimited.

Per Atkinson, J.—That, although, as held by the Privy Council, the words convey an absolute estate in lands descendible from generation to generation coupled with full power of alienation, these words of limitation may be controlled by custom limiting their scope and operation (a).

Up to 1862, the lands granted descended regularly according to the rule of primogeniture to the eldest lineal descendant of the eldest son when, the last male descendant of that line dying leaving a widow, the Maharaja proceeded to resume the property, whilst two brothers, the descendants of a younger son, claimed to succeed to the property. The disputes terminated in two deeds one executed by the brothers agreeing that the widow should hold possession of the property as long as she lived upon payment of rent to the Maharaja and that they should take possession after her death, and the other by the Maharaja purporting, on receipt of consideration, to release the lands to the brothers in equal shares.

Held—that, as there was no failure of heir in the line of the grantee, the Maharaja had no right to resume and the sanad to the brothers was a nullity.

Per Chapman, J.—That as the younger of the brothers had the right to succeed on the death of the older without male issue, his concurrence to the deed in favour of the widow might have been taken to avoid future trouble.

Per Atkinson, J.—That the agreement was ineffective to alter or vary the impartible character of the property or to change its method of devolution.

Per Atkinson, J.—The custom of primogeniture which prevails in Chota Nagpur in the case of grants made by the Maharaja whereby the property so granted is deemed impartible and descends to the eldest male heir by lineal descent applies with greater force in the case of grants of property made between the Maharaja and his relations (b).

Where a custom prevails in one branch of a family it is strong evidence to be relied on that it applies with equal force to another branch of the same family (c).

The custom is recognized, not only as a family custom prevailing in the Maharaja's family, but also as the lex loci custom of Chota Nagpur. Lal Gajendra Nath Sahi Deo v. Lal Mathura Nath Sahi Deo, 20 C.W.N. 876=1 Pat. L.J. -109=35 Ind. Cas. 183.

(3) Custom re sale of grove—Vendee whether liable to ejectment—"Land"—Act II of 1901 (Agra Tenancy), S. 4 (2).

A custom by which a grove-holder can sell the grove is not unusual, the sale carrying with it the right of occupation of the land. A person to whom a grove, even though the sale was contrary to custom, had been sold is not liable to ejectment by notice. In the case of a grove it is not sufficient to allege that occupancy rights have determined. It is necessary to prove that the sale of the trees by the original tenant was a breach of the special terms on which the land was held for the purposes of a grove (a).

Reynolds, J.M.—Land which had been let for the purpose of planting groves and on which a grove is still in existence is not "land" within the meaning of the Tenancy Act.

2. In cases where an entry in riwaj-i-am has been attested by people for whom it has been prepared, the Courts have to see what the real custom is and not what the people think to be the custom.

In a case in which the whole subject-matter of the suit is also the subject-matter of appeal, the amount or value of the subject-matter of appeal is nothing more than the value of the property which the plaintiff is seeking to recover and possession of which the defendant is seeking to retain. (2).

A more remote reversioner is not bound by a ratification made by a nearer reversioner which is demonstrably improper and when mala fides on the part of the nearer reversioner is established, the next reversioner will not be bound even by a decree.

Under the Customary Law a son has a right in his ancestral property independently of his father and has thus an independent right of suit with regard to the ancestral property and cannot be said to be "claiming under" his father, within the meaning of S. 11 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1909, and is not bound by anything done by his father with regard to such property (b).

The expenses incurred by a widow for the marriage of a daughter's daughter and a daughter's son out of her husband's property are not for valid necessity under the customary Law of the Punjab.

Some of the facts not decided by the Courts below were decided without remanding the case.

It does not make any difference if the reversioner is not born at the time of an alienation. Sohan Lal v. Sardar Khan, 16 P.W.R. 1916=25 P.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 121.

(3) Jai Sikhs of Jullundur District—Custom—How far females are competent to control—Incompetency of Court to lay down general principles of custom—Alienation by widow—Daughter not found competent to contest—Practice—Remand technically permissible but useless not allowed—True Waris defined.

I. Mr. (now Sir) Justice Johnstone (Mr. Justice Beadon, concurring) laid down the following proposition for the consideration of the Full Bench:

That, in the Punjab, in the absence of proof of any special custom to the contrary.

(a) Among tribes subject to agricultural custom, no female, whether heiress or not, can contest alienations of ancestral land made by a male proprietor.

(b) No female, unless she is a true Waris can contest alienations made by a female holder in possession, who is a true Waris.

(c) No female, not a true Waris can contest alienation even by a female holder who is not a true Waris.

II. The learned judge further pointed out that these propositions virtually involve the opinions:

(1) 5 P.R. 1895 is correct.

(2) 19 P.R. 1906=61 P.W.R. 1906 limited to its peculiar facts, is correct in its conclusions.

(3) 61 P.R. 1906=110 P.W.R. 1906 is correct.

(4) 72 P.R. 1906=125 P.W.R. 1906 states unsound principles and should be overruled.

(5) 60 P.R. 1910=92 P.W.R. 1910 is not good law for Punjab agriculturists generally.

(6) 13 P.R. 1912=199 P.W.R. 1911 is sound except in this, that in the case quoted in it—135 P.R. 1908=194 P.W.R. 1908 laying down an implied proposition that a female who is next in succession can, whether a true Waris or not, contest alienations by a female holder who is not a true Waris.

III. That by the term 'true Waris' is meant an agnatic heir near enough to be entitled to control the owner of the estate in dispute, or a female who, by the custom of the tribe, comes into the category of heirs as high as or higher than such agnatic heirs. Primarily the right of control rests with male agnates, but if by special custom of a tribe, a daughter or sister excludes in succession, say, collaterals beyond the third degree, that female comes well within the category of heirs entitled to exercise control at least over alienations by females; for in that tribe probably collaterals of 4th and 5th and even higher degrees would, according to general custom, have power of control. On the other hand, if in a given tribe daughters or sisters only come in as heirs after all male collaterals or after all male collaterals recognized as having powers of control, those females are not true Warisan and have no power of control, unless they can prove a special custom.

Ruling of the Full Bench; Held by a majority of the Full Bench (Kensington, C.J., and Rattigan and Shah Din, JJ.),

(i) that it is not the function of a Judge to enunciate general principles of law and custom irrespective of the facts of a case, which, however advantageous in producing certainty, really falls within the duties of the Legislature, and,

(ii) that cases under Customary Law should be decided according to the facts established by the evidence produced in those cases, and that the opinions of the Judges in other cases, however valuable they may be—by way of illustration or advice, cannot safely be applied to parties who do not belong to the race, creed, tribe, caste and locality to which the parties in the particular case belong, especially where they lay down propositions in wide and far reaching terms, however, those propositions may be justified by the evidence in that particular case.

Held by the Division Bench (Sir Donald Johnstone, Chief Judge and Chevis. J.):—

(i) that the power to control an alienation by a female (she may be a widow or not) is usually vested in agnates which a daughter is not;

(ii) that the burden of proving the power to contest an alienation by the widow of the last male-holder (semble, in this particular case) lies on the daughter, is not an agnate; and that the daughter failed to establish such custom;

(iii) that, in view of the Full Bench ruling in this case, the dictum of Roe, C.J., in 5 P.R. 1895 laying down certain general propositions is little better than a pious opinion and is obiter, and that similarly expressions of opinion and finding in other cases cited should be confined to the particular facts of those cases; and

(iv) that a remand, albeit, technically permissible, is contrary to the practice of the Chief Court, if the party asking for it cannot state what evidence he proposes to produce after remand. Musammatt Ram Devi v. Hazara Singh, 17 P.W.R. 1916 (F.B.).

(6) Dhillon Jats of Ambala District—Right of married daughter to contest alienation by her female predecessors in-title—Custom how to be proved—S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—Several suits decided at same time—Meaning of 'former' suit in S. 11—Legal provisions in bar of suit—Strict interpretation.

Among Dhillon Jats of the Ambala District, a married daughter, on succeeding to her father's estate, has no right by custom to challenge alienations by her female predecessors in title, viz., mother or step-mother.

The rights and privileges of a female heir have to be decided on the evidence of each particular case.

The only adequate proof of a custom is clear evidence that such and such a custom is followed, and not merely opinions, however numerous, that such and such a custom ought to be followed.

The plaintiff in this case originally brought one consolidated suit to contest a large number of alienations, but on the order of the Subordinate Judge, this original suit became three; some of the alienations were retained in the original suit, whilst others were excluded from it and formed the subject-matter of two separate suits. All three suits nevertheless were decided by the District Judge by one judgment, dated 15th August, 1910, and one of them of the jurisdictional value of Rs 295-5-0 was taken in appeal to the Divisional Court, Ambala, which maintained the District Court's decree on the ground, inter alia, that 135 P.R. of 1909 was authority for holding that the plaintiff did enjoy a right of challenge. The Divisional Court's confirmation of the first Court's finding was dated 14-7-1913 and was not challenged in second appeal, so that it became final. It was therefore contended for the plaintiff that the question as to her status to challenge the alienations in question was res judicata for the purposes of this first appeal to the Chief Court, by virtue of the above decisions of the District Court and the Divisional Court.

Held, that the question of plaintiff's status to challenge the alienations was not res judicata by virtue of those decisions. In this case the "former" suit within the meaning of S. 11, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), cannot refer to the District Judge's decision, because that decision was given in all three suits on one day at one time; and the Divisional Court's decision, though it was in a former suit, was not a decision by a Court which could have dealt with the present suit in appeal.

The 'Court' referred to in S. 11 of the Code of 1908 is the original Court, subject to the proviso that that Court's judgment cannot be held to be final until the time of appeal has lapsed or till the appeal has been finally decided. This view is confirmed by the language of Expl. II to the section.

Held, therefore, that there was no 'former' decision of the original Court, and the fact that a simultaneous decision was made final by the decision of the Divisional Court, a Court which was not competent to decide this appeal, before this appeal reached the stage of judgment, does not convert the simultaneous decision into a decision in a former suit(a).

Legal provisions in bar of any suit must be strictly interpreted in favour of the suit. Dallpa v. Rani Suraj Khur, 48 P.R. 1916=142 P.W.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 581.

(7) Necessity—Proof — Declaratory suit—Speculative suit.

In a suit to set aside an alienation which took place in 1900, it appeared that the plaintiff was a remote reversioner and there were several reversioners who had equal rights with the plaintiff and the alienor had two brothers at the time of filing of the suit who were still unmarried.

The suit was filed some 12 years after the date of alienation.

Held, that a declaratory decree could not be passed in the suit, which appeared to be a speculative one, having regard to the fact that the years before and after 1900 were exceedingly hard years of draught and scarcity. Held also, that the vendee's allegation as to necessity was prima facie correct and that the lower Courts had exacted a standard of proof of necessity which was too high. *Fatteh Khan v. (10) Mortgage—Competency of son to contest validity of alienation in suit for possession—Proof of consideration in case of registered deed—Proof of necessity after 30 years—Costs—Delay in bringing the suit—Adjournment granted on payment of costs—Effect of not paying costs.

Where an alienee sues the son of the alienor, an agriculturist, for possession of the alienated land, want of necessity is a good defence.

After the expiry of 30 years, an alienee cannot be expected to give details of necessity, especially where the alienor is literate and the deed is registered and previous bonds and mortgage-deeds making up nearly the consideration have been produced; and the original alienee is dead and his successor is an employee and has not entered into his predecessor's business.

Where the plaintiff delays in bringing his suit and such delay is disapproved by the Court, he should not be allowed his costs.

Where a Court grants an adjournment on payment of costs and costs are not paid, the Courts would be justified in dismissing the suit. Ram Chand v. Ali Akbar, 90 P.W.R. 1916=158 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 534.

The head of the Kalals family in the village Alawalpur, District Jullundur, settled there along with the original founder of the village and ever since that time the family has been holding land therein but its members have depended for their livelihood on service and other non-agricultural pursuits. The Kalal community constitute a very small portion of the population of the village. One of the members of the family having gifted his land to a daughter and her son, the gift was questioned by the donor's brother;

Held, (1) that, under the circumstances, there was no initial presumption that the Kalals of the village followed agricultural custom, and not their personal law;

(2) that the plaintiff-appellant failed to discharge the onus which lay on him to show that his family was governed by agricultural custom under which a Kalal was incompetent to make a gift. Diwan Singh v. Musammam Faro, 70 P.W.R. 1916=89 P.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 529.

Where, among the Rajputs of Garhshankar in the Hoshiarpur District, a special custom is pleaded, according to which a brother has got right to inherit the self-acquired moveable property to the exclusion of the daughters.

Held that the onus lies on the brother to prove his right of succession.

According to the Customary Law, moveable property, even if acquired with the income of ancestral property, must be regarded as the self-acquired property of the acquirer.

Under Customary Law, as regards succession to self-acquired immoveable property, a daughter is ordinarily preferred to a collateral. Ghulam Jilani Khan v. Imdad Ali, 13 P.R. 1916=33 Ind. Cas. 215.

The Bhatti Rajputs of Kum village in Ludhiana are not in matters of succession governed by the Mahomedan Law but by a custom which appears to be indistinguishable from agricultural custom.

According to custom, the sisters of the last male holder of the donated property cannot be regarded in the character of the daughters of the original donee and are no heirs. Consequently their presence is no bar to the reversion of the gifted property to the family of the donor (a).

Held that no special custom was proved according to which, among Gaur Brahmins of the Palwal Tahsil of the Gurgaon district, collaterals of the third degree can exclude a daughter and her sons from succeeding to the self-acquired property of her father.

A widow is not competent to challenge any disposition of property by her husband (a).

But where an unregistered document made between the deceased husband of a Khattiri widow and his brothers embodied an agreement between all the brothers whereby they declared that their widows shall not inherit a life estate but shall receive only a maintenance allowance of Rs. 25 per mensem.

Held that the instrument was not admissible in evidence for want of registration and could not affect the widow's right to a life estate.

Held also that the clause which constituted the agreement was not of a testamentary character inasmuch as it was not unilateral and was also not revocable.

Both under Hindu law and agricultural custom, a widow is entitled to a life interest in her husband's estate. Therefore the onus of proving a special custom to the contrary by which she would become entitled to receive maintenance only will lie on those who plead

The onus of proving that Khattiris follow agricultural customs in matters of succession lies on the person asserting it.

The Kapur Khatries of Hafizabad Tehsil, especially the family in this case living in village, are governed in matters of succession to immoveable property, whether ancestral or self-acquired, by customary rules obtaining among agricultural tribes in the Punjab and not by the ordinary principles of the Mitakshara Law, and a daughter is neither entitled to succeed to her father's immoveable property, even if self-acquired, nor can he alienate it to her by gift or will in presence of her uncle.

The following circumstances are sufficient to prove that either a will is not genuine or the testator had no disposing mind.

- (a) When it has been written by a legatee or one of the legatees.
- (b) Considerable and material discrepancies between the evidence of the attesting witnesses as to what occurred at the time of execution.
- (c) When testator is an enfeebled and paralysed man not able to dictate a long will.
- (d) Fixing thumb mark when he knows to write his name.
- (e) Interestedness of the attesting witnesses.
- (f) Absence of registration which could be effected without any trouble or inconvenience.
- (g) Omission to examine the doctor who was treating the testator.

2. No custom exists among the Khokhars of the village Khalsa Hamid in the Depalpur Tahsil of the Montgomery District by which reversioners exclude daughters from inheriting their father's acquired landed property, against the general customary rule of the Punjab recognizing their right of succession to such property.

3. The onus of proving exclusion of daughters from acquired property of their father lies on the person asserting exclusion (a).

4. Where in such a case the chances of reversioner's succession are very remote, the Courts are justified in refusing to grant them a declaratory decree protecting their possible reversionary rights (b). Laahkar Khan v. Shah Din, 26 P.W.R. 1916 = 33 Ind. Cas. 997.

Held, that where, in the absence of the customary heirs of a deceased proprietor, the heterogeneous body of the village proprietors claim to succeed to the estate of the deceased in preference to his sister and her son (the personal heirs of the deceased), the burden of proving that the latter are excluded from succession lies on the proprietary body (a).

- (13) Custom or Muhammadan Law—Bhutta Tarkhans of Multan City—Practice of males excluding females, whether proves custom—Onus—Suit for share in inheritance—Limitation—Cross-appeals decided by one judgment—Second appeal—Omission to file copy of decree in rival appeal—Effect—Costs.

Where, in case of cross-appeals, the decree in one of them disposes of the whole suit and embodies the result of the rival appeal, a copy of the decree in the latter need not be filed.

Among Bhutta Tarkhans of Multan City, there is no definite custom excluding daughters from inheritance and the rule of succession applicable is that supplied by the Muhammadan Law (a).

A mere practice of males excluding females cannot be elevated to the dignity of custom unless there is clear and cogent evidence that it has been uniform and has existed for a sufficiently long period.

Where the parties are Tarkhans by profession, reside in the town of Multan and do not own any agricultural land, the onus of establishing a special custom overruling their personal law lies heavily on those who allege it.

A suit for a share in the inheritance, where there is no proof of the existence of a joint family, becomes barred after the lapse of 12 years from the death of the last owner (b).

The plaintiff's suit for a share in the inheritance was resisted on the ground of custom but decreed by the first Court. Both parties appealed, the defendants contesting the finding against them on the point of custom and praying for the dismissal of the entire suit, and the plaintiff praying for an increase in the share awarded. Both appeals were decided by one judgment and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed in toto. The decree in her appeal not only dismissed that appeal but also embodied the result of the rival appeal. The plaintiff having preferred a second appeal, the preliminary objection was taken that, as she had not filed a copy of the decree in the defendants' appeal to the Divisional Judge, she was precluded from impugning the finding on the question of custom.

Held, that the appellant's failure to file a copy of the other decree, which was due to a bona fide mistake, did not prevent her from attacking the decision of the Divisional Judge on the point of custom; but that on account of this omission the order relating to costs in that appeal was binding upon her. Mussamat Murad Khatun

The power of alienation inter vivos and the power of testation go together, and if in a particular case the former is proved to be governed by custom, the latter is presumed to follow the same rule.

The Araons of the Jullundur City are governed in matters of testamentary and intestate succession by the Ordinary Customary Law of the Province.

As a rule, the onus lies on the person asserting that he is ruled in regard to a particular matter by custom to prove that he is so governed; but the onus shifts on to the opposite party in the case of a tribe which is one of the dominant agricultural tribes in the Province and to which the ordinary agricultural custom is generally applicable. Taj Muhammad v. - (15) Succession—Parachas of Mukhad in the Attock District follow Customary Law—Widow—Her brother—Muhammadan Law—Presumption of Custom—Value of oral evidence.

Found, that Parachas of Mukhad, a large village or a small town on the Indus in the Attock District, follow generally Punjab Customary rules in the matters of succession and not their personal law.

Among them, in the absence of a son, a widow only takes an ordinary Punjabi widow's life estate, and on her death her husband's property reverts to his reversioners and not to her heirs.

Therefore a claim by her brother to get her 1/4th share in her husband's property to which she is entitled according to Muhammadan Law in the absence of children is not maintainable.

Obiters:

Held, that:—

1. In this tribe when there are more widows than one and one dies, the other takes by survivorship,—the deceased lady's own heirs do not come in.

2. In this tribe when a widow marries she forfeits her late husband's property.

3. In the Punjab where a widow takes the whole of her late husband's estate, there is a presumption that she takes only for her life.

4. Though it is laid down in several rulings of the Punjab Chief Court that, because a certain rule of Punjab agricultural custom is found to exist, it does not follow that other rules of custom in supersession of the personal law have also been adopted, yet, where there is a respectable body of evidence in favour of a rule of succession in controversy, the fact that in other matters connected therewith the parties appear to follow such custom is certainly some support to the party relying on custom. Nur Muhammad v. - (16) Ambala district, Rurki Mausā—Jat—Succession—Daughters—Collaterals—Right of former to succeed—Ancestral property—Burden of proof—Former suit—Unnecessary finding—Res judicata.

Where, in a suit, the dispute was between the daughters and the collaterals with respect to the succession to the property left by a Jat of Mausā Rurki in the Kharar Tahsil of the Ambala District, the onus of proof is on the persons who allege the property to be ancestral. The circumstance that such persons happen as in this case to be defendants does not shift the onus on to the plaintiffs.

Held, that no special custom was proved whereby daughters are excluded by collaterals in the matter of succession to non-ancestral property.

An unnecessary finding that the property was ancestral made in a former suit brought to contest an alienation by a widow, cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit. Devi Ditta v. Mussamat Indar Devi, 56 P.R. 1916=160 P.L.R. 1916=50 Ind. Cas. 542.

(1) Pichhlag son—Collateral succession—Treatment by family as son does not confer rights of son on pichhlag—Adoption—Alienation in favor of pichhlag son.

Customs—Punjab—(Continued).—8.—Succession—(Concluded).

Held, that there is no authority for the proposition that because the members of a family make no objection to a man's being succeeded by his pichhlag son, therefore the pichhlag son acquires the right to succeed collaterally in the family generally.

Where the adoption of a stranger is invalid by custom the adoption of a pichhlag and gift of ancestral property to him cannot be recognised as valid. Ram Parshad v. Harnam, 116 P.L.R. 1916.

(2) Ancestral property—Pathans of Kasba Shahabad, tahsil Thanesar, district Karnal—Sister or collaterals in fifth degree—Rights of succession—Riwaj-i-am—Costs.

The parties in this case were Pathans of Kasba Shahabad in the Thanesar Tahsil of the Karnal District, who were admittedly governed by custom; and the sole question was whether a sister and a sister's son had the right to succeed to the said property in the presence of the deceased proprietor's agnate heirs related to him in the 5th degree. Held, that the custom recognising such right was not proved.

It was further found that among them the rights of daughters were well recognised and there was also a tendency to regard sisters and sister's sons favourably and to prefer them to remote collaterals (a).

Where it appeared to the Chief Court in second appeal that the lower Court has not attempted to deal with the case as it should have done it ordered the parties to bear their own costs throughout. Musammam Nur Bhar. v. Abdul Ghani Khan, 100 P.R. 1916 = 36 Ind. Cas. 712.

(3) Custom versus Hindu Law—Sodhi Khatri of village Samalsar, Tahsil Moga, Ferozepore District—Daughter or nephew—Certificate for second appeal filed after 90 days—Practice.

Held, that in matters of succession the Sodhi Khatri of village Samalsar, Tahsil Moga, Ferozepore District, follow Hindu Law and not agricultural custom (a).

Therefore, a daughter and daughter's son succeed to the ancestral immoveable property of a male Sodhi Khatri proprietor of a Samalsar in preference to his nephews and grand-nephews.

Held, also, that the fact of not filing within 90 days, the certificate for leave of second appeal is immaterial where sufficient cause exists for not applying for it within the prescribed period. Harchand Singh v. Munahi Ram, 143 P.W.R. 1916 = 142 P.L.R. 1916 = 35 Ind. Cas. 471.

Held, that, considering the practice of will-making which prevails to a very considerable extent in the Peshawar District, it would be safe to hold that the power of will-making exists in Tappa Khalsa subject to restrictions.

Cutchi Memons.

- (1) Emigration—Memons of Cutch—Settlement in East Africa amongst Mahomedans—Hindu Law rules of succession, if continue to apply to emigrants—Presumption—Domicile.

Where a Hindu family migrate from one part of India to another, prima facie, they carry with them their personal law, and, if they are alleged to have become subject to a new local custom, this new custom must be affirmatively proved to have been adopted, but when such a family emigrate to another country and being themselves Mahomedans settle among Mahomedans, the presumption that they have accepted the law of the people whom they have joined is one that should be much more readily made.

Where certain members of the Memon community at Cutch (who, being originally a sect of Hindus, upon conversion to Mahomedanism, did not adopt the Mahomedan law as to succession but retained the Hindu law of succession as a customary law binding upon the entire community) about half a century ago emigrated to Mombasa in East Africa where they settled down among people who professed the Mahomedan religion:

Held—that, in order to raise the presumption that the emigrants accepted the Mahomedan law of succession, all that had to be shown was that they had so acted as to raise the inference that they had cut themselves off from their old environments.

That the analogy here was that of a change of domicile on settling in a new country rather than the analogy of a change of custom on migration within India.

Held—that the Mahomedan law of inheritance governed the devolution of property left by a deceased Memon settlor in Mombasa when it did not appear from the evidence that the Memons in Mombasa had at any time established any distinctive political or social organisation for themselves or ever as a body claimed to be outside the system of law which prevailed among the Mahomedans of Mombasa. Abdurahim Haji Ismail Mithu v. B placed an order with L, a firm whose business reputation was high for a quantity of arsenite of Soda for the purpose of making 'dips' for cattle. L delivered 5½ cwt. of arsenite of Soda but the drums containing the Soda were wrongly labelled as containing 8½ lbs. only. Instructions were contained on the label as to the quantity of water to be used for mixing up with the Soda. The servant obeyed the instructions and prepared the 'dip'. The result was a strong 'dip' was prepared and cattle were injured. B sued L for damages and the defendants L pleaded contributory negligence on the part of L in not making enquiries and in not having averted the consequences of their failure to use reasonable care.

Held that the plaintiffs were justified in putting great faith in the correctness of the labels under which the firm of L sent out their goods and that there was no contributory negligence on their part.

Held, in a suit for damages, for having obtained a search warrant for account maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, the burden of proving malice and want of reasonable and probable cause is on the plaintiff.

Held also, that the appeal against the decree of the lower Court dismissing a suit for damages for malicious prosecution and for maliciously obtaining a search warrant in that prosecution abated on the death of the appellant pending the appeal as the cause of action being a personal one did not survive to the appellant's heirs.

The well-known maxim of English law "Actio personalis moritur cum persona" is applicable in India.

property, it was held that the suit as laid was competent. The objection to the maintainability of the suit on the ground that the plaintiff could bring a suit for possession was held not to be a valid objection (a).

In this case the Court declined to allow costs to plaintiff on the ground of want of clearness in the pleading. Tilok Chand v. Ram Chand, 95 P.R. 1916.

Declaratory Suit.

- (1) Plaintiff's title and previous possession, suit to establish, whether suit for mere declaration—Maintainability—Whether catching fish in a streamlet amounts to dispossession.

Where the plaintiffs in a suit establish their title to a village and also that they have been in possession of it and of a streamlet which lies within it, but that the plaintiffs' possession has been disturbed inasmuch as the defendant's people have caught fish in it.

Held, that under such circumstances that plaintiff's suit for a mere declaration is maintainable.

Even if the defendants are found to have granted the right to catch fish in the streamlet to other persons not parties to the suit, that act would not amount even to disturbance of possession still less to dispossession, nor would the fact that some persons have at times caught fish in the streamlet show that the plaintiffs have been dispossessed. At most the catching of fish in the streamlet would be a disturbance of possession. Sahdeo Lal Bhagat v. Kesho Mohan Thakur, 20 C.W.N. 1274=35 Ind. Cas. 916.

- (2) Life estate held by widow—Money received as compensation for acquisition of land by Government—Consent of husband's brothers for payment of the amount to her—Suit by sons of latter for declaration of their reversionary right—Maintainability—Cause of action—Second appeal—Question of fact.

S, H and M were three brothers holding an estate in equal shares. On the death of M, his widow succeeded to a life interest in her husband's share of the estate. A part of the estate was acquired by the Government under the Land Acquisition Act, the widow's share amounting to a sum of Rs. 6,115-2-3. In spite of the provisions of S. 32 of the Land Acquisition Act, this sum was paid in cash by the Land Acquisition Officer to the widow. Plaintiffs, the minor sons of S and H, instituted the present suit for declaration that the widow is only entitled to use by way of maintenance the income of the sum which she received as compensation, and that after her death the plaintiffs shall be entitled to the capital and for other reliefs.

It was contended inter alia that the plaintiffs were bound by their fathers' consent. Both the Courts below found that the consent was not given bona fide.

Held that the plaintiffs were not estopped from suing by their fathers' consent.

The question whether the consent was given bona fide or not is one of fact and could not be reopened on second appeal. The plaintiffs having alleged that the defendant denied that the plaintiffs had any right present or reversionary in the property and that she set herself up as the absolute owner and threatened to use the capital, it could not be said that the plaintiff disclosed no cause of action. Musammam Sardar Begam v. - (3) Adverse entry in Revenue Registers—Suit for declaration—Limitation—Procedure—Amendment of plaint—Prayer for new relief—If allowable.

Where by reason of an adverse entry in the Revenue Registers, a cloud is thrown upon the plaintiff's title, held that a suit for a declaration that that entry shall not affect the plaintiff's rights is barred unless brought within six years from the date on which the entry was first made in the revenue papers.

Where a person in possession of the properties against whose title an adverse entry had been made in the Revenue Registers instituted a suit framing the suit as one for recovery of possession, treating the refusal of the Revenue authorities to amend their registers as amounting to a dispossession of him from his properties, held that he could not subsequently be allowed to amend his plaint and ask for a declaration that he is entitled to possession of the property in suit, especially when a suit for a declaratory relief is barred by limitation. Ali Hussain Khan v. The provisions of the Transfer of Property Act have no application to the creation of easements.

No writing was necessary for the imposition of an easement before the Transfer of Property Act was passed; and Ss. 54 and 123 of that Act were not intended to change and did not change the pre-existing law regarding easements so as to require a writing for their creation or imposition where no writing was previously necessary.

Where a right of way is created in writing, S. 2 (6) of the Registration Act may require registration but not if the value of the right is less than one hundred rupees.

Held, therefore, that the Courts below were right in decreeing the plaintiff's claim of a right of way by grant upon oral evidence only (a).

Though a right of way over other lands of the landlord cannot be acquired by prescription under S. 26, Limitation Act, it can be created by grant (b).

It is extremely doubtful whether a tenant who uses a pathway by the mere leave and license of the landlord is invested with anything in the nature of a right enforceable by suit.

Though the preamble of an Act does not control any plain enactment which follows it, it may be a most useful guide when a question of doubt arises upon the construction of a particular provision and considerations relating to the scope of the Act are involved. Sital Chandra Chowdhury v. - (2) Right of support—Raising a wall to a greater extent—Additional burden—Encroachment on original easement—Claim—Limitation—Art. 32, Limitation Act—Not applicable.

Where the defendant raised the plaintiff's wall abutting on the defendant's property from 11 feet to 19 feet erecting a second storey of his house and put a dopalla or double sided thatch, thereby placing an additional burden upon the plaintiff's wall.

Held, that the defendant's act amounted to an alteration which constituted an extension or encroachment upon the original easement enjoyed by the defendant and also an actionable wrong.

Held, that Art. 32, Sch. I of the Limitation Act was not applicable to the plaintiff's claim and that although an encroachment upon easement may amount to a perversion of the purpose for which the owner of the dominant tenement has the right to use the property, none the less the plaintiffs are not restricted to two years in order to bring their suit. - (1) S. 15—Right to take water—Long user—Presumption of lawful origin—Difference between Indian and English Law.

Where there has been a long and uninterrupted user for a long series of years the law will presume that the user has been as of right and that the right had a lawful origin, if a lawful origin is possible.

P and M were admittedly from 1839 using the water from a tank situate on land B the sale deed for which was in the name of M one of "Thottam Mudaliars" applicable to both P and M for carrying on the cultivation of land A, belonging jointly to both P and M. The tank was dug sometime subsequent to the purchase by B, but by whom, it was not known. The water was being taken to A through a channel D belonging to both P and M. In the absence of anything to show that P was allowed the use of the water by the permission of any body.

Held that P was, as of right, entitled to the use of the water of tank B for the cultivation of plot A.

Per Phillips, J.—The law relating to the acquisition of rights of easements under the Indian Easements Act is the same as under the English Prescription Act.

The user by P jointly with M of the water from tank B for the joint cultivation of plot A does not affect the nature of the right which is a right over the servient heritage acquired by him by virtue of his ownership of plot A. The right prescribed for is not a right to irrigate jointly but a right as part-owners of a dominant heritage. Saminatha Mudaly v. Yelu Mudaly, 4 L.W. 128=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 192=20 M.L.T. 544=35 Ind. Cas. 749.

- (2) S. 15—Easement—Prescriptive right, claim to—Duration of enjoyment to be proved.

To establish a right to an easement by statutory prescription it is necessary to prove enjoyment of the right (whether 20 years or 60 years) within "two years next before the institution of the suit wherein the claim to which such period relates is contested" (a).

Enjoyment for 20 years under the provisions of the Limitation Acts of 1871 and 1877 before Act V of 1892 came into force, which ended long before the beginning of the "two years next" before the institution of the suit, is ineffectual.

Proof of 12 years enjoyment is not sufficient to shift the onus of proof on the party denying the right (b). Rangappa Nalcker v. Appala Raja, 33 Ind. Cas. 503.

(5) Ss. 28, 33, 51—Light and air—Dominant owner—His rights—Extent of—Alienation of dominant tenement—No excuse for enlargement of right—Imposition of greater burden on servient owner—Not allowed.

The dominant owner has the right that the servient owner shall not obstruct the free access to the ancient window of those cones or pencils of rays that have hitherto found access to it. This right is not lost by shifting the window backwards or forwards, but it is subject to the proviso that, if, in spite of an obstruction being erected by the servient owner, the same quantity of light still penetrates the ancient window, the dominant owner has no remedy in equity (a).

But where the dominant tenement has been rebuilt, the relief to which the dominant owner is entitled is still further limited by the terms of S. 51 of the Easements Act. There must be no greater burden imposed on the servient tenement. The right is the obstruction which is a nuisance under existing conditions must be such that it would have been a nuisance also under the conditions formerly obtaining. The dominant owner retains his right, but cannot, by altering his tenement, enlarge the remedy to which he is entitled (b). Premji Ladha v. Yleram Amul, 9 S.L.R. 101=33 Ind. Cas. 615. (7) S. 47—Water-course—Easement as against Government when and how acquired—Water cess, classification, of bed, for levy of, by Government.

Right of easement against Government may be acquired in cases where water flows continuously through a hill, Kutta and another water course and forms a natural stream. Once the existence of an easement is shown, it is for Government to show under S. 47 of the Easements Act that it interrupted that easement more than 20 years ago or that the plaintiff rendered its use impossible. Mere failure on the plaintiff's part to repair the breach would not amount to obstruction by the servient owner or rendering the use impossible by the dominant owner.

Where the rills run through the plaintiff's patta land and their beds have not been separately demarcated as poramboke, they are part of the patta land and not the property of Government and the water course cannot be said to belong to Government. So Government

(10) Ss. 52, 53, 54, 60, 62—Transfer of property coupled with license—Transfer void for want of writing or registration—Validity of mere license—Such license whether revocable.

Transfers of different rights in two properties may be simultaneous and yet distinct, e.g., transfer of a mill and a license to use the site on which it is built.

In India, as in England, the express grant of a mere license need not be in writing (a).

But where a license is coupled with a grant of immoveable property or of an interest in immoveable property of a kind for which writing and registration are compulsory, the grant of property exists independently of the license; and, where writing and registration are compulsory, the grant, if unwritten and unregistered, would be void, and the license, stripped of its accompaniment, would remain a mere license (b).

The general proposition that a license coupled with a void grant remains nothing but a mere license and is accordingly revocable must be taken as subject to the following reservations:—

(a) A licensee under a void agreement made for valuable consideration, who has entered into occupation and paid rent, is in the same position in equity as if a valid grant had been made, and his license cannot therefore be revoked at will (c).

(b) A mere license is not revocable, when the licensee, acting upon the license, has executed work of a permanent character and incurred expense in so doing (d). Narindas v. Ratanlal, 12 N.L.R. 75=31 Ind. Cas. 471.

(1) Ejectment, suit for—Revenue sale—Adverse possession—Plaintiff to succeed on his own title—Defendant not able to establish title to all land in his possession.

There were two contiguous estates A and B, held by X and Y respectively. X annexed a portion of B and professed to hold it as included in A, till the title of B was extinguished. X made default in the payment of Government revenue and his estate A was sold :

Held, that the Collector only sold the estate A as it stood at the time of the permanent settlement and did not put up to sale the portion of B annexed to A by X.

The effect of the adverse possession by X with regard to the lands of B was to make him a joint proprietor of B along with Y.

The plaintiff in an action in ejectment must succeed on the strength of his own title; he cannot succeed, merely because the defendant may not be able to establish title to all the lands in his possession. Balkuntha Nath Rai Chaudhuri v. Basanta Kumari Dasl, 23 C.L.J. 151=34 Ind. Cas. 946.

(2) Suit for ejectment—Defendant in possession for a long time by building on the land—Kutch house—No presumption that land let for building purposes.

The plaintiff, an auction-purchaser of the rights of a former zemindar, sued to eject the defendant from an enclosure. The defendant pleaded that he was in adverse proprietary possession. It was found that the defendant was not in adverse possession, but the suit was dismissed on the ground that, the defendant having built a kachcha house on the land and having been in possession thereof for a very long time, the presumption was that the land had been let to him for building purposes :—

Held that long possession on the part of the defendant raised no presumption that the land had been let for building purposes, and no arrangement having been proved that the defendant was to remain in possession for all time in consideration of services rendered by him, he was liable to ejectment at the suit of the zemindar. *Anand Sarup v. of all, does not apply to the case of joint Receivers.

If the notice to quit is given by an unauthorised person, a subsequent ratification will not make it effectual, since the notice must be one which is in fact binding on the tenant when it is served.

When two persons are appointed joint Receivers, unless there is a direction or an indication to the contrary in the order of appointment, the intention of the Court must be deemed to be that they, as officers of the Court, should meet and discuss together the questions, which come before them for determination in the course of the management of the estate, and that, in all matters which require the exercise of judgment and are not purely ministerial, the action taken should be the result of their united deliberation. The very object of appointment of joint Receivers would be defeated, if one were held competent to delegate his functions to the other.

Rights of property cannot be changed retrospectively by ratification of an act inoperative at the time; to make an act rightful which otherwise, would be wrongful, must be at a time when the principal could still have lawfully done it himself. *Cassim Ahmed Molla v. (4) Suit for ejectment—Defence of permanent and heritable rights—Burden of proof—Evidence Act (I of 1874), S. 18—Statements by persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit.

Where in a suit for ejectment the defendant sets up the defence of heritable and transferable rights in the land, the burden of proving the plea is on the defendant.

Statements made by a person regarding his interest in the subject matter of the suit made after his interest in it has ceased cannot be used as admissions under S. 18 of the Evidence Act, and there is no other provision of the law under which they are admissible in evidence. Ma Shwe Yat Aung v. Maung Da Li, 9 Bur. L.T. 152=33 Ind. Cas. 888.

(5) Suit for possession and ejectment of trespasser—Landlord supporting trespasser.

The fact that the landlord supports or in any other way assists a trespasser in his defence in a suit for his ejectment and for possession filed against him by the tenant, would not give the trespasser a right to retain the property against the tenant. Kartik Rowant v. Central Karkand Coal, Co Ltd, 1 Pat. L.J. 430.

lands in the patti of another landlord. Subsequently to this partition the rayat sold the house to the defendant. The landlord brought a suit in the Munsiff's Court for ejectment of the defendant. Held, that the landlord was entitled to have the defendant ejected.

Where a landlord sues for the ejectment of the purchaser of a non-transferable holding as a trespasser, such a suit should not be regarded as one based upon the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act but as an ordinary suit for ejectment. Raghubar Singh v. Ramgulum Misra, 1 Pat. L.J. 502 = 36 Ind. Cas. 653.

(7) Suit to contest notice of ejectment—Claim as under proprietors—Cancellation of notice by Revenue Court—Cause of action.

Where the plaintiffs in a suit to contest a notice of ejectment claimed to be under proprietors of the land, and the notice was cancelled by the Revenue Court on the finding that they had greater rights than those of a mere tenant, the said decision of the Revenue Court afforded a cause of action to the landlord to go to the Civil Court for a declaration that the plaintiffs did not possess any under-proprietary rights. Ram Asre v. (9) Decree against pro forma defendant in—Ejectment suit wherein no relief claimed against him.

A decree against a pro forma defendant in an ejectment suit wherein no relief is claimed against him is in accordance with law when that person's rights have been thrashed out and he has been found to be a non-occupancy tenant. Ganga Charan v. Manghi Prasad, 31 Ind. Cas. 861.

(10) Zamindar's land—Trespasser—Trespass for non cultivation purposes—Suit in ejectment—Maintainability in Civil Court—Trespass for cultivation—Rent, Court—Jurisdiction.

If a person had trespassed upon the land of a Zamindar for purposes other than cultivation, a suit to eject him can be instituted in a Civil Court. But, should he cultivate the plot, a suit for his ejectment can be brought in a Rent Court. Musat. Champa Kuar v. Pati Ram, 33 Ind. Cas. 70.

(11) Land held on favourable rent—Right to eject by notice, not affected—Rules regarding resumption or assessment of rent—Effect.

Held that the mere fact that a low rent is paid, does not in itself operate to deprive the landlord of his right to eject by notice.

Held, also, that the sections relating to resumption or assessment of rent on holdings held at a favourable rate of rent provide an additional method of procedure but do not have the effect of making it incumbent on the landlord to proceed under them. Ram Adhin v. Maharaj Bhagwati Prasad Singh, 33 Ind. Cas. 141.

(14) Ejectment, suit for, in twelfth year—Effect.

Per Tweedy, J.M. :—An ejectment suit filed in the twelfth year is fatal even though the tenant is not actually ejected until the twelve years are over.

Per Baillie, S.M. :—A suit brought in the twelfth year of occupation must succeed, and this principle applies whether the tenant is entitled to hold throughout the twelfth year owing to its being the last year of a period or because he cannot, as of an ordinary right of occupancy tenant, be ejected till the expiry of the year. Machley v. (1) Proof of plaintiff's title—Defendant in possession for period less than 12 years—Suit land lying waste previously.

In a suit for ejectment plaintiffs established their title to the plaint lands. As regards the question of limitation it was found that the defendant's possession arose within 12 years before suit and the suit lands were lying waste during the remaining portion of the 12 years. Held that, as the plaint lands were waste they were presumably in the possession of the plaintiff, who had title to them during the remaining portion of the 12 years. Murugappa Mudaly v. - (1) Evidence—Estoppel—Grantee as long as he holds a religious office—Cannot alienate nor set up a title inconsistent with that of grantor—Grantee's alienee also similarly estopped.

A grantee of lands as long as he holds a religious office in a temple is estopped from setting up a title inconsistent with that of the grantor, and an alienee from such grantee is similarly estopped and the alienation itself is invalid as against the trustee of the temple. S. 116 of the Evidence Act is not exhaustive of the law of estoppel. Thayelbagam Pillai v. Venkataramakrishnayyan, (1916) M.W.N. 119 = 33 Ind. Cas. 852.

- (2) Feeding the estoppel—Applicability to transactions before 1872—Hindu conveyances—Transfer of Property Act, S. 43—Evidence Act, S. 115.

The equitable principle laid down in S. 43 of the Transfer of Property Act is applicable to transactions before 1872.

When a grantor, by a recital, is shown to have stated that he is seized of specific estate, and the Court finds that the parties proceeded upon the assumption that such an estate was to pass, an estate by estoppel is created between the parties and those claiming under them, in respect of any after-acquired interest of the grantor, the newly acquired title being said to 'feed the estoppel.' This principle of 'feeding the estoppel' is applicable to Hindu conveyances and to cases before the Evidence Act. Krishna Chandra Ghosh v. Rasik Lal Khan, 23 C.L.J. 501 = 21 C.W.N. 218 = 33 Ind. - (5) Revenue Registers—Land in name of husband and wife—Wife's right to claim property as heir.

Certain land stood in the Revenue Registers in the joint names of the plaintiff and her husband. The wife was living on the property. Held that these facts did not prevent the plaintiff, from proving that the land in question was her sole and separate property. Held also that the circumstance that the wife lived on the property was one which was likely to put a mortgagee on enquiry to ascertain what her interest was. There was no estoppel and the mortgagee was grossly negligent in refraining from making the necessary enquiries. Meyappa Chetty v. Ma Mo Yek, 30 Ind. Cas. 692.

Where a Court of first instance failed to pay any attention to evidence, which was produced before it, in that it did not take the trouble, while a patwari was being examined, to compare his map with the map produced from the record room, the omission to consider the evidence produced a distinct irregularity entitling the aggrieved party to get a revision of the order. *Ganga Kurmi v. (5) Secondary evidence—Degree of—Admissibility of—Practice—Appellate Court—Judgment—Contents of—Second appeal—Findings of fact—Interference.

Where the original of a registered document is not produced though steps had been taken for its production. The only evidence that ought to have been admitted of its contents is a certified copy of the document and no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible. But if without objection raised such evidence had been admitted the appellate Court will not interfere and reject the evidence so admitted.

In cases where there is an appeal it is most essential that the Court whose findings of fact this Court has to accept should deal with the material facts specially and decisively and not leave the matter in such a way that the final Court of Appeal has to draw conclusions as to what the real findings of fact were by the first appellate Court. Otherwise if the appellate Court is not satisfied it will be its duty to remand the case for re-hearing even though the litigation has been pending for a long time and

(6) Witnesses interested in the result of the suit—Credibility—Major described as minor in plaint, effect—Minor, appointment of guardian without notice—Decree not binding on minor—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXXII, r. 3 (4)—Hindu Law—Debts—Trading family—Hereditary business—Debt contracted by manager—Limitation Act (IX of 1908), S. 5—One judgment in two suits—Confusion in applying for copies.

The mere fact that a party's witnesses are persons who are more or less interested in the result of the suit is no reason for disbelieving them where the only persons who could reasonably be expected to give reliable testimony regarding the point in question would necessarily be such persons.

A defendant who is of full age but who is described in the plaint as a minor cannot be properly represented in proceedings before a Court by a guardian ad litem.

A minor defendant is not properly represented in a suit if a guardian ad litem be not properly appointed. The language of O. XXXII, r. 3, sub-r. (4) is peremptory and no order for the appointment of a guardian ad litem is valid unless notice of the application has been given to the minor. If the rules of procedure relating to the appointment of guardian ad litem are not strictly complied with, the subsequent proceedings are invalid so far as the minor is concerned and the decree obtained against him under such circumstances is not binding upon him.

The law with respect to debts incurred by a member of a trading family differs from the ordinary law which governs the money dealings of an ordinary joint Hindu family. Debts contracted by a managing member of a joint family are binding on the other members only when they are for a family purpose. But where a family carries on a business or profession and maintains itself by means of it, the member who manages it for the family has an implied authority to contract debts for its purposes and the creditor is not bound to inquire into the purposes of the debts in order to bind the whole family thereby, because that power is necessary for the very existence of the family (a).

In two suits filed in a Subordinate Judge's Court, there was only one judgment, but two separate decrees were prepared. In one case the appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner's Court and in the other case the appeal lay to the District Court. The appellant thought that it was only necessary for him to obtain one copy of the decree and judgment. When he got this copy, he found that it related to that particular suit in which the appeal lay to the Judicial Commissioner's Court. But at the time the mistake was discovered, the period of limitation for an appeal to the District Court had expired.

Evidence—(Continued).

Therefore when the appeal was presented to the District Court, the presentation was barred by time. The appellant in his application for an extension of time with reference to the provisions of S. 5 of the Limitation Act explained that he, in making his applications for copies got confused. Held that under the circumstances the delay in the presentation of the appeal was excusable. Ghanshyam Das v. Hardel, 32 Ind. Cas. 380.

- (9) Ss. 18, 23—Conversation between one of several defendants and the plaintiff's pleader about compromise of suit, if admissible in evidence—Admission of one defendant when evidence against others.

The plaintiff sued the defendants for recovery of arrears of rent due on a lease executed in favour of their father. The substantial defence was a plea of payment which was overruled by the Courts below. The material evidence in the case was that of the plaintiff's pleader with whom one of the defendants had two interviews, once about a month before the institution of the suit, when a form of settlement was suggested, namely, diminution of interest, and again on the day the suit was instituted, when the pleader was asked to make a compromise.

Held, that as there was admittedly no express condition that the evidence of the interviews should not be given, and it could not be inferred from the circumstances that the parties had agreed that the evidence should not be given, the evidence could not be excluded under S. 23 of the Evidence Act.

That the evidence of the plaintiff's pleader as to what had passed between him and the defendants who interviewed for the settlement of the case was admissible and could be used even against the defendants other than the defendant who made the admission, all of them being jointly liable to the plaintiff as the representatives in interest of their father.

Per Sanderson, C.J.—That so far as the first interview was concerned, the mere fact that it was contemplated between the parties that the suit was about to be instituted did not prevent the conversation as regards a settlement of the claim from being given in evidence.

That the second conversation was a natural consequence of the first conversation and was not privileged.

That the question whether the evidence of the interviews could be given against the defendants other than the defendant who made the admission depended upon S. 18, Evidence Act, which enacted the principle that, for making statements with reference to the joint concern or common subject of interest, one partner or co-contractor is considered to be the agent of the other.

Per Mookerjee, J.—In the absence of any express or strongly implied restriction as to confidence, an offer of compromise is clearly admissible and may be material as some evidence of liability although it may not be proper to enquire into the exact terms offered.

That under S. 18 of the Evidence Act an admission by one defendant may in certain circumstances be admissible in evidence as against another defendant. The principle is that, when several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, an admission by any one of these persons is receivable not only against himself but also against the other defendants whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided that the admission relates to the subject-matter in dispute and be made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered. Manjan Matabor v. As regards admissibility of certain evidence, where it has been admitted without objection in the trial Court no objection to its admissibility can be raised afterwards. But the erroneous omission to object to the admission of a certain piece of evidence does not make it relevant. The statement as to the ownership of a piece of land given as a boundary in a sale-deed in a suit between the purchaser and a third person in which the ownership of that

Per Wallis, C.J.—The burden of proving that a person was born on a particular date is on the person who alleges it.

Statements as to the date of birth of a person contained in his deposition and in affidavits filed by him are admissible in evidence under S. 21 (1) read with S. 32 (5), Evidence Act, if made by a person having special means of knowledge, whether personal or hearsay.

An European may be presumed to know his own birth-day as a matter of course, but there is no such presumption in the case of Hindus of the Nattukottai Chetty class.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The burden of proving that a suit is in time is on the plaintiff.

Under S. 32, Evidence Act, the tests of admissibility of statements against interest made by deceased persons are (1) the deceased must have had personal knowledge of the facts he was stating; (2) the facts stated should have been to the immediate prejudice of the deceased; (3) the statement must have been, to the knowledge of the deceased, contrary to his interest; and (4) the interest must be either pecuniary or proprietary (a).

A plaintiff is not absolved from proving that an affidavit sworn to by him previously was made under the circumstances mentioned therein, even though there is no explanation on the defendant's side for the plaintiff having made such statements, if they are false.

A horoscope is receivable in evidence under S. 32, cl. (5), Evidence Act, and not under cls. 2 or (6) of that section, but the party making it must have had special means of knowledge.

(20) S. 33—Evidence taken before a party is added as defendant if admissible against him—Objection taken for first time in second appeal.

In this case it was contended that the evidence taken in the suit, before a defendant was newly made a party, should not have been used against him and relied on S. 33 of the Evidence Act. It appeared, that this defendant after he was made a party, was served with summons, took time and filed a written statement which was the same as that of the original defendant, took an adjournment for letting in his evidence and on the adjourned day put in his evidence. He did not require that the evidence previously taken should be re-heard, nor did he desire a trial de novo of the suit as against him. When the appeal was heard in the District Court he again took no objection to the evidence already taken in the case being considered against him. It was clear that the original defendant represented his interest in the previous stages of the proceedings, and he was fully cognizant of the steps taken by him to prove their common case. In fact he himself gave evidence at the previous trial, and the second appeal is a joint appeal by both the defendants on the same grounds. In these circumstances it was held that the new defendant was not entitled to take that objection in second appeal and S. 33 of the Evidence Act has no application to this case. Rangasami Naidu v. Plaintiffs sued to recover money upon a mortgage deed. The original mortgage deed, having been in possession of the defendant, plaintiff produced a certified copy thereof. There were three witnesses to the deed of which one of them was dead, the remaining two from a perusal of the certified copy could not remember whether they witnessed the deed. One of them, however, said that he knew well that the alleged executants jointly executed a document in favour of the plaintiff, though he did not remember if he attested it or not. Plaintiff further adduced evidence to prove payment of interest due under the document. Held that S. 65, cls. (a) and (f), of the Evidence Act, read with S. 57 (5) of the Registration Act made the certified copy of the mortgage deed admissible in evidence. Held also that in the circumstances of the case there was sufficient evidence to prove

(37) S. 66—Suit for redemption—Mortgage-deed in possession of mortgagee—Admissibility of secondary evidence—Absence of notice to produce original.

In a suit for redemption the plaintiffs alleged in their plaint that the original document was in the defendants' possession. The Court was asked in the plaint to have the document summoned from the defendants. It did not appear that any formal petition asking the Court to call for the document was ever put in by the plaintiffs. Plaintiffs claimed to adduce secondary evidence to prove the mortgage in question. Held that, having regard to the attitude which the contesting defendants took up in their defence, the case was one in which the Court could, in the exercise of the discretion reserved to it by S. 66 of the Code, dispense with the issue of a notice to produce. Held also that as the defendants in their written statement had definitely averred that no such document was in existence, it was obviously useless for the Court to send out any notice calling upon them to produce it. The plaintiff was therefore entitled to adduce secondary evidence of the existence and contents of the suit mortgage-deed. Bahadur Singh v. Mahadeo Singh, 36 Ind. Cas. 696.

Per Woodroffe and D. Chatterjee, JJ. The document must be proved as against them in accordance with the provisions of Ss. 68, 69 and 70 of the Act.

(44) S. 90—Will professing to be over 30 years old—Suspicious circumstances—Presumption, whether to be drawn—Delay in suing, whether proves acquiescence or waiver.

The last male owner of the property in suit died, leaving two widows and a daughter. On 2nd January 1894, the widows gifted the property to the daughter who died on 7th November, 1894. On the death of the surviving widow on 24th October 1902, the reversioners got mutation of the landed property effected in their favour, but the property in suit remained with defendant No. 2 (the husband of the donee). On 17th September 1906, he sold the property to defendant No. 1. On 29th November 1910, the reversioners sued to recover their share. It was contended that the deceased male owner had gifted this property to his widows absolutely, who had gifted it absolutely to the daughter on whose death her husband became the owner:

Held, (1) that the suit was within time, having been brought within 12 years of the death of the second widow;

(2) that mere delay in suing was no proof of acquiescence or waiver by the plaintiffs of their rights;

(3) that, as there were circumstances giving rise to grave suspicions as to the genuineness of the will alleged to have been executed by the last male owner, the presumption allowed by S. 90 of the Evidence Act could not be drawn;

(4) that the alleged will not having been proved, the widows must be regarded as having held only on the usual tenure for life, and no gift by them could defeat the claims of the reversioners on the widow's death;

(5) that, therefore, the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree. Gujar Singh v. Mehar Singh, 97 P.W.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 168.

In the case of a copy of a document 30 years old, S. 90, Evidence Act, empowers the Court to presume that the copy is in the handwriting of the person in whose handwriting it purports to be. Though S. 90 does not refer to stamps, when the Court of first instance has drawn a certain presumption which the law empowers it to draw, and especially when that presumption has reference to stamping, a Court of appeal ought not lightly to interfere with the exercise of the discretion vested in the Court of first instance.

On the loss of an original document it would be improper to expect that proof should be offered of the exact occasion when the document was lost. The question will only be whether the party offering the secondary evidence is unable to produce the original for reason not arising from his own default or neglect.

Difficult questions of law may arise as to the claim for an elephant if the pit for entrapping elephants is found to have been dug by one of the parties on land belonging to another (a). Manavikraman v. Nilambur Thacharakavil, 31 Ind. Cas. 579.

(56) S. 92—Oral evidence to show if the transaction was benami—Benami transactions generally—Oral evidence permissible between benamidar and true owner—Specific performance of contract.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement for purchase made and executed by defendant No. 1 alone, the plaintiffs alleged that the real purchaser was defendant No. 2 and that defendant No. 1 was acting merely as his benamidar. Defendant No. 1 also raised the like contention, but it was denied by defendant No. 2. At the trial, oral evidence was offered to show that defendant No. 1 was the benamidar of defendant No. 2.

Held, (1) that, although it was doubtful if parol evidence would be admissible in a contest between the plaintiffs and defendants, yet it was admissible as between defendants Nos. 1 and 2 to prove the true nature of any agreement which subsisted between them;

(2) that when the parol evidence was once let in there, it could be used in adjusting the legal rights and liabilities of the parties to the suit.

It is not a fraud merely to break promises or fail to perform obligations in futuro. Fraud ought to be restricted to misrepresentations, and dishonest misrepresentations, of existing facts.

A benami transaction is invariably triangular. The simple meaning of benami is that a purchaser desires to buy property but does not desire to buy in his own name and therefore buys in the name of some one else.

Where a transaction is truly benami, i.e., where the purchase has been effected in the name of the nominal purchaser, the contract would be between the nominal purchaser and the vendor, and in cases of dispute between the nominal and the real purchaser, there being no writing between them, no difficulty can arise, under S. 92 of the Evidence Act, in proving oral agreement.

Where, however, a person, with the object of shielding his property from his creditors, purports to sell it to some one named by himself and the sale-deed is accordingly made out in that person's name as the purchaser, the provisions of S. 92 would prevent the parties to such a contract from giving parol evidence of the true nature of the transaction underlying it. Parol evidence might be given to serve a different purpose; for, where the owner of property purports to transfer for consideration, his real purpose being to conceal or protect his property, the nominal purchaser has necessarily paid no consideration; and it is always open to show that the transaction is bad for failure of consideration. Laxmibai v. Keshav Annaji Pokharkar, 18 Bom. L.R. 134=33 Ind. Cas. 396.

(57) S. 92—Registered partition deed silent as to some items of property—Oral evidence, if admissible to explain those items—Negotiable instruments, construction of—Practice.

Where a partition deed was silent as to certain paddy belonging to the family which was subsequently sought to be divided.

Held, that oral evidence was admissible under the provisions of S. 92, cl. (2) of the Indian Evidence Act to show that in fact the paddy had not been divided by the partition deed.

It is settled law that notwithstanding the apparent tenor of a partition deed, it is open to parties to prove by oral evidence that the partition was incomplete or that certain properties were left out for future division.

Negotiable instruments being documents which are intended to pass freely from hand to hand, should be strictly construed, and evidence which would have the effect of adding new terms to such formal documents is altogether inadmissible. Duraiswami Reddhar v. Rajagopala Reddhar, 4 L.W. 329=34 Ind. Cas. 712.

(58) S. 92—Redemption suit—Plea of oral sale discharging mortgage-debt, if admissible—Mortgagee's possession, nature of.

Plaintiff's suit for redemption and for accounts from defendants as mortgagees in possession having been dismissed on the plea of the defendants that there was an oral sale in discharge of the mortgage-debt, he appealed. The appeal was pressed on the following grounds:—(1) that the plea of oral sale had been negatived and that the matter was res judicata by reason of the decision in a previous suit and (2) that oral evidence of the alleged sale was inadmissible.

Held, that the existence of the oral sale not being directly and substantially in issue and not having been finally decided in the previous suit, the question was not res judicata; that the oral agreement was sought to be proved not as modifying the mortgage, but in order to prove the nature of possession taken by the mortgagee and oral evidence, therefore, was admissible; (But see Spencer, J.); that the defendants' possession had been all along adverse as against the mortgagor and that they had acquired a title by prescription (a).

Per Phillips, J.—Oral evidence of a sale by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in discharge of the mortgage-debt is admissible under S. 92 of the Evidence Act to prove discharge, although the sale itself is invalid and does not effect any legal transfer of the property, even though it is accompanied by delivery of possession (b).

Although an oral sale cannot in itself operate as an extinguishment of the mortgage, yet the proof of the payment of a mortgage-debt thereby is sufficient to prove the nature of possession by the mortgagee (c).

Per Spencer, J.—A simple mortgagee who gets into possession of immoveable property of Rs. 100 in value cannot prove an oral sale as a starting point of adverse possession against his mortgagor so as to acquire a prescriptive title by remaining in possession for over the statutory period (d).

A mortgagee's possession does not become adverse to the mortgagor merely by his styling himself as proprietor of the mortgaged property or by his denial of the mortgagor's right to redeem; there must be some act done by which the mortgagor may have reason to suppose that his rights have been invaded (e).

Sales and mortgages of immoveable property are both transfers of intangible rights, but one is a transfer of ownership and the other is transfer of an interest in the property concerned. The possession of a purchaser is of a full proprietary character, while the possession of a mortgagee in possession is of a limited nature. Both transactions are required to be registered, if the property is Rs. 100 in value or over. An extinguishment of a mortgage by the mortgagee's rights being merged in those of an owner, involves an alteration by the relationship of mortgagor and mortgagee into one of seller and purchaser. When each of these transactions requires a registered document to make it valid, the law does not permit the substitution of one for the other to be effected in a less formal manner. Thotakura Govinda v. Pepakayala Mallayya, 31 Ind. Cas. 678.

S. 74 of the Contract Act authorises the Court to reduce the compensation to what is reasonable. It may conceivably be reasonable to reduce the compensation to a vanishing point; it cannot be reasonable to reward the defaulter for his breach. On the face of it S. 74 has reference not to the primary term of the contract but to stipulation as to the consequences of a breach.

A Court is not justified in ignoring the clear provisions of S. 37 of the Contract Act, by arrogating to itself powers of relief not conferred by that Act or by other legislative enactments Suryadevara Seetharamayya v. Suryadevara Kotayya, 35 Ind. Cas. 111.

Suit for redemption of mortgage. The defendants were the heirs and representatives of the interest of the deceased mortgagee. Their defence was that their ancestor had sold his rights in the mortgaged property prior to the mortgage and that the mortgage relied on by the plaintiffs was effected with the ostensible object of defeating a right of pre-emption, and was not supported by consideration. The plaintiffs alleged that the sale had been cancelled and was replaced by the said mortgage. The evidence showed that the mortgagee did not set up any rights higher than those of a mortgagee at any time since the date of the mortgage and that the mortgage could not be fictitious. Held, that S. 92, cl. 4 of the Evidence Act did not apply to the case, because prior to the passing of Act IV of 1882 (to which period the mortgage and sale in question related, there was no law which required a sale-deed of immoveable property to be in writing. The mortgage-deed, which evidenced the oral agreement rescinding or superseding the previous sale-deed, was registered, and there was nothing in law to prevent the vendee from surrendering his rights under the sale-deed in any manner he thought proper. *Jangli Ram v. The mere fact that the landlord accepted rent at a reduced rate from that stipulated for in the kabuliyaat for some time does not bind the lessor to accept rent at that rate in future, as the reduced rent might have been accepted as a matter of indulgence which might be put an end to at any time (a).

Under S. 92, proviso 4, of the Evidence Act, any variation of rent reserved by a registered lease must be made by a registered instrument, and oral evidence is inadmissible to prove such variation and an agreement is none the less oral because it is inferred from the conduct of the parties.

Evidence that, since the execution of the kabuliyaat, the tenant paid rent at a lower rate than that stated in the kabuliyaat is admissible to show that the intention of the parties was that the kabuliyaat from the very first was not intended to be acted upon or that there had been a waiver of the strict terms of the lease. The memorandum contained a provision that the plaintiff should not file a suit on the pro-note against the defendant till he succeeded in the appeal.

Held that taking the two documents together it was clear that the words used could not be construed as meaning that the defendant was to be absolved from payment of the advance, if he was unsuccessful in the appeal. A person setting up an estoppel under S. 115 of the Act must be induced to believe in a fact and not in a proposition of law. So where a Hindu widow adopted an orphan and subsequently supported the adoption, her conduct, even if it can be regarded as equivalent to a representation that an orphan can be validly adopted, does not give rise to an estoppel. *Govind v. A person who obtained possession of property from another is estopped from denying that others title to the property at the time he was so let into possession.

Where the defendant obtained possession of certain property under a rental agreement from one S who was the manager of certain charity to which the said property was attached.

Held that the defendant was not estopped from showing that S, although he was entitled to manage the property, was incapable of disposing of it by will and that therefore the executors appointed under the will had no title to the property.

In execution of a decree certain property belonging to the judgment-debtors was attached. One M.P. put forward a claim to the property. Thereupon a compromise was arrived at between the decree-holder, the judgment-debtors and M.P., as the result whereof a promissory note for a further sum was given, and it was covenanted that the rest of the decree-holders' claim would be satisfied by paying Rs. 350 in annual instalments. In respect of the payments by annual instalments, M.P. rendered himself liable as surety for the due performance thereof and he covenanted that in the event of failure by the judgment-debtor to pay two consecutive instalments he would pay the same from his own pocket. He further covenanted that should he fail to do so the decree-holder might proceed in execution against his person and property and he hypothecated certain property belonging to himself. Default having occurred on the part of the judgment-debtors and M.P. not having made good the default, as covenanted by him, the decree-holder applied to execute the decree by selling the hypothecated property:

Held, upon a construction of the compromise, that the application was to enforce the personal liability incurred by M.P. as surety under

Held, that the words in the decree must be interpreted in conformity with the judgment to mean "shall be at liberty to apply for execution of the decree against the defendants personally," and that the Court on the execution side had no power to go into the question whether the defendant was personally liable or not but was bound to execute the decree as it stood. *Madhoo Mal v. This summons was not served on him, the summons was to be sent through his pleader but the pleader's agent returned it saying that he did not know where the judgment-debtor was.

Held, that the order directing forfeiture of the bond must be set aside, for no order was passed for personal attendance of the judgment-debtor.

(13) Decree passed by Baroda Court—Execution proceedings transferred to British Court—Applications to execute the decree not made within the time prescribed by British law—Execution in British Courts barred—Lex fori governs execution proceedings.

The plaintiff obtained a money-decree against the defendant in 1909 in the Baroda Court. The first application to execute the decree was made in 1913, it being in time according to the law in Baroda. In 1915, the plaintiff applied to the Baroda Court to transfer the decree for execution to the Ahmedabad Court (British). The defendant contended that no application to execute the decree having been made, within three years of its date, the execution of the decree was barred by time.

(15) Decree—Execution—Effect of bringing one out of several representatives on the record.

A Hindu widow was in possession of a one-sixth share of her husband's estate upon a partition made among her sons. One of the sons lived jointly with her. She made a mortgage of her share to raise money to pay off debt legally binding upon the estate. The mortgagee brought a suit against her and obtained a decree nisi against her. She then died, and the son who was living jointly with her, alone out of her other sons, was brought on the record as her legal representative. The order absolute was obtained and the shares of the widow and the son who was joint with her were sold and purchased by plaintiffs. When they applied for mutation of names, they were opposed by the other sons. Consequently they commenced the present action for recovery of possession.

Held, that the order absolute having been obtained against one out of several heirs, there was not in existence any decree under which the interests of the other heirs could be sold, and consequently the plaintiffs could not obtain possession of their shares (a). Kundan Singh v. (17) Decree, execution of—Attachment of debt payable outside jurisdiction—Attachment, effect of—Money paid under an illegal order, where to be refunded.

It is not competent to a Court, in execution of a decree for money, to attach, at the instance of the decree-holder, a debt payable to the judgment-debtor outside the jurisdiction by a person not resident within the jurisdiction of that Court.

When a Court has manifestly usurped jurisdiction and has illegally secured possession of a fund, which should not have come under its control, its orders must be discharged. Such illegal orders cannot stand on the plea that possibly similar orders would have been made by a Court of competent jurisdiction.

The money which has been paid out of Court under an illegal order made without jurisdiction, must be brought back into Court. Surendra Nath Goswami v. Bangisbadan Goswami, 24 C.L.J. 533 = 36 Ind. Cas. 457.

(18) Ejectment, decree for—Appellate decree—Merger of original decree—Appeal dismissed for default—Decree, which, to be executed—Civ. Pro. Code (Act V of 1908), O. XXI, r. 22—Omission to give notice, effect of—Conditional decree, execution of—Notice if necessary—Decree incapable of execution, objection as to—Events subsequent—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 155—Tenancy continues how long—Time, extension of.

The original decree is merged in the appellate decree whether the latter confirms, amends, or reverses the original decree, and it is the appellate decree alone which can be executed; 22 B. 500 (506) and 24 C.L.J. 517, referred to. But this doctrine cannot be applied where the appeal is dismissed for default.

Where an appeal against an original decree has been dismissed for default, the original decree is the decree to be executed.

The omission to give notice, as required by O. XXI, r. 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not a mere irregularity which makes the proceeding voidable, but is a defect which goes to the root of the proceeding and renders it void for want of jurisdiction (a).

Such omission renders proceedings inoperative even though a stranger may have acquired title in course thereof.

Even where O. XXI, r. 22 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply, the Court should issue a notice on the judgment-debtor and hear his objection, if any, before it grants execution of a conditional decree on the ex parte statement of the decree-holder that the contingency contemplated has happened.

Where an ex parte order has been made to the prejudice of a litigant who has not been afforded an opportunity to be heard, the order is subject to the implication that it may be revoked at the instance of the party affected thereby and the Court has inherent power to give such directions as the justice of the case may require.

An objection that a decree for ejectment previously obtained, has become incapable of execution by reason of events subsequent, can be properly taken in execution of the decree.

The tenancy continues in operation till the failure of the tenant to comply with the decree made under S. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act within the time prescribed thereby (b).

S. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act enables the Court to give the tenant relief on the footing that there shall be no forfeiture at all; when relief is granted, the forfeiture is stopped in limine, so that there is no question of any destruction of an interest which has to be called into existence again.

It is competent to the Court to entertain an application for enlargement of time after the expiry of the period prescribed in the decree under S. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act and even after the decree-holder has applied for execution (c).

Whether an order for extension of time should be made or not, depends upon the circumstances of the litigation, that is, upon the circumstances disclosed at the original trial and the events subsequent. Syam Mandal v. Sati Nath Banerjee, 24 C.L.J. 523.

An application was made by a decree-holder for leave to bid at the sale which had been advertised. In this application, which was granted by the Court, it was stated that when the properties would be put up for sale, it would be necessary for the decree-holder to make a purchase for the decretal amount, if no other purchaser offered any bid, and it was prayed that permission might be granted in that behalf.

Held, that the application was not an application to the proper Court to take a step-in-aid of execution of decree (a).

(20) Instalment decree for money—Order directing delivery of possession of land on failure to pay two consecutive instalments—Application for delivery of possession presented more than 3 years from default—Bar of limitation—Right to recover money due for instalments within 3 years—No bar.

A decree for money payable by instalments which was passed on the 26th August 1907, inter alia provided that "in case of default of two continuous instalments, the plaintiffs and defendant No. 2 are authorised to take possession of one-half of 973 karals and 8 markas of land in lieu of the outstanding decretal amount in execution of the decree." None of the instalments was paid and an application for execution was made on 31st July 1912 for delivery of possession of the land.

Held that the application, having been made more than three years after the judgment-debtor had made default in the payment of the first two consecutive instalments, the decree-holder was not entitled to possession and that his application was barred (a).

The option given by the decree must be exercised by him once and for all and if he does not exercise the option, according to the terms of the decree on the happening of the first default, he cannot revive it subsequently so as to be able to enforce the default clause.

Held further that the decree-holder is entitled to execute the decree as if it contained no default clause, and can recover by making a proper application for execution, such of the instalments specified in the decree as are not barred by limitation. *Musammam Kirpa Devi v. (26) Execution—Decree against one defendant—Attachment of share of profits—Execution sale—Purchase by decree-holder of unascertained share of profits—Suit for ascertainment and recovery of profits—Maintainability.

M brought a suit against E, and the brothers and the nephews of E and obtained a decree against E. In execution of the decree, the profits from certain lands due to E by the other defendants were attached. The attachment was objected to by the other defendants and after an order passed in M's favour, the rents were put up for sale and M purchased the same but no amount was ascertained. M brought the present suit for profits at the rate of Rs. 20 per bigha. The claim was resisted on the ground that nothing was due to M because the property was managed and cultivated during his absence by the other defendants.

Held that E and the other defendants held the property as tenants-in-common, each having in law a right to a specific share in the profits that during his absence, E would have been entitled to his share of those profits, after crediting the defendants a reasonable sum for the extra labour which had been expended by them by reason of E's absence and that M had the same rights as E had. Mahmud Husain v. - (28) Powers of the executing Court—Construction of decree—Reference to the pleadings and the record in construing the decree—Decree of the appellate Court erroneous and dealing with a matter which had been withdrawn at the hearing.

Where two portions of the decree of a lower Court were taken objection to by way of appeal but the appeal with regard to one portion had been withdrawn and nevertheless the decree of the Court below was set aside in regard to both matters held (per Piggott, J., Walsh, J., dissenting) that the executing Court must execute the decree of the appellate Court as it stands where there is no ambiguity in the terms of the decree and the decree itself is in strict accordance with the operative portion of the judgment, the executing Court is not to enter upon a detailed examination of the proceedings in the appellate Court in construing the decree and it cannot be asked to interpret it in the light of the pleadings and of the record generally so as to put a meaning upon it inconsistent with its plain terms.

Per Walsh, J.—The appellate Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal which it has allowed to be withdrawn and since a decree on an appeal can only operate upon the subject-matter of the appeal, where the decree as drawn up deals with a matter which had been withdrawn, the executing Court is not to shut its eyes to such withdrawal. The method of construing blindly the precise words in a decree without reference to the subject-matter before the Court which passed the decree is a species of construction which does not serve the ends of justice but defeats them. The Court has also inherent powers to do what is necessary to correct the mistake, if there has been a mistake in order to do justice between the parties and to substitute the real decision for the mistaken decision though the matter does not come by way of a review petition but on an appeal from an order by the lower Court in execution of the decree of the appellate Court. Muhammad Maruf v. Sultan Ahmad, 34 Ind. Cas. 344.

- (29) Decree against legal heirs and representatives of deceased—Obtaining of Letters of Administration to deceased's estate by one of the defendants—Application for execution against administratrix—Prohibitory order—Court not competent to order payment into Court—Reference to Chief Court.

Plaintiff obtained a decree against the respondent and her surviving brother and sister as heirs and legal representative of another brother who had died intestate. Subsequently the respondent obtained letters of administration to her deceased brother's estate and was paid the amount standing to his credit in a certain fund.

Plaintiff applied for the execution of the decree against the respondent, and asked for a prohibitory order ordering her to withhold and pay into Court a portion of the money received by her. An order was issued prohibiting all the defendants from receiving from her that portion of the money and restraining her from making payment of it to any person otherwise than into Court. She did not pay the amount into Court. This case was referred by the Small Cause Court to the Chief Court.

Held that as the respondent did not admit any debt and disputed her liability as administratrix or otherwise to devote any part of the sum received by her from the fund to paying the deceased's debts, she could not be ordered to pay any part of the amount into Court to satisfy the plaintiff's decree. P. (33) Execution—Sale in execution of money decree—Purchase from Official Assignee—Prior sale in execution of a satisfied mortgage-decree—Official Assignee not made a party—Effect.

Where the plaintiff sued to recover certain property from the defendant on the strength of his purchase from the Official Assignee of Madras who was in possession of the properties of the judgment-debtor and the purchase was in execution of a money decree made in 1907 and the defendant purported to be another purchaser of the same property in 1904 in execution of a mortgage decree dated 1898 and the judgment-debtor was adjudged an insolvent in 1902 and the Official Assignee was not made a party to the proceedings in execution and it appeared that the purchase of the defendant was not a bona fide one and that the mortgage decree was satisfied at the time of the said purchase; Held that the purchase gave no title to the defendant.

Held also that as the judgment-debtor was adjudged an insolvent, all his rights in the properties became vested in the Official Assignee and it was the duty of the decree-holder, whether of a money decree or mortgage decree, proceeding in execution against any property which belonged to the insolvent, to bring on record the Official Assignee, who was the person in whom all the rights of the properties had become vested and the result of his failure to bring on record the Official Assignee must be taken to be that the sale in execution could not bind him (a). *Devaraja Aiyangar v. Execution of Decree—(Continued).(34-a) Decree—Date—Execution of decree—Erroneous order—Notice—Limitation Act, 1908, Art. 182, cl. 4.

An erroneous order for execution of a decree passed after notice to judgment-debtor cannot, although unrevoked, be treated as binding on him, if notice has not been properly served in accordance with law (a).

(34-b) Whether can be barred by limitation in part—Execution sale set aside—Result.

There is no authority for saying that the execution of a decree can be barred by limitation in part (a).

On a sale in execution of a decree for money wherein only a part of the decretal amount was realised, being subsequently set aside, the decree-holder could by an application for re-sale realise not only the sum which was the price obtained at the previous sale but also the balance of his decree, though an application to execute it for the balance would have been barred by limitation. *Krishna Prasad Singh v. (34-d) Execution of decree, power of Court dealing with—Adding premia paid by decree-holder for insurance of mortgaged property subsequent to decree—Judgment-debtor's objections in execution department—Estoppel and res judicata.

It is a well known principle governing proceedings in execution that no addition can be made by a Court executing a decree beyond such as the decree directs, other than the costs arising out of the execution proceeding.

A decree absolute determines the amount which is recoverable from the mortgaged property and no execution can be granted for any sum not covered by that decree or incidental to its execution.

So the premia paid by a decree-holder on account of insurance of mortgaged property subsequent to the decree which did not contain any authority for adding such premia, cannot be recovered in execution.

A judgment-debtor who puts forward objections in the execution department is not always bound to put forward all possible objections once and for all. If he omits any, the matters which he omits and which were never raised or decided cannot always be treated as res judicata against him (a). Dahli and London Bank, Ltd. v. Ram Ratan, 32 Ind. Cas. 754.

Where an agent purchased, on his own account and without professing to act on behalf of his principal, property in execution of a mortgage decree obtained by his principal, held, the principal could not take the benefit of the purchase by subsequently ratifying it.

A sale in execution of a decree in force at the time cannot be set aside as against a bona fide purchaser not a party to the decree, on the subsequent reversal of the decree in appeal.

A purchaser in Court auction is none the less a bona fide purchaser that he had notice of the pendency of the appeal. R. Ragavachari v. M.A. Pakkiri Mahomed Rowther, 30 M.L.J. 497=19 M.L.T. 381=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 73=34 Ind. Cas. 760.

Where, on a decree-holder auction-purchaser applying for delivery of possession of the properties purchased and obtaining possession by order of Court notwithstanding the objection by the judgment-debtor that the properties did not pass by the sale, the judgment-debtor preferred an appeal:

Held, on a review of the authorities of all the Indian High Courts (which are conflicting), that the Patna High Court should not without very good reason depart from a long course of decisions in the Calcutta High Court, where the balance of opinion has been since 1883 strongly in favour of the view that an appeal does not lie. Hazi Abdul Gani v. (3) Limitation—Execution of ex parte decree—Attachment and sale of property—Effect of the decree passed subsequently on merits—Application made 3 years after it—Steps in aid of execution.

Held, that, where an ex parte decree is set aside, all previous applications, attachment, sale and other proceedings taken by way of execution of the ex parte decree become null and void and are not revived when the decree on the merits is passed:

Therefore an application for execution made three years after the regular decree is barred by limitation and is not kept alive by steps taken in aid of execution on the basis of the ex parte decree. Nathu Mal v. Pala Mal, 78 P.W.R. 1916 = 103 P.R. 1916 = 133 P.L.R. 1916 = 35 Ind. Cas. 110.

(5-a) Purchaser from decree-holder auction purchaser—Bona fide purchase for value, plea of—Judgment-debtor's name forged in solenamah and consent decree obtained—Setting aside of decree if necessary—Evidence Act, 1872, S. 44.

The purchasers from decree-holders auction-purchasers in execution of an ex parte decree cannot avail themselves of the plea of bona fide purchaser's for value. (a)

Suit for possession on declaration of plaintiff's right as auction-purchaser in execution of rent-decree. It was found there that in execution of a mortgage-decree by consent on a solenamah executed by the mortgagors and mortgagees, the same property was purchased by the mortgagee-decree-holder and sold to the 1st defendant. It was further found that the plaintiff though made a party to the mortgage suit was no party to the consent decree, the said decree having been obtained by forging his signature in the solenamah. Held that the plaintiff was in a stronger position than a mere ex parte judgment-debtor. Held also that the plaintiff being no party to the consent decree could attack it by virtue of S. 44 of the Evidence Act and did not require to have it set aside (b).

A consent decree differs from a decree of Court, in this, that no one is a party to the decree who has not willingly contracted to govern himself by the decree ad sui juris and if he is not, the Court must have declared the decree contracted for him by his guardian to be for his benefit. Abdul Hakim Gazi v. Pan-Fanchi Daul, 32 Ind. Cas. 849.

Ex-proprietary Rights.

(1) Ex proprietary rights in Oudh, special rule of succession applicable to—Personal law—Ex-proprietary right acquired by sale on the basis of mortgage made by a widow—Self acquired property or Stridhan, what constitutes.

Held, that there is no special rule of succession applicable to ex-proprietary rights in Oudh and they are governed by the personal law of succession applicable to the person possessing such rights.

Where a Hindu widow made a mortgage of her husband's property and on a sale made on the basis of that mortgage acquired ex-proprietary rights, held that the ex-proprietary rights could not be regarded as her self-acquired property or stridhan and the heir who would succeed to such rights on her death would not be her heir but the heir of her deceased husband. *Genda Singh v. The plaintiff having failed to pay the amount applied for extension of time and got it. He again failed to make the payment. Subsequent to this he applied to the Court to direct the 1st defendant to execute the sale-deed. Held that an application made after the period allowed by the Court was ineffective and that the 1st defendant was quite within his right to refuse to execute the conveyance. *Shunmugam Asari v. Family Arrangement.

(1) Mutation proceedings, registration of petitions of compromise filed in—Revenue Court, mutation proceedings in—Registration Act, S. 17—"Declare," meaning of.

Held, that transactions in the nature of family arrangements or settlements are binding on the parties and must be enforced.

Held further, that in order to constitute a binding family arrangement it is not necessary that there should be any formal contract between the parties.

In order to decide whether a petition by way of compromise presented to a Revenue Court in the course of mutation proceedings requires registration or not, one must consider the situation of the parties at the time when the document was presented and deduce from surrounding circumstances what the parties intended by laying the petition before the Court.

If it purports to be nothing more than an admission or acknowledgment of title already in existence, it does not require registration. On the other hand, if it amounts to a declaration of an agreement which was to regulate the respective interests of the parties in the property not merely in present, but in futuro, then the document is one, registration of which is compulsory under S. 17, Registration Act.

Held also, that the word "declare," as used in S. 17, Registration Act, implies a declaration of will and not of a mere statement of fact. Setrohan Lal v. Nageshwar Prasad, 19 O.C. 75—35 Ind. Cas. 770.

LORD ATKINSON, LORD PARKER OF WADDINGTON, SIR JOHN EDGE and MR. AMEER ALI.

Family Settlements.

(1) Family settlement, nature of—Giving up of property under threat of litigation—Effect of.

In order to be operative as a family settlement, there must be a bona fide dispute which is bona fide settled by the members of the family. There is a difference between a settlement in consideration of the settlement of family disputes or even of the screening of family scandals, and yielding up property on a threat of litigation. It is reasonable that the former should bind the members of the family even though they may have been minors at the time. A transaction of the other kind can at best only bind the parties to it. Hence where the defendant put forward a baseless claim to property to which he could not be rightfully entitled and the persons legally entitled thereto gave it up in order to avoid being forced to litigation, held that there was no family settlement, and the plaintiffs, who were the reversionary heirs and no party to the settlement, were not bound thereby. Himmat Bahadur v. Dhanpat Rai, 14 A.L.J. 840 = 38 A. 335 = 35 Ind. Cas. 148.

- (1) Foreign Court, suit in—Defendant native of British India—Appearance to avoid apprehended arrest—Jurisdiction, objection to—Pleading also on merits—Submission to jurisdiction, whether voluntary.

In a suit instituted in a Court in Cochin, the defendant, a permanent resident of British India, appeared before the Court and objected to its jurisdiction but, at the same time, also pleaded on the merits. It was found that the appearance was due to a desire to avoid an apprehended arrest in case a decree had been passed against him, and he subsequently visited Cochin territory either on business or to see his relations.

Held, that the submission to the jurisdiction was voluntary and that, as he contested the suit on the merits and taken the chance of a judgment in his favour, it was not competent to him at any subsequent stage to question the jurisdiction of the Court (a).

A A, a Mahomedan, died leaving estates situate partly within British India and partly within the Ceded District of the Feudatory State of Rampur, and leaving him surviving a widow, a daughter and her children. The daughter and her children, alleging that A A was a Shia and that therefore the daughter excluded the residuary heirs from inheritance, instituted a suit against the latter in a British Indian Court, (viz., the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Bareilly), where their claim was opposed by the residuaries, and finally obtained an ex parte decree upholding their claim, the defendants having failed to obtain an adjournment which they said was necessary to enable them to call witnesses. This decree was affirmed by the High Court at Allahabad. Meanwhile the residuaries instituted against the daughter and her children a suit in a Court of the Rampur State for possession of a moiety of the estate of A A situate in the Ceded District of Rampur State, claiming, as they had done in their defence in the other suit, that A A was a Sunni. The daughter and children thereupon instituted another suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Bareilly praying for a declaration that the previous decree of that Court was binding between the parties and operated as res judicata and that the defendants (the residuaries) be restrained by a perpetual injunction from continuing their suit in the Court of the Rampur State. The Subordinate Judge as well as the High Court at Allahabad on appeal having held that they had no jurisdiction to grant the injunction and dismissed the suit, the Privy Council on the appeal of the plaintiffs affirmed that decision and dismissed their appeal. *Musammatt Maqbul Fatima v. Fraud.

(1) Pardanashin lady, document executed by—Suit for cancellation on the ground of fraud—Fraud different from that alleged in plaint if can be relied on—Duty of plaintiff to state facts constituting alleged fraud—Document bearing genuine signature—Burden on signatory to prove falsity of recitals.

The plaintiff, a pardanashin lady, executed a conveyance in favour of the defendant, the consideration for which consisted of money due on a mortgage bond previously given by her to the purchaser and an additional sum paid at the time of sale. It appeared that on the mortgage bond she wrote with her own hand "this bond executed by me is correct" and then signed her name. Similarly on the conveyance she wrote "this deed of sale which I have executed is true and correct and is admitted and ratified by me," and then affixed her signature. She brought a suit for cancellation of the conveyance on the ground of fraud. In the plaint it was alleged that the defendants who were agents of the plaintiff got the mortgage bond and the deed of sale signed by her without the document being read out and explained to her, that she did not get any independent legal advice in connection with the document and did not get any consideration for them. In her deposition the plaintiff stated that she had put her signature on the blank sheets, which had subsequently been filled up without her knowledge or consent by the defendant and turned into the mortgage bond and the sale-deed.

Held that, as the documents undoubtedly bore the plaintiff's signature, the burden was upon her to establish that the recitals contained therein were untrue.

That, when a plaintiff impeaches a transaction on the ground of fraud, the facts which constitute the alleged fraud must be distinctly, specifically and accurately stated.

That a charge of fraud must be substantially proved or laid and when one kind of fraud is charged, another kind of fraud cannot, upon failure of proof, be substituted for it.

That the rule that the Court will grant only such relief as the plaintiff is entitled to upon the case made by his pleadings is strictly enforced when the plaintiff relies on fraud.

That, when a party seeks to avoid the Statute of Limitation on the ground of fraud, the statement of claim should set forth specifically the particular acts which constitute the fraud as well as the time when it was discovered in order to enable the defendant to meet the fraud and the alleged time of its discovery, so that the Court may see whether by the exercise of ordinary diligence the discovery might not have been made before. Banshlram v. Panchanan Dasl, 20 O.W.N. 638=35 Ind. Cas. 284.

(2) Ex parte decree and sale thereunder—Suit to set aside decree and sale on the ground that processes in suit and execution suppressed in collusion with officers of Court—Suit if maintainable—Case of fraud, pleading and proof in—Purchaser at certificate sale, suit for rent by, after registration under Land Registration Act—Decree obtained therein, sale in execution of—Purchase by decree-holder—Certificate sale subsequently cancelled—Rent-decree and sale, if thereby reversed.

Where the plaintiff in a suit to set aside an ex parte rent-decree and sale held thereunder alleged that the defendants had, in collusion with the officers of the Court, caused a suppression of the processes in the suit as also in the execution proceedings.

Held—that, if this allegation had been established, the plaintiff would have been entitled to succeed.

The mere circumstance that a defendant has failed to have an ex parte decree set aside under S. 108, Civ. Pro. Code (of 1882) or to have a sale set aside on the ground of material irregularity does not debar him from seeking relief in a suit properly framed for the purpose on the ground that the suit itself was a fraudulent suit and that the proceedings therein were vitiated by fraud. But to enable the plaintiff to succeed in a suit so framed, he must specifically allege the circumstances of fraud and he must prove the fraud as laid in the plaint.

Fraud how to be pleaded and in what manner established, discussed.

A, having purchased property at a sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act, on 7th September 1908, sold it to B who duly obtained a sale-certificate from the Revenue authorities, was placed in possession and had his name registered under the Land Registration Act. B then sued the tenant on the property for rent and obtained an ex parte decree, in execution whereof the tenure was sold and purchased by the decree-holder himself on 20th November, 1909. The sale under the Public Demands Recovery Act was cancelled on 29th March, 1910, on the ground that no notice had been served under S. 109 of the Act and that the proceedings were invalid and inoperative in consequence.

Held—That the rent-decree and sale thereunder which were duly and regularly had at the instance of a stranger who had no concern with the irregularities in connection with the certificate sale were not affected by the reversal of the certificate sale. Nagendra Nath Bose v. Parbati Charan, 20 C.W.N. 819=35 Ind. Cas. 389.

in favour of father and uncles—Creditor prevented from executing decrees against property relinquished—Illegal object—Effect—Suit by party to fraud to avoid the transfer—No relief—Trusts Act, S. 84—Penal Code, S. 266—Transfer of Property Act, S. 58.

In a case of fraudulent transfer, the question for the Court to determine is whether the contemplated fraud has been carried out to an extent which disentitled the plaintiff to the relief sought. The main rule in cases of this kind is that a man cannot set up an illegal or fraudulent act of his own in order to avoid his own deed. An exception to this general rule is that mere intention to defraud, if not carried into effect, affords a locus penitentie, to the fraudulent transferor, sufficient to justify being given relief. (Vide S. 84, Trusts Act).

It is not necessary that the whole fraud contemplated should be carried into effect, but it is sufficient if the illegal purpose has been carried into effect in a material part, or if there has been part-performance of a substantial character (a).

An illegal purpose is one which is prohibited by law, and S. 266, Penal Code, penalises any fraudulent transfer of property to another with the intention of thereby preventing such property (among other things) being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which the transferor knows to be likely to be made, by a Court of justice in a civil suit.

Where the plaintiff executed, in favour of his father and uncles, a release-deed by which he relinquished in their favour his rights in certain immovable properties belonging to the family, and his creditors have been thereby prevented from obtaining satisfaction of their dues for over five years. Held, that the illegal purpose has been substantially put into execution and that the plaintiff cannot claim the benefit of the exception contained in S. 84 of the Trusts Act. Hirji v. Goverdhandas, 9 S.L.R. 108 = 32 Ind. Cas. 530.

Gaontia.

(1) Gaontia—'Protected' gaontia—Power to relinquish—Surrender of tenure to samin-dar—Validity—Gaontia not empowered to grant permanent rights—Adverse possession—If possible against samin-dar—Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881, S. 65.

In 1845, an ancestor of the plaintiff-zamin-dar, leased the village in question in gaontia tenure to one D. Fresh leases were given in succession to D's son G and grandson K. K who 'protected' gaontia under S. 65-A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1881, died in 1900 leaving three sons of whom M was the eldest. M who would have succeeded to the position of gaontia, resigned the position in favour of the second son A. In 1907, A surrendered the tenure to the zamindar. Three persons who were close relations of A and belonged to his family which held the land in gaontia held three plots of land which formed portions of the bhogra land of the village. When in 1907 A surrendered the gaontia to the zamindar, the latter obtained possession of the bhogra plots held by other members of the family except the above said three persons who refused to give up plots held by them. Plaintiff instituted in 1911 three different suits against the said three persons for recovery of possession of bhogra lands in their possession.

Held that a 'protected' gaontia could not create in the village any tenure of a permanent character which would hold good after his lease came to an end.

There is nothing in the incidents of a 'protected' gaontia as set out in S. 65-A of the Central Provinces Land Revenue Act which in any way suggests that a gaontia is not entitled to relinquish his rights.

Held, further that the possession of the defendants did not become adverse to the plaintiff till the tenure was relinquished in 1907 and that the suit instituted in 1911 was not barred by limitation.

Possession cannot be adverse to a person who is not himself entitled to claim present possession; so long as the gaontia tenure subsisted, the zamindar was not entitled to actual possession of any portion of the village. Lal Narupraja Singh v. Shabani Tell, 1 Pat. L. J. 293.

Ghatwalis known as Khargpur Ghatwalis can be sold by the landlord in execution of a decree for rent. (a)

The contention that no Ghatwali tenure can be sold in execution is not a sound contention.

Under S. 4, Reg. XIV of 1910, the only Ghatwalis over whom the Deputy Commissioner of Santhal Parganas has jurisdiction are those who are subject to the provisions of the Bengal Ghatwali Lands Reg. (XXIX of 1814); and in the Reg. of 1814 the Deputy Commissioner has power to put up such Ghatwali lands for sale for arrears of revenue.

Where the ghatwal is liable to render service to the Deputy Commissioner and derives his appointment from the Deputy Commissioner, his lands can only be sold with the consent of the Deputy Commissioner. Where the ghatwal is appointed by the Raja and is not shown to be liable to render service to any body but the Raja, his ghatwali lands may be sold by the Raja. *Lakshmi Narain Mahto v. Grant.

(1) Construction of grant—Grant burdened with service and grant in lieu of wages—Distinction—Grant when resumable.

Grant—(Continued).

The grant in this case was made to Nakesh (decorator) M. The deed recited (1) that the donee had rendered services in the past; (2) that the said services were acceptable to the donor; (3) that the lands were granted as service Inam; (4) that the grantee was to pay a fixed Kattubadi; (5) that he was, in future, to render services which would deserve the approbation of the diwanum; and (6) that the lands were to be enjoyed from son to grandson.

It was found that the Kattubadi was never enhanced during the 45 years that the defendants (grantees) were in possession of the land, that the lands had descended in the lineal line for three generations; and that the defendants were always willing and ready to render the service.

Held per Seshagiri Aiyar and Phillips, JJ. (Wallis, C.J., contra).—The grant was burdened with service and was not resumable so long as the grantee was able and willing to perform the service.

Per Wallis, C.J.—Service Inams are admittedly resumable where Government is the grantor and in the case of darmilla inams, i.e., Inams granted by Zamindars since the date of the Permanent Settlement, where they are service inams granted for services of a personal nature, the balance of authority in the Madras Presidency is in favour of their being resumable.

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J.—The presumption in Government grants, no doubt, is that the lands granted as service Inam are resumable. The same considerations do not necessarily apply to grants by 'Zemindars. It is well settled that service grants by Zemindars are not always resumable.

No general rule can be laid down, apart from other circumstances, that a grant for personal or menial services is liable to resumption.

Cl. (5), supra in the deed of grant is suggestive only of the vain gloriousness of the grantor and not of any intention to cut down the effect of the grant. *Kamarayudu Mrutyunjayadu v. (2) Grant, construction of—Grant of land bounded by stream.

Where land is granted which is bounded by a stream, the grantee is entitled to the bed of the stream up to the middle point. The grant however, may contain reservations. This rule of construction applies to a grant in partition just as to any other grant.

It is a well-recognised rule of construction that a grant is construed in favour of the grantee rather than of the grantor.

Hence, where an agreement for partition was entered into between owners of lands bounded by a stream, and the plaintiff claimed thereunder all the land which abutted the river on the south side and the bed of the river up to the middle point together with the exclusive right of fishing at those points, and the only reservation which the agreement showed related to the "use of wells, tanks and water courses," held that the plaintiff or his predecessors-in-title were not prevented by the terms of the deed from acquiring the bed of the river up to the middle point together with the right of fishing. *James E. (3) Grant whether to temple or Archakas—Construction—S. 92, Civ. Pro. Code (1908)—Scheme

In this case it was found that the Inams in question were granted for the benefit and support of the temple and constituted absolute dedications to the God as trust-property and were not granted for the limited purpose of the performance of the archaka's duties alone. There was no usage proved or recognizable in law as regards the application of the income to this limited purpose alone and there was no question of any prescriptive right in the Archakas in the matter of the user of these trust-properties and their right was merely to be maintained out of the income so long as they did or were allowed to do the archaka service. Held that the gift was to the God, and the Archakas were not entitled to proprietary right in the lands, and the fact that the Archakas had been misappropriating the income during the past few years merely evidence a breach of trust no usage. Deerl Narasimhacharyulu v. Chalasani Subbayya, 31 M.L.J. 202=36 Ind. Cas. 270.

(4) Grant of dasabandham rights—Mortgage of such rights by grantees—Rights of mortgages—"Son to grandson," meaning—Custom.

A mortgagee of dasabandham rights (granted by the Zamindar to the ladies of his house), from such grantees can enforce his rights under the mortgage against his subsequent purchaser of the right of the Zamindar with notice of the obligation.

Tyabji, J.—The words "son to grandson" used in such grants appear to have been used clearly as words of limitation and not of purchase.

A custom prevalent in a zamindari laying down a particular rule of inheritance with regard to property held by the ladies of the zamindar's family and derived from the zamindar in the first instance for the purpose of maintenance is neither uncertain nor opposed to public policy, and is valid (a). Bangaru

Grove.

(1) Grove, when ceases to retain its character as such—Portion not occupied by trees—Resumption by piecemeal.

There is no criterion laid down by law for judging when a grove ceases to retain its character as such. The question is more or less one of inference to be drawn from the surrounding circumstances.

The mere fact that a portion of the grove has become devoid of trees would not entitle the landholder to resume that portion of it. The plot must be taken to have been granted as a whole and the tenure must stand or fall in its entirety.

Piecemeal resumption of a grove is not permissible. The question is not so much of customary law as of the terms of the contract between the grantor and the grantee, and in the absence of proof of an agreement or a custom authorizing the landholder to take possession of such portion as has become devoid of trees, it must be held that the grantee has a right to occupy the whole plot so long as it retains the character of a grove(a). Har Sahai v. (1) Appointment — Removal — Notice — Guardians and Wards Act (VIII) of 1890, Ss. 34 (c), (d), 45, sub-S. (1) cl. (b).

No person should be appointed guardian of the person or property of an infant, without some enquiry about his fitness for the office.

No order for removal of a guardian of a minor should be made till he has been apprised of the charges brought against him and has been allowed reasonable opportunity to explain and if possible to defend his conduct.

S. 35, sub-S (1), cl. (b) of the Guardians and Wards Act, authorises the Court to impose a fine on the guardian, if the guardian fails to pay into Court the balance due from him on the accounts exhibited by him in compliance with a requisition under S. 34 (c). The payment contemplated, has to be made in compliance with a requisition under S. 34 (d). If the requisition be not in conformity with S. 34 (d), no fine can validly be imposed on the guardians for failure to comply therewith. Jagannath v. Mahesh, 36 Ind. Cas. 286 = 25 C.L.J. 149.

Guardian ad litem.

(1) Guardian ad litem—Suit on mortgage against father and sons—Father appointed—Allegations of immorality against father—Interest adverse to minors—Subsequent suit by sons.

A suit for sale on a mortgage executed by the father of a joint family governed by the Mita-kshara was instituted against the father, an adult son and his other minor sons. The father was appointed guardian ad litem of the minors. The appointment was made without taking the father's consent. No appearance was entered and an ex parte decree was passed in execution whereof the family property was sold. On attaining majority the minor sons brought a suit for possession of their shares in the property. They impugned the debt and alleged that the father was a man of bad character and they had not been represented at all in the previous suit:

Held, that there was a serious irregularity in the appointment of the father to act as guardian of his minor sons and qua the question sought to be put in issue in the suit by the sons, he was not a fit and proper person to be appointed as guardian. *Bajjnath Rai v. Guardian and Ward.

(1) Res judicata—Gross negligence of guardian—Confession of judgment by guardian—Suit merely for a declaration to set aside decree by minor after attaining majority—Form of decree.

The present suit was filed by a minor after attaining majority for a mere declaration that a decree passed against him was not binding on him. He alleged gross negligence on the part of his guardian who had conducted the case on his behalf and confessed judgment. The claim was to set aside certain alienations in favour of ancestor of the minor.

Held, that the suit was not competent, for the plaintiff could ask for other consequential relief. On appeal the claim was decreed and declaration prayed for was granted.

Since no objection as to form of the suit was preferred on second appeal the Chief Court did not take this matter up, and found that the plaintiff had prima facie good pleas against the claim and came to the conclusion that owing to gross negligence of the guardian in not resisting the previous claim the consent decree was not binding on the plaintiff, and held that the validity of the pleas shall have to be decided in a suit which might be brought subsequently for possession of the property. Mohan Lal v. Neki, 117 P.L.R. 1916.

(2) Unregistered sale by guardian of minor—Suit by minor after attaining majority against purchaser—Limitation—Limitation

Guardian and Ward—(Concluded).

Act (IX of 1908), Sch. I, Art. 48, inapplicable.

Where a purported sale by the guardian of a minor was not registered as required by law, and no title passed under it, the minor on attaining his majority is entitled to bring his action for trespass in ejectment as against the trespasser against the alleged purchaser; and Art. 44, Sch. I of the Limitation Act (IX of 1908), does not apply as it is applicable only when the sale is enforceable, that is, a sale which if not set aside will give a right to the property. *Sani Kommu Velligondareddi v. (3) Guardian and Ward—Employment of ward's moneys in guardian's own trade—His liability—Indian Trust Act (1882), S. 23.

Under S. 23 (6) of the Indian Trusts Act a guardian using his ward's moneys in his own business is liable either to account with compound interest at six per cent. with half yearly rests or to account for the net profits made by the employment of the minor's moneys.

The fact that he has admitted his liability to pay interest at 7½ per cent. is no ground for not applying the statutory provision as to the rate of interest payable in case of a breach of trust. Ylwanathan v. Brahmanadhan, 34 Ind. Cas. 300.

S. 7 of the Guardians and Wards Act contemplates only a summary inquiry followed by an order made for the welfare of the minor. It does not contemplate elaborate inquiries whether the property left by the deceased was his separate or joint family property. When an application is made on the footing and with the claim that the minor is separately entitled to separate property, the Court ought to appoint a proper person as guardian of the property of the minor, leaving it to the guardian to institute suits for the recovery of the property which he claims. *Guruppa Shivgenappa Putti v. Questions relating to the furnishing of security by a guardian come under S. 34 (a) of the Guardians and Wards Act, and no appeal lies under S. 47 of the Act against acts done by the Court under S. 34 of the Act (a).

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—It is only after the appointment that the person appointed can be required under the Act to give security under S. 34 (a). If he contumaciously fails to give security, S. 39, cl. (e), empowers the Court to remove him from the guardianship.

Therefore rr. 240, 241 and 242 and Forms 92 and 94 of the Civil Rules of Practice, so far as they require the security to be furnished and approved of before the appointment of guardian is made, seem to be ultra vires.

Per Moore, J. (Contra):—The above rules framed by the High Court are not ultra vires. The appointment is made conditional on security being furnished, and the procedure followed in the mofussil is correct and does not contravene any express provisions in the Act. *Gopamma v. V. (8) S. 17 (3)—Duty of Court in making orders under — Minor — Age limit for forming "intelligent preference."

It may now be taken as settled law in India that a boy of 14 and a girl of 16 years of age have a right to a consideration under the above section of their preference as to where they will live, and in this respect the civil law has adopted the age limits for kidnapping from lawful guardianship enacted by the Indian Penal Code.

Act VIII of 1890 makes the selection by a minor 'old enough to form an intelligent preference' a matter for consideration by the Court and not a matter of right in the minor.

In passing orders under the Act for the custody of a minor, the Court must be guided by what, consistently with the law to which the minor is subject, it considers under the circumstances to be most conducive to the welfare of the minor. Battoolal v. Mrs. Ekstrand, 12 N.L.R. 35=32 Ind. Cas. 977.

(9) S. 19 (a)—Minor child, presumption as to the religion of—Duty of guardian—Marriage of Christian minor with Chamar whether valid—Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872), S. 4—Right to be appointed guardian.

Held, that a child in India must, under ordinary circumstances, be presumed to have his father's religion and his corresponding civil and social status, and it is, therefore, ordinarily the duty of a guardian to train his infant ward in such religion (a).

An Indian Christian who was originally a Chamar died leaving behind his wife and a minor daughter. Shortly after this the wife was received back into the Chamar brotherhood and immediately afterwards she married the minor girl to a Chamar to whom she had been already betrothed by her father. On an application for the appointment of a guardian to the person of the minor:

Held, (1) that the mere fact that the Indian Christian betrothed his daughter to a Chamar did not warrant the inference that he renounced the Christian religion ;

(2) that inasmuch as the father of the girl was, and died, a Christian, the girl must be presumed to be a Christian and the alleged marriage was, therefore, invalid ;

(3) that the mother of the girl having renounced the Christian religion was not a fit person to have charge of the girl, who must be brought up as a Christian until she reached years of discretion when she could choose for herself. *Canon S. A Mahomedan father applied to the District Court under S. 25 of the Guardians and Wards Act for the custody of his minor son between 15 and 16 years old. The minor was in his mother's custody during her lifetime and after her death had passed into the custody of his maternal grandmother (mother's mother) at the time of the application by the father. It was contended that S. 25 of the Act did not apply to the case and that the boy being 16 he had a discretion in law to reside with his mother and in her absence with his grandmother.

Held that the wishes of the minor, who was over 14, should, no doubt, be consulted, not as conclusive on the matter of his welfare, but as an important factor to be taken into account in arriving at a conclusion.

Held also that S. 25 of the Act would apply to all cases where the guardian applied for the custody of the minor, whether the minor had ever before been in his custody or not (a).

Under the Majority Act, a Mussalman boy is bound to remain in the custody of his guardian till he attains 18, notwithstanding that, under the Shafi Law to which he is subject, his personal emancipation would have taken place when he attained the age of 15 (b).

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—It is very doubtful whether a minor can at all be the managing member of a Hindu family though he is the senior male member, or whether he can be the guardian of the person or property of his minor wife or children.

The amendment of S. 21 of the Act suggested.

Per Napier, J.—The large rights given by S. 25 of the Act include lesser rights not specifically provided for. The object of Ss. 24 and 25 is to declare the right of the guardian of the person of the minor to the continuous custody of his person and to provide a machinery for enforcing it (c). *Mohideen Ibrahim Nachi v. (15) S. 30—Alienation by guardian—Sanction of District Court—Agreement to pay interest not sanctioned—Right to reasonable interest—Sust by minors to avoid the alienation—Duty of minors.

A deed on a mortgage executed by B on behalf of herself and as guardian of her two sons, and a decree was passed for principal, interest at 9 p.c. and costs against the defendants and the property under mortgage. The two sons appealed on the ground (1) that the District Judge did not in express terms sanction the agreement by B to pay interest at 9 p.c. on the principal amount, and (2) that in any event the mortgage was merely for a period of 4 years and that consequently no interest can be claimed after that period.

It was proved that the guardian could not have succeeded in borrowing money unless she agreed to pay interest, and that the loan was for the benefit of the minors.

Held, that the agreement to pay interest and to make that interest a charge on the property, though not sanctioned by the Court, was, under S. 30 of the Guardians and Wards Act, merely voidable at the instance of the minors, and that the minors' prayer can be granted only on the condition that they on their part must restore all benefits which they have received under their guardian's contract, i.e., they must repay the principal and the reasonable interest of 9 p.c. thereon.

As regards the claim for interest after 4 years, held that the Court is entitled to award interest by way of compensation or damages for at least 6 years after the termination of the mortgage, and thus at such rate as the Court may think reasonable, and that the rate of 9 p.c. agreed upon in this case was both reasonable and equitable. Where a certificate of guardian of minors obtained permission to sell a portion of their estate on the representation that the money (about Rs. 3,000) was wanted to repair their house and submitted accounts showing that out of Rs. 5,000 obtained by the sale, Rs. 4,000 had been retained by the purchaser in payment of a sum of Rs. 4,000 which the guardian had borrowed from her to give the minors in marriage, and the Judge thereupon called upon the guardian to pay the said amount of Rs. 4,000 in Court within a specified time and directed that on failure to do so the guardian was to pay a fine of Rs. 5 per diem.

Held, that the amount the guardian was called upon to pay was not an amount of balance due from the guardian as the same had not been paid to her, nor was it a balance due on accounts filed in compliance with a requisition under cl. (d) of S. 34 of the Guardians and Wards Act and the order imposing a daily fine was ultra vires. In re Nikhranessa Bibi, 20 C.W.N. 663=39 Ind. Cas. 918.

—2.—Adoption.

See CUSTOMS—PUNJAB—ADOPTION.

(1) Adoption by widow—Consent of near or remote Sapindas—Essentials—Nature of consent—Adoption long after authority given to adopt—Validity—Power of Court.

As the assent is regarded as a substitute for the authority of the husband and as the Hindu law enjoins that such an assent should be obtained from those who would be the natural advisers and protectors of the widow prima facie, it should be sought from those who are next in the line of succession. There is no direct authority which holds that, where there are near Sapindas, the adoption is invalid, if the remoter ones are not consulted. It would introduce an inconvenient and unworkable principle, if it were held that in a large family the assent of the majority of persons who are capable of giving their consent should be obtained.

The assent of the Sapindas need not be regarded as a religious act. Yagnavalkya's text implies that it is protection in temporal affairs that is contemplated.

No general principle applicable to all cases can be laid down. Where the nearest Sapindas are a sufficiently large number (six) as in this case it is unreasonable to contend that they should be ignored, and that the widow is entitled to apply to persons more remote.

Where there are only one or two near Sapindas, who from improper motives withhold their consent, it may be open to the widow to apply to more remote Sapindas.

The widow has no right to conclude on a priori reasoning that the Sapindas would have refused to give their consent as they were inimical to her and that the consultation would prove futile. It is her duty to obtain their permission.

Courts will be justified in scanning with care an adoption which purports to be based on an authority given many years before the event.

- (2) Mitakshara—Partition between adopted son of one brother and natural son of another—Position of the adopted son in Hindu law—Doctrine that adopted son on partition takes a reduced share—Its application confined in case of competition with natural born son of the same father.

According to Hindu Law an adopted son occupies the same position, and has the same rights and privileges in the family of the adopter, as the legitimate son, except in a few specified instances, which have been clearly and carefully noted and defined by writers on the subject of adoption. The theory of adoption involves the principle of a complete severance of the child adopted from the family in which he is born; both in respect to the paternal and the maternal line and his complete substitution into the adopter's family as if he were born in it.

Statement as to the Hindu Law of adoption made by Romesh Chunder Mitter, J., in 10 I.A. 138, approved.

The doctrine according to which an adopted son on partition takes only a reduced share in the family property applies only in cases in which the competition is between an adopted son and a natural born son of the same father.

An adopted son, like a natural son, has power to compel his adoptive father to a partition of the ancestral property.

A condition, made at the time of adoption that there should be no partition during the adoptive father's lifetime is a valid and reasonable condition which is binding on the adopted son (A).

It only defines and limits the son's enjoyment to the kind of enjoyment which a joint son has in ancestral property of which his father is the manager. It does not deprive the son of his rights in the property itself. Korat v. Pan-cham, 12 N.L.R. 29 = 33 Ind. Cas. 753.

R, a Hindu mahajan of means, died on 11th February 1896, leaving him surviving a widow and a daughter. He had been suffering from phthisis for some time. Two months before his death he executed a Will, by which he made a very modest provision for his daughter, and gave his wife a life-interest in the bulk of his properties (which, however, she was liable to forfeit if she behaved contrary to the injunctions of the Will). The testator had been hopeful that a son might be born to him, and the son, if born, was, under the Will, to be the "sole executor, donee and owner." The Will contained no power to adopt a son. Seven years after the death of A, his widow adopted an infant son of R's nephew J, both after R's death. By his Will R had expressly excluded J, on account of his profligacy and irreligion, from participation in his funeral ceremonies, preferring for that purpose his sister's son B, in whom he had confidence and who lived in the same house with him and whom he appointed one of his executors. The authority for the adoption was alleged to have been given by R, shortly before his death (when he appeared to have become aware of the serious nature of his illness) verbally to his wife, in the presence of several respectable witnesses, most of whom deposed that R had expressly directed a son of J (should one be born) to be taken in adoption. The Trial Judge had held the alleged authority to adopt to have been proved. But the High Court on appeal reversed that finding, relying chiefly upon the contrary inferences regarding probabilities arising from the language of the Will and discrepancies in the depositions of the several witnesses who spoke of R's giving the authority to adopt.

Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the probabilities were not adverse to the view that the testator might have modified his original intentions as expressed in his Will which was executed before he came to realise how short his life was, and the balance of testimony being distinctly in favour of the story that the authority to adopt had been given, not only had the Trial Court not approached the case with bias but had taken a fairer and less one-sided view of the facts than that which prevailed in the High Court.

That the view of the Judge who tried the case and saw nearly all the witnesses on a question of evidence such as this was obviously entitled to great weight.

That such discrepancies as there were might well be accounted for by the fact that the conversation which the witnesses described had taken place some 13 years previously.

At the trial, the widow of R, who first came forward to support the adoption, appeared later on to have gone over to the opposite camp, viz., of B, who was opposing the adoption.

Held—That the omission by both parties to cite her as a witness was in the circumstances justifiable.

The question whether, assuming authority to adopt to have been given, the adoption of J's son would make him a son of the testator capable of taking under the terms of the Will was raised in the Trial Court and decided in favour of the adopted son and it was not argued in the Appeal Court. The Judicial Committee in the circumstances did not allow the question to be raised before them. *Adwaitya Prasad v. Kayasthas, according to the law prevalent in Bengal, are considered as Sudras. No religious ceremony is necessary for an adoption amongst Kayasthas, mere giving and taking of a son being sufficient to give it validity.

The putresthi jag and namkaran not being essential ceremonies in an adoption between Sudras, the fact that they took place subsequently to the giving and taking did not affect the validity of the adoption.

Pollution on account of the birth of a relative does not vitiate an adoption. It is only a bar to religious acts and renders religious ceremonies inefficacious; but gift and acceptance of a son are secular acts (a).

Such pollution results from the knowledge of the fact of birth.

In laying down the rule that the adopted son of a Sudra shares the inheritance equally with the after-born natural son, the Dattaka Chandrika has in no way deviated from the smritis and the rule, which has been accepted as correct by both the Madras and Calcutta High Courts, should not be departed from.

An ekrar-patra of the adoptive father covenanting that an after-born natural son of his shall not be entitled to claim a larger share but will divide the inheritance equally with the son he was adopting, is valid and operative (b).

It is now settled law that, as regards inheritance, the adopted son holds in all respects the same position as an aurasa son except in some special matters. An aurasa son has a superior right in respect of pitri-matri kṛtyas, but there is no such preference in respect of shevas or deva kṛtyas.

Held—Therefore, that an adopted son of a Sudra was entitled to inherit debutter properties in the right of shebastship jointly with an afterborn natural son.

A permanent image is not absolutely essential for dedication to a Thakur.

Where the intention of the donor appeared to have been to dedicate the property absolutely to deva sheba, the fact that the income of the property exceeded the expenses of the sheba and the sheba frequently dealt with the property or the income as personal property would not make the property secular subject to charge for the deva sheba. *Asita Mohon Ghosh Moulik v. Where, in the case of an alleged adoption, it was found that no feast is proved to have taken place on the occasion of the adoption, the ceremonies, said to have been performed, were of the briefest possible description, no formal notification was made to the authorities, that the child's name was not changed, and that he was never taken to live with his new family or recognised by them in any way, that all the surrounding circumstances and conditions point in the opposite direction. (11) Adoption—Hindu Law and custom—Lahore khatris—No ceremony necessary only giving and accepting required—Adoption of daughter's son by widow under authority of husband—Gift of immoveable property by widow in favour of daughter after adoption is invalid—Mesne profits.

Held that:—

1. According to Hindu Law of adoption the essential and operative portion of the ceremony is the giving and accepting, and, in the Punjab, where the strict Hindu Law ceremonies are rarely observed in their entirety the giving and accepting of a child in adoption is all the ceremony that is essential.

2. According to the custom generally prevailing among Lahore Khatries the adoption of a daughter's son is valid (a).

3. An adoption made by a widow of a Lahore Khatri under authority conveyed to her by the will of her late husband confers upon the adoptee the rights of a real son for all intents and purposes.

4. A daughter cannot succeed in the presence of such an adopted son, therefore, after adoption, a gift by the widow of her husband's immoveable property in favour of her daughter is invalid.

5. Reasonable mesne profits are recoverable by the adopted son from the daughter for the period she illegally remains in possession of her father's property. Musammatt Nikki v. Gujjar Mal, 152 P.W.R. 1916=34 Ind. Cas. 478.

Obiter:—Under the Hindu law, a widow is entitled to a suitable residence and also to a fixed recurring sum for her maintenance. The rule of law is clear that in fixing the amount of maintenance for a widow provision must be made for her reasonable wants, namely, for the purpose of charities and the discharge of religious obligations, in addition to a reasonable provision for her food, raiment and lodging, having regard to the amount of the estate, which is liable for her maintenance, her position in life and the circumstances of the family. Musammatt Kewati v. (13) Hindu law—Adoption—What constitutes an intention to convert self-acquired property into joint property.

To create a title by way of joint property or to convert self-acquired property into joint property, a clear intention to waive the separate right of the owner must be established and will not be inferred from acts which may have been done out of kindness and affection.

The mere tie of adoptive father and son is not sufficient to show an intention to convert self-acquired property into joint property.

The mere fact of a Hindu and his adopted son living together, and that the adopted son assisted the father in the management of his property is not sufficient to warrant the presumption that the adoptive father had thrown his self-acquired property into the common stock which would enure for the benefit of the adopted son also. Moulvi Syed Tajmulali v. Where during his lifetime, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara executed and made over, to his daughter by a deed of gift certain properties and where, in that deed, he described her as putrika and her descendants as putrika putra and heirs of his present and future properties,

Held that the daughter was not appointed as a son to her sonless father, and that she was not liable as a son to discharge her father's debts.

The appointment of a daughter as a son to raise up issue to a sonless father is now obsolete. If this custom or usage is relied on in any given case it must be conclusively and undeniably proved. Even if such obsolete custom can be established, it cannot be held that all the duties and obligations imposed on a Hindu son to discharge the debts of his father under the Mitakshara law would apply or attach to a daughter appointed as a putrika to raise issue to a sonless father under this alleged custom (a).

A mere recital in a deed cannot cut down or abridge the clear and unambiguous words used in the operative part of the document itself.

Held that even if the Mitakshara law did apply to the donee as putrika, she would only become joint with her father during his lifetime if the property was ancestral, and then only would the joint property be available to discharge his debts. Bablu Rata Kuer v. Babu Puran Mal, 1 Pat. L.J. 581.

The plaintiff and the 4th defendant were two undivided brothers. During the absence of the 4th defendant (the younger brother), the plaintiff, who had just then attained majority and who was then living with his father-in-law (the 1st defendant) and his brother-in-law (the 2nd defendant), alienated in 1900 a portion of the family properties, including his brother's share, in favour of his brother-in-law. In 1906, there was a division of family properties between the plaintiff and his brother and property so alienated was excluded therefrom. Later on, the 4th defendant, having discovered that the sale of 1900 was benami and not real and was intended to deprive him of his share in the property so alienated, brought a suit in 1911 against the 2nd defendant and obtained a decree for his half share of the property. During the pendency of that suit, the plaintiff instituted the present suit for the recovery of his half share in the properties sold to the 2nd defendant, substantially on the same allegations as the 4th defendant.

Held that, the sale to 2nd defendant having originally been intended to defraud the 4th defendant and that intention having been fully

(2) Alienation by widow—Suit by reversioner—Onus of proof of necessity on purchaser—Substantial amount paid for consideration—Form of decree.

In a suit by the reversioner to set aside alienations made by the widow of the last male owner, the question is whether the purchasers have discharged the onus that lay upon them of satisfying the Court either that the money was in fact paid for a necessary purpose or that having made reasonable enquiries they were satisfied that it was likely to be used or was intended to be used for a necessary purpose. On the question of necessity the test to apply is the existence of necessity or the making of reasonable enquiries as to the connection between the money advanced and the necessity that is proved. The purchaser or the descendant or other representative-in-interest of the purchaser, when the purchase is from a Hindu widow, must show that he made enquiry allunde as regards the necessity for the debt and it cannot be left a mere matter for inference.

Where a substantial portion of the money paid by the purchaser (in the present case Rs. 1,700 out of Rs. 2,500) can be shown to have been applied to necessary purposes, the proper course is to allow the purchaser to retain the land on payment of the balance of purchase price as to which no necessary and legal purposes are proved. *Pedayya v. The rule laid down by the Judicial Committee in 5 M.L.A. 373 at p. 423 is not restricted to cases of mortgage or other forms of partial alienation, nor is it restricted in its application to cases of necessity alone, for a "benefit" of the estate is to be differentiated from the "need" of the estate as a circumstance justifying alienation.

But mere increase in the immediate income of the minor or of his estate does not necessarily justify the inference that the particular transaction is for the benefit of the estate within the meaning of the rule which could not have been intended to include cases of speculative development of estates of minors. *Krishna Chandra Chowdhry v. In order to render an alienation by a widow valid against the reversioners, it is not enough for the alienee merely to prove the existence of necessity, or the making of reasonable enquiries, by him. He is bound to go further and to show some connection between the money paid and the necessity of it.

It may be a hardship to require a man to show that a dead person made an enquiry of a particular nature a number of years ago and an intolerable burden of proof ought not to be cast on him after great lapse of time. But as the law stands, in the case of a purchase from a Hindu widow, the purchaser on his descendant or other representative-in-interest must show that he made some enquiry aliunde and this cannot be left to be inferred from the circumstances.

Where, in the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow, a substantial portion of the purchase money is shown to have been applied for necessary and legal purposes and the rest not, the proper course is to allow the purchaser or his representatives in interest to retain the land on payment of the balance of the sale consideration not shown to have been so applied. *Seshamma v. Plaintiff's father sold away all his properties to one S in 1885. S brought a suit in 1887 for possession of the properties, and he got possession eventually in 1899.

In 1906, plaintiff's elder brother (who was in his mother's womb in 1885 at the time of the sale) brought a suit making the plaintiff, and the plaintiff's father and the purchasers from S parties to the suit. Plaintiff's brother ultimately succeeded in getting his alleged $\frac{1}{3}$ share decreed to him. Plaintiff's father died in 1908. Plaintiff who was born in 1901 brought the present suit in 1910 for recovering his share in the property.

Held that, as the entire family property was sold away in 1885, there was no property left in which plaintiff had an interest by birth.

Held also, that the suit was barred under Art. 126, Limitation Act, and as the plaintiff's brother could have brought such a suit as regards the plaintiff's share also (assuming that plaintiff had a share) and did not do so, plaintiff was now barred, more than 3 years having elapsed from the date of the plaintiff's brother's attainment of majority when this suit was brought. *Soundararajan v. (9) Mortgage by Mitakshara father—Son, though of age, not a party to the deed—His liability—Moral obligation to pay father's debts, unless incurred for immoral purposes—Legal proof of immoral purposes.

Liability on the part of a son to pay a father's debt arises from moral and religious duty and obligation and this is so even though the debt is not incurred for the benefit of the individual or for the estate. A son can only exempt himself from liability if he can establish that the father was guilty of applying the money for some immoral purpose.

Although there need not be any direct proof that the money was raised to be spent on any particular person, yet one must be reasonably satisfied that the father was a man of vicious, extravagant and lustful habits and that he raised the money for the purpose of applying it for the immoral purpose. In some way by reasonable legal proof it must be shown that there is a connection with the debt and the immoral purpose (a).

To be liable on a mortgage executed by the father for a purpose not proved to be immoral, it is not necessary for the adult sons to be parties to the bond.

(11) Duty of person lending money to manager of joint Hindu family—Onus when discharged.

Per Atkinson, J.—A lender is bound, when advancing money to a manager of a joint Hindu property, to satisfy himself by due enquiry, honestly made, that the advance is required by the manager, as borrower, for a valid family necessity and for the benefit of the estate. If he acts honestly and makes due enquiry, then, even though the necessity may not in fact exist, he has satisfied the onus imposed upon him by law, and he has reason to believe the truth of the information given to him by reason of such enquiry. This rule of law applies to loans raised by a manager of a joint Hindu family whether the co-sharers be adults or minors.

Per Chapman, J.—When it is desired to attach liability to the members of a joint family by reason of an act done by one of them without the consent of the others, it is necessary to show that the act was the act of a prudent manager or that enquiry into the prudence of the act was made.

It would not be sufficient, in order to charge members of a joint family, for the managing member merely to recite that the money was required for certain specified purposes. Mandil Das v. Megh Navain Dubey, 1 Pat. L.J. 89=34 Ind. Cas. 742.

(12) Alienation by father—Recital as self-acquisition—Binding effect not confined to recital.

Where a man has a double capacity and purports to deal with property in one of such capacities, he must be deemed to have parted with every interest vesting in him by virtue of the undisclosed capacity as well. The Courts should incline to the view that a transferor alienated the property in the capacity most favourable to a bona fide purchaser.

There is no authority for the broad proposition that the party accepting a document is bound by the recitals in it regarding the character of the property and that it is not open to him to put forward an alternative plea.

Where a father sold certain properties reciting in the sale-deed that the properties were his self-acquisition, it is open to the vendee to show, even though the properties were not self-acquired, that the sale was binding upon the family as the money was borrowed for family purposes. *Audmulla Mudali v. The plaintiffs in this case were Mitakshara sons. A decree was obtained upon a mortgage against their father nearly 12 years before the institution of the present suit. The property in suit was sold to the mortgagee (present defendant), and possession delivered to him in 1900. Plaintiffs were not made parties in the suit upon the mortgage. Plaintiffs now sued for an account and for redemption.

Held that, if a suit to redeem was maintainable, the first step necessary for redemption was a declaration that the sale should be set aside. The limitation for a suit to set aside, a sale being one year, the present suit was barred by Art. 12, Limitation Act (1908) (a).

(15) Mortgage—Hindu father—High rate of interest—Legal necessity.

A Hindu father borrowed money on the security of the family property, the loan carrying interest at 18 per cent. per annum with six monthly rests. The bond was in lieu of a promissory note which carried interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. The Courts below reduced the rate of interest to 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the bond:

Held (per Walsh, J.) that, in dealing with matters between a money-lender and a borrower where the loan carries a high rate of interest, Courts ought to apply the strict law and that the rate of interest should not be reduced on the mere allegation that the rate charged is in itself evidence of undue influence or fraud.

Held (per Sundar Lal, J.) that, in view of the fact that the burden of proving legal necessity for a loan in a suit to which the sons were defendants was upon the creditor, it was for him to show that it was also necessary to borrow the money at an exorbitant rate of interest. Padam Singh v. (17) Sale by Manager of joint Hindu family—Sale not binding on other co-parcener—Remedy of purchaser.

A sale of joint property by a co-parcener, though made without legal necessity, is, in this presidency, valid to the extent of the vendor's share (a).

If the vendee of joint family property from the manager whose purchases under circumstances that will not make the alienation binding on the other co-parceners, wishes to stand by such sale which is valid only partially, he must be content with the vendor's share, but if he wishes to repudiate the transaction altogether, his remedy is only against the vendor in a suit for the return of the price paid, on the ground that the consideration for the payment failed.

In the former case he has no equity enforceable against the other co-parcener in respect of any payment properly made (b). Bhojraj v. Nathuram, 12 N.L.R. 161.

(19) Hindu Law—Alienation from a co-parcener—Possession of specific property alienated, suit for, incompetent.

The alienee is not entitled to possession of the specific parcel alienated to him and the only right he acquires is a right to compel the same general partition which his vendor might have compelled and an equity to have the particular property he purchased allotted if possible to his share (a).

Per Crouch, A.J.C.—When an individual member of a co-parcenary purports to sell a particular parcel of the joint estate he can only transfer such right, title and interest as is actually vested in him. To do more is a legal impossibility. In such particular parcel he has a beneficial interest—a right to enjoy it in common with the other co-parceners—and also the chance of it being allotted to him on a general partition, such chance being dependant on his enforcing partition during his lifetime. That is what he alienates.

In all suits for partition, the Court considers not merely the legal rights of the plaintiff but also the legal and equitable rights of all other parties interested, whether on the record or not; and where a particular parcel has been alienated, the Court will ordinarily allot such parcel to the share of the alienating co-parcener, leaving the alienee in possession, provided that this can be done without unfairness to the other persons interested. This is the principle underlying all decisions touching what is called "partial partition."

If, therefore, one of several co-parceners entitled to a one-eighth share, sues the alienee for partition of the particular parcel and for possession of his share, the suit must be dismissed; for the plaintiff can prove no title to the share claimed. On a general partition, the whole parcel might and probably would be allotted to the alienee.

So, also, if all the co-parceners other than the alienor sue for partition of the particular parcel alienated, their claim must be rejected; for they are claiming something to which they cannot prove title, something to which they would almost certainly be found not entitled were there a general partition. *Dularam v. (20) Hindu widow, alienation by in excess of her powers void or voidable—Limitation Act, Art. 44.

An alienation by a de facto guardian without authority is void and to such an alienation Art. 44 of the Limitation Act does not apply (a).

Per Pratt, J.C.—Alienation by a Hindu widow or by a mother as guardian in excess of her authority is ab initio void and not merely voidable and to such an alienation Art. 44 of the Limitation Act has no application.

Per Crouch, A.J.C. contra—Where a Hindu widow acting as the natural guardian of her son's property alienates his property for good consideration but without legal necessity the defendant is entitled to the benefit of Art. 44 of the Limitation Act (b).

The use of the words "void" and "voidable" in connection with Art. 44, is misleading, for suits lie to set aside void sales, and where a sale is voidable a plaintiff can sue for possession, exercising his right to avoid the sale by an overt act of election implied by such suit. But in determining the scope of Art. 44, the High Courts of India have found the division of sales into void and voidable a convenient one. Gehimal v. Karmunai, 10 S.L.R. 38 = 35 Ind. Cas. 551.

(21) Alienation by woman of an estate—Effect of such alienation as waste—Right of reversioner to sue for recovery of possession or for appointment of manager.

The plaintiff, a reversioner, sued for a declaration that the alienations mentioned in the plaint were invalid and had no binding effect on him, for a decree for possession of the properties and, in case the Court held that he was not entitled to immediate possession, for a decree for placing him in charge of the properties as manager during the lifetime of the daughters of the last male owner of the properties. The plaintiff alleged, that by the ekrarnamas referred to in the plaint the daughters relinquished their heritable right and in consequence accelerated the succession of the plaintiff to the estate of the last male owner. Held that, though the estate of a Hindu widow or, as in this case, of a daughter might determine in various ways, the ekrarnamas set out in the plaint did not amount to more than an alienation. An alienation in favour of a third party did not have the effect of accelerating the estate and entitle the next reversioner to immediate possession. There was no relinquishment in favour of the reversioner in the present case nor was any such relinquishment alleged which would accelerate the estate in favour of the plaintiff as such reversioner. Therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain a suit for immediate possession of the properties left by the last male owner. (a). Held also that the allegations of the plaintiff that the relinquishment by the daughters of the right of inheritance to their father's estate did not amount to waste of the estate justifying the Court in considering whether the estate should be taken out of their hands. A Hindu lady in that possession has an absolute right and full power to alienate the estate for the period of her enjoyment to an outsider. That will not give the reversioner the right to come in and plead waste, and, insist on the estate being brought into possession by the Court. There were no allegations in the plaint which pointed to anything like spoliation of the estate or indicate that the estate in any way suffered or was likely to suffer from its being held by the alienee. Therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to ask for the appointment

In a case governed by a custom under which the property was distributed among the sons of a person according to the number of their mothers, the question arose whether the descendants of the sons of one of them could succeed collaterally to the property left by the descendants of another of them, so long as the other descendants, though lower in degree of the same stock, were alive.

Held, that the result of such a custom was to constitute brothers by the same father and mother and their descendants (persons) of one stock for the purposes of inheritance and as a logical result of the custom the persons who are

(1) Manager—Debt for family purposes—Decree against manager alone—Liability of shares of other co-parceners in execution of the decree—Civ. Pro. Code (1908), S. 53.

The plaintiff sued in the Small Cause Court on an instrument of loan signed by the judgment-debtor alone and obtained a decree. He next sued to establish his right to attach and sell in execution of the decree the interest of the defendant who was a brother and co-parcener of the judgment-debtor. The money was borrowed for the benefit of all the brothers. The defendant, however, was not a party to the suit in the Small Cause Court.

Held, that, as the stage of sale had not been reached, there was no reason for assuming jurisdiction to dispose of property belonging to one who was no party to the suit and was not a representative of the judgment-debtor.

Held, (1) that the father in borrowing the money acted as the agent of the family and, therefore, the son was as much liable for the payment of the debt as the father;

(2) that under the circumstances the question of the son's personal liability did not arise, as he had died during the pendency of the appeal leaving his widow as his sole heir, and that the family property was liable for the amount. Anant Ram v. Mansa Ram, 39 P.W.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 780.

S was agent and servant of L. L gave S a certain sum of money to be paid over to a creditor of L. The money was neither so paid nor returned to L. L obtained a decree against S for recovery of the money; but there was no criminal prosecution. In satisfaction of the decree as well as for other consideration S executed a mortgage of joint ancestral property. In a suit on the mortgage, the sons and a grandson of S, contended that the family property could not be made liable for the mortgage debt, because part of the consideration for the mortgage was tainted with immorality inasmuch as it was a re-imbusement of money which had been embezzled by S.

During the pendency of the suit, the plaintiff died and the suit abated and was dismissed. Subsequently the suit was restored under O. XXII, r. 9 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, and was eventually decreed on appeal.

Held, that it could not be said in the present case that the decrees had been passed for recovery of money which had been criminally embezzled.

If an antecedent debt relates to a transaction which was tainted with immorality, its existence would not vitiate the subsequent mortgage to be enforced against the joint family property.

The words "error, defect or irregularity" in S. 105, Civ. Pro. Code, evidently mean error, defect or irregularity affecting the decision of the case on the merits. Hence, the validity of an order under O. XXII, r. 9 (2), Civ. Pro. Code, cannot be questioned under S. 105, Civ. Pro. Code. Nidha Lal v. The Collector of Bulandshahr, 14 A.L.J. 610=35 Ind. P, a Hindu during his life-time gifted his property to his sister's sons R and C of whom R was married to his daughter K. After P's death, his widow and his daughter sued to recover his property, ignoring altogether the gift in favour of the nephews and setting up that R held the property merely as manager. The suit ended in a compromise under which the whole property was divided into 3 shares of which C was to take one absolutely, and R and K one each, both of which were to go after their deaths to their common children. After K's death the plaintiffs as reversioners claimed her 1/3 share on the allegation that it was held by her as a woman's estate.

Held, that in effecting the compromise the intention of the parties thereto was not that K should be allotted 1/3 of the property as heir of her deceased father, but that the property should be settled as to two-thirds upon R and his wife and their children, the result being that the two shares were ultimately settled upon the heirs of R by K, and that effect should be given to intention of the parties thus expressed in the absence of proof that the compromise decree was a fraud entered into to defeat the rights of reversioners. *Ramasami Naidu v. - (1) Hindu Law—Mother of infants charged with bad character and found to have expressed intention to become and make her boys Christian—Bad character not proved—Undertaking not to baptise children—Associating Hindu uncle in guardianship.

D, the uncle of two fatherless Hindu boys aged 7 and 5 years respectively, applied to be appointed their guardian, alleging that their mother S, was a woman of bad moral character and had made up her mind to adopt the Christian religion and to get her sons baptised. The first allegation was not established.

Held—That the charge of immorality, though not proved, made it impossible for S to live with the family who made the charge and must be taken into consideration in passing orders on the petition.

That S's expressing a desire to become a Christian or even becoming one would in itself be no ground for removing her from the guardianship, provided she was in a position to satisfy the Court that she was able to carry out the obligations which the law imposed upon her of bringing up her children in the faith of her husband, whatever faith she herself might adopt.

It was proved that she had expressed her intention to convert her sons to Christianity but her counsel having given an undertaking that she would not baptise her children, the Court passed order appointing her guardian of the minors' person and property, associating in the guardianship, the uncle D, who would as such guardian be in a position to see that S's undertaking to bring up the children in the Hindu faith was properly carried out. The older boy was ordered to be placed at once as a boarder in a Hindu hostel which though attached to the Church Missionary Society was conducted in conformity with Hindu religious views, the younger boy being also ordered to be similarly placed when he should attain the age of 7 years until which time he was to live with S, liberty being given to D to apply to the District Judge whenever a breach of the undertaking was apprehended. *Dwijapadar Kar-makar v. —10.—Impartible Estates.

(1) Joint family—Succession to—Grant of confiscated property to one member—Effect of.

The question of partibility or impartibility of an estate is a question of fact in each case. When the Government makes a grant of an estate, it can determine the nature of the grant, but, in the absence of specific terms in the grant, regard must be had to surrounding circumstances.

Where joint family property was confiscated and on reconstitution being made, the Government restored it by making a fresh grant to one of its members without any reference being made to the nature of that grant, held that the property so restored would be joint family property of the family.

The normal constitution of a Hindu family holding property whether partible or impartible is that of union. In the case of impartible raj, however, the estate is enjoyed by the whole family through the occupant of the gaddi, but the junior members have no right to partition nor can they agree to separate. They get property for their maintenance.

Where the descendants of a junior member of an impartible raj partitioned the property given to their ancestor for maintenance, held that, even if they had a legal right to partition, it was not conclusive on the question whether the raj had ceased to be joint for the purpose of finding out a successor to the gaddi.

In this case by virtue of a custom the widow succeeded her husband to the gaddi of an impartible estate. On her death the dispute arose between the plaintiff who was descended from the senior branch of the family and the defendants who were nearer in blood to the late raja: Held, that the estate being joint and indivisible the plaintiff had a preferential right. *Baljnath Prasad Singh v. —11.—Inheritance.

- (1) Mitakshara—Benares school of law—Right of daughter of father's brother of last male owner to inherit in the absence of other heirs.

According to the Benares school, females do not succeed to males unless their right of inheritance is expressly recognised by some text in their favour. Females whose right of inheritance is so recognised are (1) the widow; (2) the daughter; (3) the mother; (4) the father's mother, and (5) the father's father's mother.

Therefore, under the Mitakshara Law, the daughter of the uncle of the last male owner (an Arora) is not entitled, in the absence of all other heirs, to inherit the property. Musammam Bibi Sodhan v. Harsa Singh, 51 P. R. 1916 = 138 P.W.R. 1916 = 155 P.L.R. 1916 = 34 Ind. Cas. 585.

- (6) Hindu Law—Daughter's estate—Partition of mother's estate amongst daughters—Alienation by sons of one daughter—Death of daughter—Suit by surviving daughter against alienees not maintainable.

Where two or more daughters succeed to their mother's estate, the interest which they take is a joint interest which in the absence of agreement between themselves, would devolve on the survivors on the death of any one of them, and their sons would not take as their heirs, but as the heirs of their grandmother.

A mother died leaving three daughters, and they instead of remaining in joint possession, each of them took one-third of the property. Each of them had sons and each of them got their sons' names recorded in respect of the one-third which they took. The sons of one daughter transferred their one-third share. On the death of their mother, the remaining daughter (the other daughter having died long ago) sued the transferees to recover possession of one-third share.

Held that the only possible inference that could be drawn from the above circumstances was that the ladies had agreed to divide up the property amongst them in such a way as to bind all three; and that as the three daughters were all bound by what they did the last surviving daughter was not entitled to sue for her deceased sister's share. Baldeo Prasad v. M who, during the lifetime of K, became a convert to Islam, instituted in 1911 the present suit for the possession of the entire property left by K, on the footing that he was joint in estate with K, and that after K's death he was entitled to take the whole property by survivorship.

Held, that the plaintiff embraced Islam ten or eleven years before the institution of the suit and that the effect of his conversion was ipso facto to separate him from the co-parcenary (a).

As by reason of his conversion to Islam he was not a member of the joint Hindu family at the time when the suit was instituted, it was for him to prove that the separation had not taken place more than 12 years before the suit was instituted (b).

Held, that the plaintiff failed to prove that his suit for a share of co-parcenary property on separation was within time under Art. 142 of the Limitation Act.

Held also, that all that the plaintiff was entitled to was a share in the ancestral property.

The presumption as regards ancestral property is that his title continued until it was extinguished by some overt act of adverse possession. Ganga Singh v. Mussammat Begam, 57 P.R. 1916=159 P.W.R. 1916=1 P.L.R. 1917=25 Ind. Cas. 543.

(6) Hindu Law—Mitakshara property acquired by person receiving special training by the help of the joint property is part of that property—Initial presumption that a member has received such help—Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 114—Joint family and separate property of member defined—Party not coming into witness-box—Its effect—Extent of liability of each member for the family debt—Extent of a minor co-parcener—What is family credit—What is joint family property can be left for determination of Executive Court—Effect of previous decision not inter partes—Res judicata—Rulings of the Special Bench.

In a case where a member of a joint Hindu family has received a special training to qualify himself for a profession or for the service of a State, there is an initial presumption in the absence of all evidence on the point, that he received his training at the expense of the joint family property; it is not necessary to allege and prove this fact like any other fact in the case and the onus of rebutting this presumption lies heavily upon such member and if no evidence is given on either side, the fact should be found in the affirmative (a).

Per Shah Din and Le Rossignol, JJ.—The property acquired by such member becomes part and parcel of the joint family property (b).

2. Per M. Shah Din, J. (24th March, 1916).—The income of a member of a joint family is his separate property if it has been obtained—(1) by his own exertions and (2) without the aid of the joint family property (c).

3. Per Le Rossignol, J.—(17th March 1916).—It is most significant circumstance when a party does not go into the witness-box to deny the allegation made against him.

4. Per M. Shah Din, J. (24th March, 1916).—Where nothing affecting materially the interest of a party has been said there is no need for him to come in the witness-box to give any explanation and therefore no adverse reference can be drawn against him (d).

6. Per M. Shah Din and Le Rossignol, JJ.—Where a Hindu father and his sons constitute a joint Hindu family and are jointly carrying ancestral trade or business they are all liable to pay the amount due on the hundis executed in liquidation of debt incurred, whilst the family business was in an active condition, for the purpose of that business, to the extent of their share in the whole joint family property but not personally.

The fact that one of the sons has become an Indian Civilian and the other a pleader and consequently they have quitted their paternal home is immaterial as such cessor of commensality is a mere accident.

7. Per M. Shah Din and Le Rossignol, JJ.—A minor co-parcener in a joint Hindu family carrying on an ancestral business is liable during his minority only to the extent of his interest in the joint family property, and, on reaching majority, he may sever his connection with the joint family and partition his net share, i.e., after deducting the joint family debt and thereafter be free from all liability in respect of the family he has quitted; should he however elect to remain in the family he impliedly undertakes responsibility for future family debts, but, except in cases where he is an actual contracting party, his liability is confined to his share in the joint estate—unlike a contractual partner he will incur no personal liability (e).

8. The family credit which the manager is entitled to pledge is the credit not of the members but that of the family as a quasi corporate body (f).

9. What is joint family property is a matter which can be left for decision in execution, but where the point has been considered by the 1st Court it is necessary for the appellate Court to determine the principle involved.

Accretions to joint property due to the employment of joint funds are joint property.

10. Per Shah Din, J.—The decision in a previous case is neither res judicata nor relevant in a subsequent suit in which the parties are not the same.

So the finding by the Chief Court in re Amar Nath v. Gurdas Mal reported as 63 P.W.R. 1914 to the effect that the present appellants were not partners in their family firm, known as Nagar Mal Joti Mal and consequently were not liable on the hundis then in dispute is not relevant as the present plaintiff has no party to it.

(7) Presumption as to the time of separation, where separation admitted—Evidence Act, S 90—Ancient documents, discretion of Court in presuming genuineness of.

S. 90 of the Evidence Act leaves it to the discretion of the Court whether or not in certain circumstances it will make the presumption there contemplated.

Where the original is not said to have been lost or to have been missing or to be in the custody of any person who declined to produce it and only a copy of it is produced, it would not be wise to raise a presumption regarding such original.

When certain members of a joint Hindu family bring a suit for possession of certain property—as belonging to that joint family—and allege, in their plaint, a separation some years prior to the date of the suit, there is no presumption remaining: but the family remained joint up to any particular time; and it is for such plaintiffs to prove separation at such a period in the family history as would entitle them to the decree sought. *Tika v. (8) Manager, powers of—Transfer made in order to acquire property on advantageous terms, whether binding on minor members.

There is nothing in the Hindu Law to prevent the head and manager of a joint family comprising only minor members, from doing anything in the interests of the family which any other prudent manager may have done under similar circumstances. It would be in the highest degree deleterious to the interests of such minor members if the head and managing member of the family were restrained from doing anything, however beneficial to their interest, which necessitated the raising of a loan on the security of the ancestral property till the minors attained majority.

Held further, that a transfer made in the interests of the family, that is to enlarge the means of its subsistence might thus be as binding as one made to pay antecedent debts or to meet an immediate necessity.

Where the father acting as manager mortgaged ancestral property in order to acquire by pre-emption on advantageous terms property belonging to a distant branch of the family, held, that the transfer was binding on the (11) Suit by manager—Want of necessary parties—Dismissal.

Where there is an agent appointed to enter into contracts on behalf of the Mitakshara family, it is only proper that that agent should be regarded as representing the family in all suits brought to enforce the contract.

Where a contract has been entered into by one karta, the succeeding karta, upon the death of the maker of the contract, would be entitled to represent the whole family in a suit upon the contract (a).

But if it is intended to sue in the name of a managing member of a family on account of a breach of contract made by a former managing member, it must be clearly stated in the plaint that the suit is by that managing member as a managing member. The name of the present managing member must be clearly given. It is not sufficient that he should be accidentally on the record as one out of the many members of the family of whom several persons had been omitted.

The joint family in this case consisted of the father and three adult sons. The first suit was brought by the father and one son B only to recover a grain debt, due to the family. When the suit came for trial, the father was willing to be bound by the oath of the defendant, but the son B was not willing and obtained permission to withdraw the suit with permission to bring a fresh suit. The suit as brought by the father was dismissed. B and his two brothers now brought a fresh suit on the same cause of action. Held that the parties were exactly in the same position as if all the four members of the family had brought one suit together and the father consented to be bound by the oath of the defendant, while the sons did not, and that the sons were therefore entitled to a decree for their ½ share in the total claim.

When a Hindu father, a member of a joint family, sues or is sued, it is to be presumed that he sues or is sued in his representative capacity, (a) but in the present case, the father was not the sole plaintiff in the first suit, and there was not, in the circumstances of the case, any presumption that he was suing as manager on behalf of the family.

to the eldest son including bonds connected with money lending business, and he was to be liable for the debts. In 1904 while both G and H were minors K paid over Rs. 20,600, and gave to his brothers the property to which they were entitled under the will, and in that year the business styled "Baldeo Das Gulab Chand" was started. G attained majority in or about 1905, and H not till 1912. This firm was started, with the money got from K, G executed the hundis in suit in 1910, on behalf of the firm. H contended in the suit that he was not personally liable, the hundis having been executed and the debts, if any, incurred whilst he was a minor: Held, that the liability having been incurred whilst H was a minor, he was not, under the circumstances of the case, liable to the plaintiff.

Semble, the only separation that could have taken place would be on the basis that the three brothers had agreed to accept the division made by their father, that is to accept the will, but inasmuch as such an arrangement involved a contract there could be none such, a minor being prohibited from contracting by the express provision of law. *Har Bilas v. Where a Mitakshara father has purported to create, for a purpose not connected with the family, a charge upon the property of a joint family of which he was the head, that charge cannot be enforced after the death of the father against a son born into the joint family subsequently to the transaction (a).

One co-parcener has no authority, without the consent of his co-sharers, to mortgage his undivided share in a portion of the joint family estate, in order to raise money on his own account and not for the benefit of the family (b).

(16) Joint family property—Self-acquisition.

Under the Hindu law co-parcenary property falls into three classes. (1) Ancestral property i.e., property which a man inherits from a direct male ancestor. (2) Property acquired by the members of a joint family by or with the assistance of joint funds or by their joint labour and (3) self-acquired property voluntarily thrown by the owner into the joint-stock with the intention of abandoning all separate claims upon it. The member of a joint Hindu family, who alleges that a particular property is joint family property, must show that it falls within one or other of these three categories. Very strong evidence would be needed to make out a case of the third kind. A father's self-acquired property cannot become the joint family property of himself and his sons, simply because the sons had been living with him. In the absence of proof that self-acquired property has been voluntarily thrown into the joint stock it cannot be said to have accreted to the nucleus of joint family property formed by the ancestral property obtained subsequent to the self-acquired property. Narenar Bahadur Singh v. Abdul Haq, 30 Ind. Cas. 26.

(17) Mortgage by one member—Liability of survivors on death of that member.

Where a member of joint Hindu family mortgages the joint family property, the mortgagee cannot get a mortgage decree for sale against the surviving members on the death of the mortgagor, unless the mortgagee proves that the money was borrowed for purposes which are binding on the joint family. Nor can a personal decree against the surviving members be passed, as such a decree would amount to giving the mortgagee indirectly what he cannot obtain directly. Ram Nath v. Mahadeo Prasad, 30 Ind. Cas. 382.

The language of the agreement in this case between the members of a joint Hindu family, which directed division and indicated that certain charities should be managed by the head of the family in each branch for the time being, was held to clearly point to the intention that the management should be in the hands of the male heads and not in the hands of females. Krishnaswami Pillai v. (21) Partition—Agreement among members not a partition—How far binding.

A compromise whereby a Hindu widow bound herself to enjoy (jmal) possession of the family property with the sons and grandsons of her deceased husband's brother and not to ask for partition is binding upon her, if no equitable ground has been made out by her for not giving effect to the agreement (a).

An agreement between the members of a Hindu family not to come to a partition might be binding upon themselves. Chalta Dassya v. Madan Chandra Das Sarkar, 33 Ind. Cas. 33.

(22) Debt—Alienation of property by some members—Legal necessity—Consent of co-parceners—Onus of proof.

A debt contracted by a member of an undivided Hindu family cannot be presumed to have been incurred for a family necessity: it is for the creditor to establish the point by evidence. The fact that a long period having elapsed it would be difficult for the creditor to adduce evidence on the point would in no way relieve him of the obligation to do so. Similarly there is no presumption that a transfer of family property by some of the co-parceners was assented to by the other co-parceners. Bishwanatha Singh v. Rampal Singh, 33 Ind. Cas. 778.

debt contracted by him is executed against the ancestral estate, the judgment-debtor's sons cannot sue to set aside the execution unless they prove that the debt was contracted for immoral purposes (a).

There is no presumption that property belonging to a member of a joint Hindu family is necessarily joint ancestral property, and the onus of proving that it is ancestral lies upon the person who alleges it to be ancestral (b).

Where a will by which a Hindu father disposes of property in favour of his sons is assented to by them, and its terms show clearly that the testator did not intend that the property should be held subject to the incidents of survivorship, the property taken by the sons under the will must be regarded as their self-acquired property (c). Jadunath Singh v. (24) Mortgagee — Assignment of mortgage rights by heirs of mortgagee—Suit for foreclosure by assignee — Maintainability—Assignment by adult member—If lending on his minor brother—Debt incurred for benefit of family.

A mortgage had been effected in favour of a member of a joint family. After his death, his rights descended to his widow, two nephews and his brother's widow. The period of limitation for a suit on the mortgage which was held by this joint family was about to expire. The widows and one nephew who was an adult, the other being a minor, assigned their rights under the mortgage by registered deed for the best sum they could obtain, in order to clear off the debt which had been incurred in the name of the adult member and the two widows, and which had been expended on purposes which were for the benefit of the family. The adult member did not in the deed purport to act as family manager on behalf of his minor brother. The assignees sued the representatives of the mortgagor for foreclosure. Held that they were entitled to a foreclosure decree; and that the adult nephew, in executing the deed of assignment, was acting as karta on behalf of the joint family; and that the assignment was justified by legal necessity which was binding upon the minor although he was no party to the deed. Rukmi Kuar v. Once the property has been alienated out of the family, the son or the grandson can only recover possession by proving that the particular debt for the discharge of which the property was alienated was contracted for an illegal or immoral purpose.

The father in the joint Hindu family, although he may be the manager has the power of alienating the joint family property for the purpose of satisfying an antecedent debt contracted by himself, provided only that the debt is not tainted with illegality or immorality. Jugal Kishore v. (26) Mortgage by father—Suit against sons—Legal necessity—Burden of proof—Practice—Amendment of plaint—When allowed.

Where a mortgagee of joint family properties from the father in a joint Hindu family sued the sons to recover the amount thereof by sale of the mortgaged properties, and the sons pleaded that the mortgage was not valid and binding on them as there was no necessity therefor.

Held, that the burden was on the mortgagee to prove either that the debt was borrowed for a legal necessity and is therefore binding on the joint family property or to show at any rate, that he made some enquiries with the object of satisfying himself that the money was being taken for purposes considered legally binding (a).

Where the relief claimed in the plaint was only for a decree for sale on the basis of the mortgage and the suit was tried in the Court of first instance on the basis alone, held that the plaintiff should not be allowed to amend his plaint, in the appellate Court by adding a prayer in the alternative for a simple money decree against the defendant in case the sums borrowed under the mortgage deed was not proved to have been for legal necessity especially when the defendants had asserted that the moneys, if any, were borrowed by the father for his immoral purposes and no issue regarding it had been raised and decided upon in the lower Court. Budhan Lal v. (30) Separation—Burden of proof—Allowance to mother by sons—Ease by all members—Family custom, proof of—Widow—Maintenance in joint family—Encumbered property inherited—Paying off encumbrance from joint funds—Effect—Survivorship in regard to property inherited collaterally—Evidence Act (I of 1872), S. 145—Discrepancies in witnesses' statement—Judgment, value as authority.

Per Stuart, A.J.C.—Where it is admitted that the members of a Hindu family were joint, the burden of proving separation is on those who allege it. Sons in a joint Hindu family may well give their mother a small separate allowance from the joint family funds for her private expenses to be expended on religious purposes. This circumstance does not lead to the inference that the members had separated.

The fact that a cert. in lease was executed by all the members of the family does not prove that the family is divided. Very strong and cogent evidence should be produced to prove a family custom to the effect that a widow succeeds to the property of her husband even though he is a member of a joint Hindu family.

Where the plaintiff claims the property of his deceased brother by right of survivorship on the ground that he and the deceased were members of a joint Hindu family and the deceased's widow pleads separation between the two brothers and contends that, in case the Court finds that the brothers were undivided, her claim for maintenance should be fixed, the Court need not fix her maintenance if it finds that the family was joint.

Where a joint Hindu family inherits an encumbered property from a collateral, the paying off of the encumbrance out of joint family funds does not show that the property was acquired from such funds.

From the mere fact that a member of a joint family as lambardar managed the property, it cannot be inferred whether the property was or was not treated as joint family property.

If the property has been inherited by members of a joint Hindu family, if it could have been partitioned among them at the time that it was inherited, the rule of survivorship applies. It is not material whether such property came by obstructed inheritance or by unobstructed inheritance (a).

Per Kanhaiya Lal, A.J.C.—Where a Court finds certain discrepancies between a witness's statement made before it and that previously made before another Court, the witness should be asked to explain them as required by S. 145 of the Evidence Act (b).

The payment of a joint liability out of joint funds would not make the property on which that debt is charged a joint acquisition.

Although the rule of survivorship governs property inherited by undivided brothers from their maternal grandfather and which can be treated as ancestral or joint family property, that rule cannot be extended to cases of collateral succession, because the property inherited from separated collaterals cannot be treated as ancestral or joint family property. Unless the property comes by descent from a lineal ancestor in the male line, it cannot be deemed ancestral or joint family property. There is no distinction in principle between separately acquired property and property separately inherited by two or more members of a joint family. The distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property on the one hand and self-acquired and separate property on the other is well marked, and the authorities in India are agreed that the property inherited from collaterals follows the incidents of self-acquired property (c).

A judgment is an authority for what it decides, but not for what may seem logically to follow from it (d). Suraj Bakhsh v. Sukhdal, 32 Ind. Cas. 291.

In a case where the property was acquired by one member of a joint Hindu family, and there was no pre-existing nucleus of ancestral property, the presumption is that it is his separate property and the burden of proving that the property was subsequently thrown into the common stock is on those who assert this; the fact that he lived with his son in that property and supported and married him and carried on business with him elsewhere, and even raised money for the purposes of the business by mortgaging this very property, would not be enough to discharge the onus. *Ethirajulu Naidu v. paternal relatives refuse to act or have disqualified themselves from acting, the maternal relatives acquire authority to contract marriage on behalf of the girl.

A Hindu girl who was living with her paternal aunt and paternal uncle was made over to her maternal uncle as the result of an agreement come to between the parties. Subsequently the paternal aunt's application to be appointed guardian was dismissed. After this the maternal uncle of the girl arranged for the marriage of the girl with a certain person. The paternal aunt then obtained a temporary injunction and got the wedding put off. The marriage, however, was accomplished with the person selected by the maternal uncle. The maternal uncle brought a suit to recover damages for the loss caused to him by the wrongful issue of the injunction and the postponement of the wedding. The Munsiff tried all the issues excepting the one as to the measure of damages and dismissed the suit. Upon appeal the District Judge finding that the paternal uncle was an outsider and that the aunt had no authority to give the girl away in marriage, remanded the case under O. XLI, r. 23 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that under the circumstances of the case the maternal uncle was competent to enter into a contract of marriage on behalf of the girl, but that the proper order was one under O. XLI, r. 25 of the Code. Kasturi v. Panna Lal, 14 A.L.J. 757=38 A. 520=36 Ind. Cas. 215.

(1) Joint family—Partition—Mortgage debt—Debt left out of account in partition suit as being valueless—Subsequent suit to enforce the mortgage—Joinder of parties.

Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A co-parcener who wishes to get a partition of family properties has only a single cause of action in respect of all the joint properties and hence a suit for partial partition does not lie. After a partition, none of the parties to it holds any of the properties till then held jointly along with any other party unless the partition agreement or partition award or decree itself provides for such joint holding or unless there has been accident, mistake, or fraud in the non-inclusion of some of the property at the division.

Where in a suit for partition by a son against his father a mortgage-debt due to the family is left out of account in arriving at the amount, decreed to the son for his share, as the mortgage was considered to be valueless, the son loses his right to claim partition of the mortgage deed in a second suit, and therefore a subsequent suit to enforce the mortgage by father alone is not bad for non-joinder of parties.

Napier, J.—A decree in a partition suit operates only as a mutual release of the parties' rights in the actual properties divided thereby. Any property left undivided for any reason as in a case where it is considered valueless and so not taken into account continues to be joint property. Hence to the suit to enforce the mortgage, the son is a necessary party, and the suit instituted by the father alone is liable to be dismissed for want of parties. *Kandum Yenkata-swami v. Though the guardian of a minor member of a joint Hindu family cannot insist on a partition on behalf of the minor unless partition was for the benefit of the minor, every adult member of the family is entitled to demand partition and can insist on having his share separated and given him and the minor members of the family cannot resist the demand. All that their guardian can do is to protect their interests in the partition.

So long as the minor members are represented by their natural guardians, a partition is as binding on the minors as on the adult members, unless negligence or fraud on the part of the guardians is proved.

Partition of the family is a family arrangement and is generally resorted to in order to keep peace in the family or to preserve the family properties, and the principles applicable to family settlements are applicable to partitions among the members of the family. There must of course be equal knowledge on the part of the members and there must not be any overreaching or fraud. Even material mistakes do not matter, provided that all the members have the same knowledge (a).

The onus of proving that a partition is not fair is in the first instance on the plaintiff and the minority of a plaintiff does not take the case out of the operation of the rule. In some cases the very nature of the transaction or the method of divisions may show that it was unfair or prejudicial to the interests of a minor; and in such cases the burden is shifted on to the defendant, as also in cases where the facts are specially in the knowledge of a particular party.

Where a person who was a minor at the time of a partition sues to set it aside on the ground that it was unfair and that certain properties, which had been treated as the self-acquired property of one of the members was not really so but joint family property in which he ought to have been given a share, the question for determination is not whether the property has been acquired without detriment to or without the aid of the family funds, but whether the adult members of the family bona fide allowed the property to that member as his self-acquisition.

There is no presumption that the earnings of one member of a family belong to the family in the absence of any evidence that they were thrown into the common stock or were jointly made by the members. From the mere fact that a son is assisting his father, it cannot be inferred that the son was a manager or part manager of the family. Ramamurthy v. Ramamma, 30 M.L.J. 308=3 L.W. 322=33 Ind. partition by co-sharer—Plaintiff's death pending suit—Widow if may continue suit.

Under Hindu Law, "separation," i.e., severance of the status of jointness is a matter of individual volition, and agreement between all the co-parceners is not, still less is actual division and distribution of the property held jointly, essential to the disruption of the joint status.

Once an individual co-sharer has unequivocally expressed and clearly intimated to his co-sharers his decision to sever himself from the joint family, his right to obtain and possess the share to which he admittedly has a title is unimpeachable. Neither the co-sharers can question it, nor can the Court examine his conscience to find out whether his reasons for separation were well founded or sufficient; the Court has simply to give effect to his right to have his share allocated separately from the others.

The intention to separate may be evinced in different ways, either by explicit declaration or by conduct. If it is an inference derivable from conduct, it will be for the Court to determine whether it was unequivocal and explicit.

H, one of the members of a joint Mitakshara Hindu family, served on his co-parceners a registered notice in which he affirmed in explicit terms his desire to get partitioned his one-third share and then instituted a suit for partition. The defendants, somewhat unwillingly, agreed to the demand and admitted the plaintiff's share in the joint property and the extent thereof; and all that remained for the Court to determine was the best mode of effecting the division; but before this could be done, H died leaving him surviving his widow who applied for substitution of herself on the records in the place of the plaintiff:

Held, that H had indicated his intention to separate himself most unequivocally by the registered notice, coupled with the suit, and that these acts amounted to a separation with all its legal consequences; that on the facts there was no disagreement or averseness on the part of the defendants to the plaintiff's demand for separation; that the widow of H was entitled to have H's one-third share separated and given to her. *Musammam Girja Bai v. Marriage is so far a normal and obligatory incident in a Hindu's life that the expenses of its performance are chargeable against the joint family, to which he belongs (a).

An unmarried co-parcener is not entitled to have an anticipatory provision made for the expenses of his future marriage at partition (b).

Where the expenses of the marriage of a co-parcener were incurred subsequent to the institution of a suit for partition but prior to the decree of the Court of first instance, it was held, that the severance of a joint family was effected only by the decree, and that the expenses should be credited to him in the account to be taken in the suit (c). *Narayana Annai v. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit as it was one for partial partition.

The rule against partial partition is a processual law dictated by considerations of convenience (a).

(7) Partial partition—Separation of some members of a joint Hindu family—Effect—Power of Hindu father to effect a partition.

One member of a family may separate himself from the rest leaving the others to continue as before as members of a joint Hindu family; this can be done even in cases where for the determination and allotment of the share of the member who separates it is necessary to ascertain and set out the shares of the remaining members. It is not correct to say that either in the first or the second case the separation of one member is in law necessarily a separation of the remaining members and that the remaining members if they desire to remain or become joint Hindu family, they can only do so by an agreement to reunite subject to the limitations of the Hindu Law regarding that status.

"There is no presumption when one co-parcener separates from the others, that the latter remain united. In many cases it may be necessary in order to ascertain the share of the outgoing member, to fix the shares which the other co-parceners are or would be entitled to, and in this sense the separation of one is said to be a virtual separation of all. An agreement amongst the remaining members of a joint family to remain united or to reunite must be proved like any other fact" (a).

The status of reunited members is not the same as that of the members of a joint Hindu family.

The conduct of the parties must be looked at, in order to arrive at what constitutes the true test of partition of property according to Hindu Law, namely the intention of the members of the family to become separate owners (b).

Though there can be no compulsory partial partition either in respect of the joint property belonging to the family or in respect of the persons constituting the undivided family, yet by mutual agreement of parties the partition can be partial either in respect of the property or of the persons constituting the family.

No doubt when a partition has been proved the presumption is that the partition was complete both as regards the property of the family and the members composing it; but this presumption may be rebutted without proof aliunde by the terms of the partition deed, or decree for partition, and if there is no written evidence of the separation, by the nature and mode of separation, and the circumstances attending it (c).

The power of a father to separate one or more of his sons from himself is undoubted; and if as in this case the father separated his two elder sons there is again no scope for any presumption of division as between the father and his other son (d). Rangasami Naidu v. Sundarajulu Naidu, 31 M.L.J. 472=35 Ind. Cas. 52.

On a partition between sons and stepsons, governed by the Mitakshara law, a mother is entitled to a share equal to that of her son.

Held further, that an estoppel against an estoppel settles the matter at large.

Where the mother acting as guardian for her minor son entered into an agreement for reference to arbitration for the purpose of effecting a partition and in the course of partition claimed maintenance which was allowed to her by the arbitrator but this portion of the award was afterward set aside by the Court on the objection of the stepson, held, that the effect of the modification of the award was to that extent to restore the status quo ante, and that it was no longer open to the stepson to say that the mother had become estopped by her previous conduct from claiming a share.

Held also, that there might be cases where the possession of separate property as stridhan by the mother might have the effect of reducing pro tanto the share to which she may be entitled on partition. Sarup Chand v. Musammat Pahi, 19 O.O. 240.

(9) Hindu Law—Partition—Partial partition—Partition of items alleged to be left undivided—Burden of proof—Limitation—Possession within 12 years—Pleadings—Change of case attempted afterwards.

In a suit for partition, the burden of proof is on the plaintiff, if it is clear that there has been a partial partition to show that there has been no partition of the properties of which partition is claimed. It is also necessary for the plaintiff to show either possession by plaintiff either at the time of the suit or possession within 12 years. Where plaintiff made a definite case of possession by himself he cannot be allowed to make in appeal an entirely new case of possession through co-sharers, having failed to prove possession by himself. That each case must be fought upon the pleadings is in general a sound rule. It is extremely dangerous for any Court to arrive at a conclusion which is not in accordance with the case of either side. Singheswar Misser v. Rameshwar Jha, 34 Ind. Cas. 466.

Property of a muth or asthal is held by the mahant as its owner in trust for the institution, and succession to him in such property follows with the succession to the office.

Although large administrative powers are undoubtedly vested in the reigning mahant, the trust exists and must be respected.

As the mahant is not only a spiritual preceptor but also a trustee in respect of the asthal over which he presides, a Court will be justified on proper grounds in removing him from office.

The reigning mahant A of an asthal having by a series of deeds appointed his nephew as his successor-in-office and abdicated in his favour. Plaintiff claiming to be the senior chela of A challenged the defendant's title, first, on the allegation of a custom of the asthal by which the senior chela alone succeeded, and secondly, on the allegation that the defendant being a married man with children was disqualified from holding the office of mahant. By the custom of the asthal, the mahant had to be a bairagi or celibate chela. The defendant denied that he was married and alleged a custom of succession by appointment from amongst the chelas by the reigning mahant.

Held—that questions of succession to the mahantship in India are not settled by an appeal to general customary law. It must depend upon the custom and usage of the particular muth or asthal.

That neither party had proved the custom alleged by him.

A note in the Magistrate's judgment of an admission made by a witness in a criminal case or a copy of recorded evidence of the witness was not by itself admissible as evidence in a later civil suit between the parties, and was rightly rejected by the Trial Judge, though the fact that the witness (who was acting in the civil suit as the legal representative of the party affected by such admission and was present in Court when the note was produced) was not called by him into the box to clear up the matter or deny that he made the statement or explain it, naturally made a deep impression upon the Judge.

Regarding the allegation that the defendant was a married man, the Trial Judge found upon the evidence adduced that the allegation had been established.

Held—that, upon such a question of fact, the verdict given by the Trial Judge who had the advantage of seeing and hearing the witnesses, could not be lightly set aside, especially as that Judge was also presumably acquainted with the manners and customs of the people among whom the transaction was alleged to have occurred.

The High Court which reversed the Trial Judge not having stated sufficient grounds for disturbing his verdict, and upon an examination of the evidence.

Held, further, that this rule could not be safely departed from in the present instance.

As part of his case plaintiff alleged that in 1904 the mahant had asked his signature on one of the documents by which he wanted to set up the defendant as his successor, and that on his refusal he had been assaulted and expelled from the muth. Plaintiff sought to prove proceedings in the Criminal Court taken by him about the time showing that a conviction for assault had been obtained by him and that in these proceedings plaintiff had assigned his failure to execute such a document as the reason therefor. The conviction had been quashed on appeal.

Held—that these proceedings were not relevant to the case, the one important fact being that they were taken on the ground which was referable to the execution of the document, and were taken by the plaintiff as claiming to be a resident as of right in the asthal from which he had been expelled?

Hindu Law—(Continued).—16.—Religious Endowment—(Concluded).

Held (on the evidence), that plaintiff had established that he was a bairagi chela, and (on admission) that, if not the only chela, he was the senior chela of the mahant.

That, by conferring the mahantship upon a relation who was a married man, A had consented to a violation of the vows and practices of asceticism and celibacy which it was his duty as a trustee to maintain and protect.

That his installation of the defendant as mahant and retirement from mahantship amounted to an abdication of his office, which in the circumstance the Court should accept, and in the absence of just cause disqualifying the plaintiff for appointment as mahant, the plaintiff as the senior chela and (even on the defendant's case) the next in succession in default of appointment was properly declared by the Trial Judge as the person entitled to the office of mahant. Mahant Ram Parkash Das v. (2) Family temple—Idols and places of worship—Right to partition—Right of management by rotation.

The property of which partition was sought in this case was a family temple consisting of (1) a room, a veranda and a yard (the room containing two sacred pictures and a perennial light), and (2) a small house (quite near the temple) used as quarters for the servants in charge of the temple. The property in suit was admittedly used for purposes of worship for nearly 100 years.

Held, that the temple and its contents cannot be divided by metes and bounds, as that would mean the abolition of the practice of worship, which cannot be abolished as long as some of the family desire its continuance.

But the management of such property (including the servant's quarters) may be enjoyed in turns by the different branches of the family, subject to the condition that all members of the family shall be entitled to perform ordinary worship in the temple at any time, though they may not officiate as priests except in their turn according to rotation. Thakur Sakhawatral v. Where in a suit brought by the plaintiff as the next reversioner for the recovery of property of the last male owner as against the defendant who claimed under his will, it was found that a previous suit, brought by the father of the present plaintiff at a time when he was the nearest reversioner to contest the will, had been compromised with the defendant, whereby he had recognised the title of the defendant under the will as valid, and also that the plaintiff had subsequently taken a conveyance of certain lands comprised in the will from the defendant in favour of himself and his wife, held, that the plaintiff was not bound by the compromise entered into by his father, but that he was estopped, by his conduct in accepting the conveyance, from claiming the lands in the possession of the defendant. Dorassamy Reddy v. C, a Sareen Khattri of Lahore, died leaving him surviving his widow B, his daughter R and his daughter's son J, a minor. B, R and J conveyed a house in Lahore by means of a registered sale-deed in favour of K and others. S and N, the reversionary heirs of C, instituted the present suit for a declaration that the sale shall not affect their reversionary rights and contended that by a special custom the alienation was invalid.

Held, that the parties were governed by Hindu Law.

Held that the principle applicable to the present case is that laid down by the Privy

Council in 6 C. 764 at pp. 772 and 773 to the following effect, vis. :—

As a general rule, such a suit must be brought by the presumptive reversionary heir, that is to say, by the person who would succeed if the widow were to die at that moment. But such a suit may be brought by a more distant reversioner if those nearer in succession are in collusion with the widow or have precluded themselves from interfering.

Held that the plaintiffs who were remote reversionary heirs were not entitled to maintain the action (a).

In the present case, the daughter's son, a minor, was incapable, from a legal point of view, of colluding with his mother and grandmother or of concurring in their act of alienation and that he had not, since the date of sale, by his own act or conduct precluded himself from suing. *Kanshl Ram v. - (3) Hindu Law—Suit by reversioner to recover property after death of widow—Plaint, amendment of, so as to claim title through different reversioner—Limitation Act, S. 22—Choukidar's register, value of, as to date of birth or death.

In a suit by a Hindu reversioner to recover property after the death of a widow the plaintiff at first claimed title through his father who was alleged to have survived the widow. Subsequently it was alleged that the plaintiff's father predeceased the widow, but that his uncle survived her and the plaintiff amended the plaint, claiming title through the uncle.

Held, that as it was not essential that the plaintiff should have named any intermediate reversioner through whom he claimed title, and there was no substitution or addition of a new plaintiff, amendment of the plaint after the period of limitation prescribed for the suit had expired did not bring into operation, S. 22 of the Limitation Act.

Held further, that a Choukidar's pocket book, if regularly kept, has not much probative value as to the date of any birth or death, the Head Constable writer, whose duty it is to make the entries in his pocket book, not being bound to require the exact date on which the man, woman or child supposed as born or dead, was born or died. *Bisheshar Dayal v. It is no doubt incumbent on a plaintiff seeking to succeed to property as a reversioner affirmatively to establish the particular relationship which he puts forward as well as to satisfy the Court that to the best of his knowledge there are no nearer heirs. He cannot be expected to do anything more. It is for those who claim that their kinship is nearer than that of the plaintiffs to prove that relationship (a).

The relationship of samanodakas extends only to the fourteenth degree, and on the authority as well as for reasons of expediency it is not desirable to extend the meaning of the term to persons beyond the fourteenth degree of relationship to the deceased.

A gotraja will not be preferred to a bandhu, unless he is able to trace his descent from a common ancestor.

H and G in certain jewellery alleged to have been left by M :

Held, that G was not entitled to succeed to M's estate as her "son" in accordance with the rules of inheritance of stridhan property laid down in Chap. II, S. XI, para 9, etc. of the Mitakshara.

That both H and G were entitled to succeed as sapindas of her husband in accordance with para. 25 read with paras. 9 and 11 of Chap. II, S. XI of the Mitakshara.

That, in the absence of express texts cutting down his share, H was entitled to share equally with G in the inheritance (a).

That the text of Manu, IX, 183: "If among all the wives of one husband, one has a son; Manu declares them all to be mothers of male children though that son" cannot be applied so as to constitute G, a son of M.

The operation of the text examined (b).

(2) Alienation by widow—Subsequent relinquishment by her—Effect upon alienees.

Per Sadasiva Aiyar, J.—A Hindu widow has got the power to alienate her estate so as to enure during her lifetime, notwithstanding any event which may happen after the alienation. Such alienation cannot therefore be affected by her subsequent relinquishment of her estate in favour of the next reversioner (a).

Per Napier, J.—The theory that change of status of an assignor or a surrender by such assignor can invalidate legal rights obtained by an assignee is so contrary to equity and good conscience that it should not be accepted by Courts of this country whatever the ancient Hindu Law on the subject was. The proposition entails a defeasance of an assignee's title by a collusive alienation made with intent to benefit third parties by subsequent assignment and by a collusive acceleration on made with intent to defraud such assignee (b). Subbamma v. An alienation by a Hindu widow of the whole of her husband's estate in favour of one of her two grandsons (the only reversioners to the estate), without the consent of the other, is invalid as a surrender.

The consent of the nearest reversioner to a partial alienation by a Hindu widow is only

(4) Widow—Property acquired with income of husband's estate, nature of—Test—Intention.

The real test to determine whether the property acquired by a widow with the income of her husband's estate is her absolute property or forms an accretion to the estate, is to ascertain the intention of the widow.

Where, therefore, a widow, in her capacity as such, brought a suit for pre-emption of the land in dispute and having obtained a decree therefor, paid the pre-emption price from the income of her husband's estate :

Held, that the mode of acquisition pointed to the conclusion that she did not mean to sever the land from the main estate and that, therefore, it became an accretion to her husband's property and that consequently she was unable to make a gift of such property without consent of her husband's reversioners. Chela Ram v. (5) Widow's estate—Legal necessity—Marriage of daughter's daughter when son-in-law gharjama, is legal necessity—Construction—Mortgage of widow's "right and interest" if covers more than life interest.

Where A, a Zemindar's widow, married her only daughter S to a cultivator in order that the son-in-law may come and live in the mother-in-law's house, and the issue of the marriage was a daughter.

Held—That, though A might be under a moral duty to see that the girl was properly married, the expenses of the marriage could not be charged on her husband's estate as a legal necessity.

The fact that a Hindu widow says she is mortgaging "her right and interest" in her husband's estates does not necessarily indicate that she was mortgaging only a life-interest. Narainbati v. Ramdhari Singh, 20 C.W.N. 734=1 Pat. L.J. 81=34 Ind. Cas. 277.

(6) Injunction—Widow alienating and wasting her husband's property—Cases in which reversioners can restrain her from doing so—Effect of injunction.

Held, that in ordinary cases, the reversioners of the husband of a widow have no locus standi to obtain and the Courts are incompetent to grant a perpetual injunction restraining the widow from alienating and wasting her husband's property, and that such an injunction is a proper form of relief only in cases in which it is found that the widow is committing or is about to commit acts of waste in the sense that that term is understood in Law, but even the injunction cannot prevent her from alienating the property for necessary purposes, as the question would arise in every case as to the existence or non-existence of the necessity. Musammatt Tajo v. (7) Settlement decrees in favour of Hindu widow — Reversioner's right in property decreed in favour of Hindu widow at settlement—Adverse possession against Hindu widow—Confiscation of proprietary rights in Oudh, effect of.

One G and his ancestors were in possession of a village which they had obtained under a Dirt deed from the Taluqdar. After the annexation of Oudh, the first summary settlement was made with G. Thereafter G died and his interest devolved on his nephew S, and on the death of the latter the entire family property devolved on his widows R and M. R and M jointly with the widow of G claimed the village at the regular settlement on the strength of its having been granted to the ancestors of their husbands by the Taluqdar. The Settlement Court granted them a decree subject to the rights of their co-sharers.

Held, that, as all the three ladies lived jointly and the widow of G never set up any title adverse to R and M, her joint enjoyment of the property with them was not prejudicial to their interest.

Held further, that the widows were given the village as representing a certain stock or body of proprietors with the details or particulars of which the Government did not care to concern itself, that the settlement decree did not confer on them greater rights than they had before the confiscation, that their possession even after the decree was only as Hindu widow's, and that the rights of reversioners were not prejudicially affected by the decree. Ganesha (Musammatt) v. (8) Compromise by widow when binding on reversioners—'Necessity' whether to be proved.

When there is a litigation pending, the widow is also interested in the subject-matter of the litigation and she must have a discretion as to how to conduct that litigation and to come to an arrangement with her opponent, if as a matter of fact she believed that it would be in the best interest of the estate. On the other hand, the reversioner is entitled to shew that the compromise was not arrived at with due care and caution and was such as really shewed negligence on the part of the widow.

If the compromise was a bona fide transaction, the reversioners are not entitled to reopen the matter.

(9) Compromise entered into with a Hindu widow—Alienation—Not binding on reversioners.

Dwarka Das was the owner of two shops. On his death his widow succeeded to a Hindu widow's estate. The widow made an adoption. The widow sued to eject K and D who were in possession of the shops but the suit was dismissed on the ground that the tenancy which she alleged was not proved. Then the widow and the adopted son sued to recover possession. That suit was compromised with the condition that, should K and D pay a certain sum of money to the widow within a certain time, they would become the owners of the shops. A decree was made in terms of this compromise. In the meantime the adoption was set aside at the suit of reversioners. In order to raise money for payment in accordance with the compromise, a mortgage was made of the two shops, and the money was duly paid in. The mortgagees then brought a suit for sale and the shops were purchased in execution of the decree by one H who also obtained possession. On the death of the widow the reversioners commenced the present suit for possession against H who was not a party to the suit to set aside the adoption.

Held, that the title of H having been derived from the widow, the compromise decree which was passed in the suit between the widow and K and D was in effect nothing more than an alienation on the part of the widow of property which formed part of the husband's estate, and could only bind the reversioners if it were shown to have been made for such purposes as would justify a sale by a Hindu widow, and no such purposes having been proved, the reversioners were not bound.

Held also, that the test to apply to a transaction which is challenged by the reversioners as an alienation not binding on them is whether the alienee derives title from the holder of the limited interest or life-tenant (a). • Kanhaiya Lal v. Kishore Lal, 14 A.L.J. 881=38 A. 679=35 Ind. Cas. 683.

and his brother, made a gift of the estate to C. C's application for mutation of names was successfully opposed by B, who claimed the estate under an alleged Will of P, and further denied that the persons who consented to the gift were related to P, and suggested two other persons as the reversionary heirs, whereupon C sued B for a declaration of his title as proprietor of the estate. The trial Court found that P had made no Will as alleged, that the persons set up by B as his reversionary heirs were fictitious persons and that the estate passed by the gift by P's widow with the consent of persons who were related to P in the manner alleged by the plaintiff and accordingly decreed the suit. B on appeal did not challenge these findings, but urged that the deed of gift did not represent a genuine transaction, and that the widow (who was a party to the suit and had died pending the appeal, the consenting reversionary heirs being substituted in her place in the records) had remained in possession and had no power to confer any valid title to C.

Held, that the suit not being a suit for ejectment of a defendant who was in possession, but a suit for declaration of title by a plaintiff who was in possession, it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to prove a better title in himself to possession of the property than the title of the defendant.

That on the findings B was a mere impertinent intervener in another person's affair and had no right to contest the declaration of title which was obtained by C. *Chaudhri Bukhah Singh v. - (11) Widow—Hindu widow—Alienation—Setting aside—Alienation—Compensation for improvements—Evidence—Relationship—Statement in will of widow—Conjectural suggestions as to will in arguments.

The plaintiff on the death of a Hindu widow brought a suit for possession of a certain house with its compound as the next heir of her husband and pleaded that an alienation made by the widow against his interest in favour of the defendant was invalid. The plaintiff alleged that he was son of a daughter of her husband by a former wife. The allegation was denied by defendant. The plaintiff produced a Will made by the widow five years before suit, mentioning the plaintiff as daughter's son by relationship.

Held, that the statement in the Will was a weighty piece of evidence of the plaintiff's relationship, and that the widow was the proper person to make such a statement of fact, which was within the scope of her own knowledge, especially when the statement was corroborated by other relatives mentioned in the Will and whose evidence on the matter was against their interest, and was uncontradicted by any reliable evidence.

Held, also, that erection of a temple in the compound of a house could not be regarded as an improvement. The alienee was permitted to remove materials, for the building was not erected with the consent of the plaintiff and his acquiescence was not proved. The Chief Court allowed half the amount spent in adding another storey to the house and sinking a well. Mathu Mal v. Kidar Nath, 77 P.L.R. 1916 = 36 Ind. Cas. 62.

- (12) Widow's estate—Joint surrender by widows of their interests in favour of the next immediate female reversioner's son, how far valid—Consent of the next female reversioner not obtained, what effect—Whether such surrender can be regarded as an alienation with the consent of the reversioners.

Two co-widows relinquished their interests in the property of their deceased husband in favour of the daughter's son of one of them, the other widow consenting to relinquishment on receiving an absolute interest in a portion of the property in lieu of her widow's interest in the half. It was not shown that the daughter who was the immediate reversioner consented to the widow's action either at the time of relinquishment or afterwards.

Held, the property did not pass to the daughter's son.

The relinquishment did not operate as a surrender because it was not intended to be a surrender of the whole estate, one of the widows having obtained an absolute estate in a portion of the property in lieu of her half-share in the whole, and because it was not in favour of the nearest reversioner at the time, vis., the daughter.

The relinquishment could not be treated as an alienation made with the consent of the whole body of the reversioners, for the daughter did not give her consent to the relinquishment, nor is there any proof of consent on the part of the other expectant reversioners given either at the time or afterwards.

Per Abdur Rahim, J.—The proposition laid down by the Privy Council in 30 A. 1 amounts to this, the consent of substantially the whole body of expectant reversioners is itself sufficient, apart from legal necessity, to validate an alienation even though such consent was given after the transaction and on receipt of consideration.

Per Srinivasa Iyengar, J.—The consent of the kindred is only a piece of evidence and where evidence of the actual necessity is lost by lapse of time, it may be very valuable evidence; also when the question is whether the alienee is a person who purchased bona fide after making reasonable inquiries, the consent of the reversioners to the transfer, if it purports to be a transfer for legal necessity, may, unless rebutted, be sufficient proof. Consent unless given bona fide and without being purchased can be of no avail. Mulugu Kotayya v. Modigonda Chandramowli Sastri, 20 M.L.T. 148=31 M.L.J. 406=4 L.W. 149=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 137=36 Ind. Cas. 407.

- (18) Widow's estate—Position of reversionary heirs—Declaration of right—Reversioner not entitled to such declaration while the widow lives—Representative capacity of reversioner suing to prevent waste.

A Hindu widow's right with respect to the estate of her deceased husband is of the nature of a right of property; her position is that of owner; her powers in that character are, however, limited; but so long as she is alive no one has any vested interest in the succession. While she is, it is futile to make a declaration as to who is the reversionary heir of her deceased husband which might be rendered valueless by the development of events.

A reversionary heir although only having a contingent interest is recognized by the Courts as having a right to demand that the estate be kept free from waste and free from danger during its enjoyment by the widow or other owner for life; but such heir thus appealing to the Court does so in a representative capacity so that the corpus of the estate may pass unimpaired to those entitled to the reversion.

Where the respondent, a reversionary heir, sued for an injunction and a receiver, alleging waste by the appellant, a widow, who denied that the respondent was the reversioner, and it was found that the charges of waste were unfounded, but the respondent was granted a declaration that he was the "next reversionary heir" under cover of his prayer "for further relief."

Held, that he was not entitled to such a declaration. Janaki Ammal v. Narayanasami Aiyar, 31 M.L.J. 225=20 M.L.T. 168=20 C. W.N. 1323=39 M. 634=14 A.L.J. 997=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 188=18 Bom. L.R. 856=24 C.L.J. 309=4 L.W. 530 (P.C.).

Where a Hindu widow, who is entitled to the usufruct of her deceased husband's property, purports to dispose of his whole estate, the burden of proving that the disposition was made under circumstances of legal necessity rests on the purchaser, however great the lapse of time (a).

Under ordinary circumstances and apart from Statute, recitals in a deed of sale can only be evidence between the parties to the conveyance and those who claim under them. But where a very long time has elapsed between the date of the deed and the institution of the suit challenging the sale, such recitals cannot be disregarded, although, on the other hand, no fixed and inflexible rule can be laid down as to the proper weight which they are entitled to receive. If the deed is challenged at the time or near the date of its execution, so that independent evidence would be available, the recitals would deserve but slight consideration, and certainly should not be accepted as proof of the facts establishing legal necessity. But as time goes by, and all the original parties to the transaction and all those who could give evidence on the relevant points have grown old or have passed away, a recital consistent with the probability and circumstances of the case assumes greater importance, and cannot lightly be put aside; for it should be remembered that the actual proof of the necessity which justified the deed is not essential to establish its validity. It is only necessary that a representation should have been made to the purchaser that such necessity existed, and that he should have acted honestly and made proper inquiry to satisfy himself of its truth. The recital is clear evidence of the representation, and, if the circumstances are such as to justify a reasonable belief that an enquiry would have confirmed its truth, then, when proof of actual enquiry has become impossible, the recital, coupled with such circumstances, will be sufficient evidence to support the deed. To hold otherwise would result in deciding that a title becomes weaker as it grows older, so that a transaction perfectly honest and legitimate when it took place would ultimately be incapable of justification merely owing to the passage of time.

Attestation proves no more than that the signature of an executing party has been attached to a document in the presence of a witness. It does not involve the witness in any knowledge of the contents of the deed nor affect him with notice of its provisions. It can, at the best, be used for the purpose of cross-examination, but, by itself, it will neither create estoppel nor imply consent (b).

Where there is considerable delay (delay of seven years in the present case) in setting down an appeal for hearing, a successful appellant will not be allowed costs unless he clears himself of the imputation of having needlessly protracted the proceedings. *Nanda Lal Dhur Bhowas v. A suit which asks for a declaration of the invalidity of a document as being a forgery and for other substantial reliefs is not barred, even though it is brought more than three years after the expiry of the period for getting the document set aside.

In a suit by reversioner for a declaration that an alienation by a widow is void beyond her lifetime though it is part of his case that the last male owner died intestate and that the female heir succeeded only to a limited estate, there is no presumption that the deceased left a will and if the defendant pleads a will, it is for him to prove it. *Gokula Venkamma v. Held, that although the principle laid down by their Lordships of the Privy Council in 29 A. 331, namely, that a sale could be set aside on payment of amount borrowed for legal necessity, where a portion of the purchase-money was justified by any legal necessity, is one which must ordinarily apply in cases of alienations by a Hindu widow, yet exceptional circumstances may arise, such as where almost the whole of the consideration money is proved to be paid for legal necessity, and only a small amount remains unaccounted for, where alienation should not be set aside.

- (19) Hindu Law—Widow—Next reversioners—Acceleration of estate by the widow—Acceleration must be of the entire estate—Alienation—Legal necessity—Adoption—Divesting of estate—Maxim—A man shall not take advantage of his own fraud—Applicability of the maxim.

L, a Hindu widow, having mortgaged her husband's estate to B, the plaintiffs, the next reversioners, sued in 1893 to set aside the alienation as a hollow transaction. The parties referred their disputes to arbitration which resulted in an award whereby the plaintiffs were allowed to redeem the mortgage, B was to convey the mortgaged property to the plaintiffs, L was to surrender all her right, title and interest in it, and the plaintiffs were to give to her a house and 18 bighas of land, out of the estate so re-conveyed to them, for her life as maintenance. In 1906, B created a sub-mortgage on the property in favour of D; and passed a rent-note to him. The plaintiffs took a re-conveyance of the property from B, and paid off D who transferred his rights to them. In 1909, L adopted M, the son of B, thereupon B delivered over possession of the property:

Held, dismissing the suit, (1) that the transaction which resulted from the suit of 1893 and which was the basis of the plaintiff's claim, was in no sense an acceleration, inasmuch as the consideration expressed in the award was really no consideration but a reservation in the widow's interest of a very substantial part of her original life-estate;

(2) that if the transaction be regarded as an alienation it could only be validated by proof of legal necessity;

(3) that L's alienation of 1893 under the award not having been for legal necessity, was void against M from the moment of his adoption;

(4) that M was not precluded from raising the plea for, neither was he guilty, of fraud nor did he give any advantage in the special issue between him and the plaintiffs.

There are two ways in which a Hindu widow in the enjoyment of a normal widow's estate can convey a greater interest than that which she herself has, one is by acceleration, the other by alienation for legal necessity.

In acceleration a Hindu widow enjoying the normal Hindu widow's life-estate surrenders it in favour of the next reversioner; but it is absolutely necessary that the entire interposed life-estate must be withdrawn.

An alienation by a Hindu widow for legal necessity rests upon a strict proof of the necessity. The consent of the reversioners is no more than a factor in the proof of legal necessity. It may always be used in support of the alienor's contention that there was legal necessity, but per se it will not be sufficient to do away with all other proof.

A true acceleration differs from alienation for legal necessity. The two legal notions are not only irreconcilable, but virtually antagonistic. In strictness no acceleration can be an alienation and no alienation can be an acceleration.

A subsequent adoption will not divest estates vested before it was made.

In applying the maxim that a man shall not take advantage of his own fraud, two points are to be looked at; first, whether the person against whom the maxim is used has really committed a fraud at all; and, secondly, whether, assuming that he has committed a constructive fraud, that has given him any advantage in the particular issue he is contesting. Moti Lalji v. Laldeo Jibhal, 18 Bom. L.R. 954=41 B. 93.

BEAMAN and HEATON, JJ.

Where the whole widow's estate is alienated with the consent of the whole of the next reversion, the alienation is valid as the reversioners transfer as heirs; that estate having been accelerated by the widow's disclaimer it is valid irrespective of any consideration of necessity.

This theory can only be applied when the alienation is of the whole estate for it rests on the fiction that the widow has declined the inheritance which therefore passed direct to the next reversion. 'If the alienation is of part of the estate there is no room for this fiction.

In all other cases, i.e., where the widow transfers part of the estate with the consent of some or all of the next reversion or the whole estate with the consent of some and not all of the next reversion—the consent raises a presumption of the propriety of the alienation. To raise this presumption the consent of the whole of the next reversion is ordinarily necessary, but there may be special cases in which the consent of a part of the next reversion will suffice (a).

The reversioner who consents may be barred by estoppel, but a more distant reversioner who by subsequent events becomes the actual reversioner would not be bound. Jiwatmal v. Mussamat Gianibal, 10 S.L.R. 49=35 Ind. Cas. 681.

(21) Right of reversioner to mortgage property in possession of widow—Suit by widow for declaration that mortgage was of no effect against her interest.

During the lifetime of a Hindu widow a reversionary heir executed a mortgage-deed in respect of the property in possession of the widow. In the mortgage deed the mortgagor did not state that the property was for the time being owned by the widow or that he was mortgaging his reversionary interests only. The widow thereupon sued for a declaration that the mortgage-deed was of no effect so far as her interest in the property in her possession was concerned. Held that, although her estate was merely that of a Hindu widow, she might rightly complain that some injury might be done to her by the mortgage transaction unless some declaration was obtained by her at the earliest opportunity, that it was in no way to affect her right. Therefore she was entitled to maintain the declaratory suit. Mussamat Chandra Kuar v. Kuar Raghubar Singh, 30 Ind. Cas. 198.

- (28) Gift by widow—Gift with power of alienation—Construction of document—Intentions of parties.

A gift by a Hindu widow of property in which she had a widow's estate passes only the limited estate which the widow had and the occurrence in the deed of the words "with power to alienate the same by gift, sale, etc." only means that the widow's estate thereby conveyed can be sold, etc.

There is no doubt that the onus is upon those who seek to prove that the widow was purporting to convey more than she could legally convey.

The Court should not allow the evidence of what the parties subsequently did to influence the construction of a document any more than their evidence as to what they intended to do though the Court is entitled to look at the surrounding circumstances to see how the parties were placed and to find the matters with reference to which they were contracting or writing deeds or making wills.

cannot maintain a suit for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property from an auction-purchaser in execution of that decree (a).

Per Mookerjee, J.—When a mortgagee from Hindu widow seeks to obtain a decree which would bind not merely the qualified interest of the widow, but the entire inheritance itself, the then next reversioner is a proper party to the suit. A reversioner so impleaded may well be deemed a party in a representative capacity. A decree fairly made in his presence, so long as it stands, binds the inheritance, whether he or some one else ultimately becomes the actual reversioner when the succession opens out on the death of the widow (b).

The title of the purchasers can consequently be defeated by the plaintiff, only after the decree which is the root of that title, has been successfully impeached for fraud, collusion, or other like reason. If this were established, the fact that the parties had gone through the form of a suit and a decree could not justly be held to prejudice the right of the actual reversioners (c). *Ganga Narayan Datta v. Where in execution of a decree against a Hindu widow her right, title and interest in her husband's property has been sold, the test to be applied in order to determine the exact interest which passed at the sale would depend upon the question whether the suit in which the sale was directed was one brought against the widow upon a cause of action personal to herself, or one which affects the whole inheritance of the property in the suit. (a)

A decree against a Hindu widow should state specifically whether the decree is a personal decree or one against her as representing her deceased husband and it is therefore open to any Court dealing with a decree containing no such specification to interpret it in accordance with sound principles of law. (b)

In a suit in which the estate of her husband is in any way involved, the widow represents the whole estate of her husband and she alone is entitled to be a party as representing the estate and the decree fairly and properly obtained against her will bind the whole estate. (c)

In interpreting a decree for mesne profits against a Hindu widow, the frame of the original suit can and should be gone into when the decree does not specifically show on the face of it whether it was a decree against the widow in her personal or her representative capacity (d). *Kiranbala Debi v. Where a Hindu testator belonging to the Dayabhaga School appointed his wife sole executrix and authorised her to adopt a son, and five such sons in succession in case of death and the will finally provided that, if the wife died without adopting a son or if such adopted son predeceased her without leaving any male issue, the estate, after the death of his wife, would pass to such of his sister's sons as might be living at his death.

Held—that the estate was in the widow during her life, and it could pass only to the son who survived her or in case of his death in her lifetime, to his male issue if he left any.

A son adopted by the widow predeceased her without issue.

Held—that the gift over to the nephews took effect on the death of the widow.

That the gift to the nephews was not affected by S. 111 of the Succession Act, the event upon which, as distinctly mentioned in the will, the distribution was to take place being the death of the widow.

S. 111, Succession Act, commented on. It should be applied only to cases strictly coming within the scope.

Under the Dayabhaga, the testator has not only the power of authorising his widow to adopt a son to him, and, in case of the death of such adopted son, to make other adoptions in order to ensure the performance of those religious rites on which depends his salvation in after-life, but he can attach to such authority a direction that her estate should not be intertered with or divested during her life, just as he can postpone the succession of his natural-born son by interposing a life-estate. *Bhupendra Krishna Ghose v. Per Mullick, J.—A bequest only of the income of a property, without disposing of the corpus, creates something in the nature of a perpetuity and is void (a).

In the absence of words of limitation, gifts to women in Hindoo law, with the exception of a widow, must be presumed to convey an absolute interest, unless there is something repugnant in the context. It does not necessarily follow that because the donee was a woman, therefore she was incapable of taking anything more than a mere life interest (b).

Even if the estate, which passed to a Hindu woman is not absolute, but only the ordinary woman's estate, she is competent to alienate immovable property for payment of the debts incurred by her in the management of a business which formed part of the estate (c). *Jagannath Prasad v. - (4) Will—Construction—Properties left for charity—Surplus income secured to the family—Whether grant is personal or dedication to charity—Prohibition as to alienation, effect of—Presumption in cases of charitable bequests by Hindu testators.

A Hindu father made a will whereby he gave his two sons S and M, the A and B schedule properties and set apart the C and D schedule properties for charity, the properties in schedule C to be enjoyed by S and those in D by M who were, after paying the circular cost, to spend Rs. 250 from the remaining income and duly conduct the charity permanently by turns one in each year. The rest of the incomes was to be taken by the sons "for their maintenance and private expenses." The sons were not to alienate the said properties and in case they neglected the charity, two friends of the testator were to conduct the charity and recover the amount spent from the sons. A widow of P, a son of S, sued the other sons of S for P's share of the C schedule properties. It was contended that the property belonged to the charity and the family had no interest in it.

Held, that the will evidences a grant of property to the sons, burdened with an obligation to maintain the charities.

Held also that a clause prohibiting alienation in a grant conferring an absolute estate on the grantee is inoperative being a condition repugnant to the estate to which it is annexed (a).

In every case of a provision for charity made by a Hindu who has near relations, the presumption is that the charity is a charge on the estate.

The real test in determining whether a grant is personal or a dedication to the charity is 'To whom is the surplus income reserved?' (b)

(5) Life estate to widow—Residue to grandsons of testator then in existence and thereafter to be born—Validity of will—Meaning and effect of S. 2 (2), Madras Act I of 1914 (Hindu Transfers and Bequests).

One V, by his will dated 23-5-1905, provided that, after his death, his wife N should enjoy the whole of his property till her death, and that the whole of the property remaining after payment of certain legacies should be "enjoyed with right by the son S already born to his daughter G and by the male issue that may hereafter be born to the said daughter."

The testator died in 1906 and S died in 1910. The widow of S brought this suit in 1912 against the testator's widow, the testator's daughter and others for declaration that, under the will, S. took a vested interest in all the properties bequeathed to him, that the testator's widow took only a life-interest in her husband's estate and that plaintiff was solely entitled to the properties after the death of the testator's widow (first defendant) and other reliefs. After the suit was instituted, the testator's daughter gave birth to a son P who was also impleaded as sixth defendant in the suit.

Held that S acquired a vested interest under the terms of the will on the testator's death and the bequest in favour of the after-born son P was valid under S. 2 (2), Madras Act I of 1914.

The language of S. 2 (2) of the Madras Act is general and has the effect of validating dispositions which are to come into operation at a future date in accordance with the intention of the testator. S. 2 (2) of the Act means that, if the testator intended that his disposition should take effect at a future date and that date happened to be subsequent to the passing of the Act, then by virtue of this Act, the disposition would be valid and effective.

Held also that plaintiff, as representative of, would be entitled to share equally with other sons of S's mother (including the sixth defendant) who may be born before the death of the first defendant (testator's widow).

Where the question is one of construction, it has to be determined with reference to the terms of the document in each case, though, in

The principles which should guide the Court in construing a will may shortly be summarized as follows: We are to give effect to the intention of the testator as expressed in his words. We are to acquaint ourselves with the circumstances in which he was placed; we are to have regard to the habits of life and thought of the people to whom he belonged and to the system of law under which he lived. Then we are to construe his language, and we cannot give effect to a supposed intention, however cogently suggested by extrinsic evidence unless there are words to be found in the document which, on a natural construction, convey it either expressly or by necessary implication.

Where a document contains words of gift which refer only to a gift of a joint estate with the testator, to be enjoyed during his lifetime and the whole tenor of the document contemplates that the plaintiff should deal with the properties as owner, after the decease of the testator and is not solely referable to an estate created by a testamentary disposition, the testator's intention as contained in the document cannot be taken to be that he intended the plaintiff to take his property as legatee under the document, although he had a general intention that the plaintiff should own his property which he did not carry out by this document. *Thirugnanapal v. (1) Mortgage of moveables—Possession not necessary to be transferred—Contract Act, Ss. 108, 178.

The plaintiff advanced Rs. 2,000 in 1913, to V on the hypothecation of the Press machines and other accessories of a printing press belonging to V, who remained, as before, in possession of his Press. In 1914, V took D as his partner in the concern on payment of Rs. 3,000. In 1915, V again hypothecated the same property to plaintiff for a fresh advance of Rs. 1,000. D had no notice of either transaction. On V's death, the plaintiff claimed to recover his money by sale of the property hypothecated. D resisted the suit contending that the plaintiff's claim could, at the most, extend to V's share (which was one-half), in the concern:

Held, (1) that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed, for the rights which the plaintiff acquired over the property in 1913 remained wholly unaffected by the illusory partnership between V and D; and

(2) that he was therefore entitled to bring the whole of the property to sale.

In India, the mortgage of chattels, having the effect of immediately transferring the property thereunder from the mortgagor to the mortgagee, can be made by mere parol and without the transfer of possession.

In the Chota Nagpur Maharaja's estates and in his family the custom of impartibility and primogeniture is established in all cases (a).

A Court of appeal must assume that a Judge knows the law which he is called upon to administer and that he applies it to the facts of the case before him; and if there is evidence to sustain the conclusion of fact at which he arrives then his decision is unimpeachable. In cases where a Judge states, and wrongly states, what the law is, and applies wrong legal principles to the facts of the case so stated by him, then in such cases, the Courts have held that the Judge has misdirected himself and that therefore the High Court on appeal intervenes and corrects the erroneous principles of law which the Judge has applied, and remands the case for rehearing with a correct exposition of the law. Ram Charan Mahato v. Inam.

- (1) Inam burdened with a service, whether a public charitable trust—Service inam—Lease by minority of inamdars for 40 years—Remedy of the inamdar not joining in the lease.

An Inam granted on condition of the grantees providing water for the use of travellers passing through that place is not a public charitable trust, and the leasing out of such an Inam for 40 years by a minority of the grantees does not entitle a grantee who has not joined in the lease to sue for a declaration that the lease is absolutely void as a whole and that he and the other grantees who have not joined in executing it are entitled to the possession of the whole Inam.

The only relief to which such a grantee is entitled is a declaration that the lease is not binding on his share of the Inam. Kupparaju Venkatasubblah v. Shalk Silar Sahib, 3 L.W. 157=19 M.L.T. 144=32 Ind. Cas. 947.

Darimilla Inams or Inams granted subsequent to the Permanent Settlement are not resumable by Government.

Lakraj lands are lands exempt from the payment of public revenue.

Where a Zamindari in which the suit Inam was situated was resumed after the Permanent Settlement and re-granted to the Zamindar subsequently in 1836 on the same peishcush, and there was nothing to show that the inam consisted only of Lakraj lands which alone under the terms of the sanad granted in 1836 were excluded from the assets of the Zamindari.

Held that the enfranchisement of the Inam by the Government was ultra vires and not binding on the Zamindar. Yalluri Narasimha Rao Pantulu Garu v. Secretary of State, 3 L.W. 573=36 Ind. Cas. 219.

Lands in alienated villages which are not in the actual possession of Inamdars and fall under the calculation of Government Judi, are liable in turn to pay customary rent, assuming that there has been no survey and assessment on contractual rent agreed upon by the Inamdars who are directly liable to Government for the judi.

The payment of dhara or assessment or customary rent is a recurring right within the meaning of the Indian Limitation Act, Art. 131. Such a recurring right can be time-barred; there must be a definite demand and refusal; mere omission on the part of the person having such right to exercise it will not start a period of adverse possession under the Article. *Ganesh Vinayak Joshi v. Inam Estate.

Inam estate in Berar, by what law governed—Nature and incidents of such Inam grant—Conversion of Inam into free-hold—Berar Inam Rules, 1879, their nature and origin—Duty of Courts in administering law.

An Inam estate in Berar is governed by the Inam Rules of 1879. It is primarily a restricted tenure, but the Rules provide for its conversion, in certain cases, into an estate of free-hold governed by the personal law of the grantees. Whether a particular estate has been so converted or enfranchised is a question of fact in each particular case, the burden of proving which rests on the party who asserts it.

Berar is a territory which had been under many Sovereign powers, before it came under the management of the present Government of India; such as the Kings of Delhi, the Rulers of Satara, Gwalior, and Nagpur and the Nizam; and these Sovereigns, and in some cases their Ministers and Revenue authorities, had made grants of land and money at various times, for various purposes, and under varying conditions of tenure and devolution. It was natural, under such circumstances, that there should have arisen a considerable amount of chaos and confusion over the legal rights of grantees and of the descendants of grantees long deceased. It became necessary for the Government of India to make rules for the settlement of Jagir and Inam claims throughout Berar, both by declaring the grants it was prepared to recognize, and treating each recognition as a fresh starting point to provide conditions for its future enjoyment and devolution. For this purpose the Berar Inam Rules were promulgated in the form of Resident's Book Circular XXXVII of 1879.

A Jagir or other Inam estate may be anything, from a mere grant for life in the royal share of the revenue, to an absolute estate in the soil; and the only correct method, for the judicial decision of claims made upon it, is to ascertain the meaning and effect of the grant in each case from the circumstances and objects with which, and the rules under which, the sanad was granted (a).

"So far as the Civil Courts are concerned, they are bound to give effect to the statutory law of the land, irrespective of the consequences that may ensue, and the surprise and possible hardship, which even a belated application of it may cause, amid conditions which have grown upon error. They cannot recognize and give effect to habits in disregard of that law as valid customs except so far as may be consistent with well-established rules of equity and recognized principles of judicial discretion. They will seriously regard that administration if they arbitrarily follow and sustain popular error." (Per Stanyon, Esq., C.I.E., A.J.C.) Krishnaji v. Nilkanth, 12 N.L.R. 150 = 36 Ind. Cas. 618.

Indemnity Bond.

Contract, breach of—Damages—No actual loss, if action premature—No action for damages on future loss of possession—Loss of title, substantial loss.

Plaintiff's deceased husband had started a Kuri fund and executed Ex. R to the members pledging certain property as security for the amount payable to them. Defendant took a transfer of the management of the fund from plaintiff after her husband's death and executed an indemnity bond, Ex. B with plaintiff property, as security against any damage resulting to the plaintiff or her property, including that bound by Ex. R. Two members subsequently obtained decrees on Ex. R and brought the property to sale. Plaintiff, while still in possession and enjoyment of the property sold, sued defendant for damages for breach of the contract of indemnity, and defendant's plea was that the suit was premature, as plaintiff had not lost possession of the property and had incurred no actual loss.

Held, a claim for damages could not be founded on future loss of possession or anything short of actual disturbance of it (a).

Apart from possession, title being impaired, there was substantial present loss, there was damage sustained, and the suit was not premature (b).

Per Sadasiva Iyer, J.—There is a distinction between a covenant containing an absolute promise to do an act and a covenant merely to indemnify for the loss which may be incurred on breach of the promise to do an act. In the former case, an action for breach of contract can be sustained before actual loss is incurred by the promisee. *Bhavani alias Rukmani Amma v. (1) Sonless occupancy tenant—Succession by widow—Daughter's son, right of—Co-sharing in cultivation not necessary—Agra Rent Act (XIV of 1886)—Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), effect of.

On the death of an occupancy tenant his daughter or his daughter's son will succeed in the absence of the widow, whether they have co-shared in cultivation or not; the daughter and the daughter's son are not collaterals the restriction as to co-sharing in cultivation being applicable to collaterals only.

Where an occupancy tenant having a daughter and a daughter's son was succeeded by his widow, while the Agra Rent Act (XIV of 1886) was in force, and the widow died after the passing of the Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901), it must be held that the right of reversion vested in the daughter's son or his mother when the occupancy tenant died and that that right, having once vested in them was not affected by the amendment in the law introduced by the Injunction.

(1) Temporary injunction, subsequently dissolved—Order to be obeyed when it lasts—Order binding on party though it prohibits receiving payment from Government and Government authorised to pay by statute—Order operates in personam—Government's duty to ascertain and obey law—Question of construction, question for Courts.

Where, in a suit for dissolution of partnership and accounts, a Receiver of the partnership assets was appointed and a temporary injunction was granted restraining the defendants inter alia from receiving certain payments from Government, and the Government which was no party to the suit made payments to one of the defendants in alleged exercise of power reserved to it by statute, and subsequently the injunction was dissolved, the plaintiff's case having failed.

Held—That an injunction, although subsequently discharged because the plaintiff's case failed, must be obeyed while it lasts.

That although the injunction could not bind the Government not to pay, or make the Government responsible for that obedience to the law which the Court was entitled to expect, the man who received in breach of the order was guilty of a contempt, in no way cured by the payment by Government.

The non-existence of any right to bring the Crown into Court such as exists in England by petition of right, and in many of the Colonies by the appointment of an officer to sue and be sued on behalf of the Crown, does not give the Crown immunity from all law, or authorise the interference by the Crown with private rights at its own mere will. There is a well established practice in England in certain cases where no petition of right will lie, under which the Crown can be sued by the Attorney-General (a).

It is the duty of the Crown and of every branch of the executive to abide by and obey the law. If there is any difficulty in ascertaining it, the Courts are open to the Crown to sue and it is the duty of the executive in cases of doubt to ascertain the law in order to obey it, not to disregard it.

The Government in this case having made the payment with notice of the Court's order:

Held—that, although with regard to the payments made under the statutory powers, the action of the executive must be justifiable, the question whether any particular sum mentioned in the contract in suit was payable as for "labour and supply" (so as to be within the Government's power to pay under the statute) was a question of construction and therefore of law for the Courts.

That the proper course in the present case for the executive would have been either to apply to the Court to determine the question of construction of the contract and to pay accordingly, or to pay the whole amount over to the Receiver and to obtain an order from the Court on the Receiver to pay the sums properly payable according to the true construction of the contract. The Eastern Trust Company v. - (3) Joint Hindu family—Business started by father alone—Whether son can be adjudicated insolvent for father's debts—Contract Act, S. 248.

In a joint Hindu family consisting of the father and the son, the father started a piece goods trade and carried on the business without the aid of ancestral funds. In the course of the business he executed certain pro-notes during the minority of the son. On the petition of his creditors both the father and son were adjudicated insolvents. On appeal by the son :

Held, per Abdur Rahim, J., that the son could not be adjudicated insolvent because ;

- (1) There is no presumption of Hindu Law that the business carried on by the head of a Hindu family although started by himself for the first time is, without anything more being shown, the business of the joint family.

- (2) Even on the assumption that the business was the joint family business the appellant would not be personally liable but only his share in the property acquired out of the proceeds of the trade would be liable for the debts.

Phillips, J.—As the son took an active part in conducting the family business his conduct is sufficient to show that he is a consenting party to the manner in which the business was carried on. He must therefore be considered as a partner, and, under S. 248 of the Indian Contract Act, he becomes liable on attaining majority for all obligations incurred since he became a partner unless he repudiates the partnership by public notice. Palaniappa Chetty v. A covering note does not purport to be a policy of Marine Insurance. Where a covering note is issued and accepted, neither party considers that a policy has been issued, but the insurance Agents have agreed to issue a policy for the adventure specified on condition that the agreed premium is paid in cash before the departure of the vessel from the harbour. The covering note is admissible to prove the agreement.

The stamping of a document cannot alter its inherent nature or create fresh liabilities under it.

The technically correct procedure for the owner of goods to pursue when goods covered by a 'Covering Note' have been lost, is at once to go to the Insurance Agents, pay the premium and demand a policy.

Where no premium has been paid or tendered, it is doubtful whether the goods can be said to be insured.

Irrigation Right.

Suit for declaration of irrigation right—Preferential right over that of defendant—Plea of total denial of plaintiff's right—Finding in favour of plaintiff's right to irrigation without preferential right—Dismissal of suit in toto improper—Sufficient cause of action.

In a suit for declaration, the plaintiffs claimed that they were entitled to a right to draw water from a tank and further that they were entitled to exercise that right before the defendant could draw water for irrigation of his own crops. There was also a claim for damages on account of the damage to certain crops because the defendant had refused to allow the plaintiffs to set up their irrigation lift. The defence set up was a denial of the plaintiffs' right to draw any water from the tank in question; and there was also a denial that the plaintiffs had been obstructed or that they had suffered any damage. Both the lower Courts dismissed the suit in toto though they found that the plaintiffs were entitled to draw water from the tank in proportion to the extent of the cultivation, although without any preference over the right of the defendant. It was also found that the plaintiffs had failed to prove that they had been obstructed in such a way as to cause them any damage.

Held that there was a sufficient cause of action for a declaratory suit in the case; and that the Courts below ought to have declared the right of the plaintiffs to the extent to which they found they were entitled. Bakhtawar Singh v. Dharam Singh, 34 Ind. Cas. 9.

—1.—General. •

(1) Estimated value of the suit admitted by defendant, effect of—Consent of parties as to valuation of suit, effect of, on jurisdiction of Court—Market value of the property in suit.

Where, after the case has proceeded to trial and evidence recorded at considerable length and the stage of argument had been reached, it appeared necessary to the Munsif to have an inquiry made as to the value of the property in suit, and on the value ascertained through a commissioner being found to exceed the pecuniary limits of his jurisdiction, the Munsif returned the plaint for presentation to a competent Court, held, that, as the defendant had deliberately admitted the estimated value of the suit and as there had been no reckless or dishonest valuation for the purpose of working a fraud upon the law, the defendant in view of his pleadings would not be heard to say that the Munsif had no authority to dispose of the suit.

Held further, that, although parties cannot by their consent invest a Court with a jurisdiction which has not been conferred upon it by law, yet the converse which is to be deduced from an admission regarding the valuation of a suit is not a consent given to jurisdiction where none exists, but relates to the facts of the market value (a). Etizad Husan (Mir) v. If a suit were within the limits of the pecuniary jurisdiction of a Court of lower grade, the trial by the higher Court would only be an irregularity contravening S. 15, Civ. Pro. Code, and the defendant is estopped from objecting to an irregularity which he himself has invited by objecting in a previous suit to the trial of the suit by the lower Court.

It is the value put by the plaintiff that prima facie determines jurisdiction, and the contrary principle that the jurisdiction of a Court of lower grade must not be ousted by an exaggerated claim is not applicable to a case like the present one where the plaintiff would have gone to the lower Court if the defendant had allowed him to do so. Khiantomal wd. A notice of ejectment was successfully contested in the Revenue Court on the basis of a document declared to be a Shankalapatta. The landlord, thereupon instituted the present suit in the Civil Court for a declaration (1) that the defendant had no superior or under-proprietary right in the land and (2) that the patta set up was null and void against the plaintiffs and that the defendant could not acquire any right in the land under it.

Held, that it is competent for a Civil Court to adjudicate in a case of this kind upon the validity of a document of title. The jurisdiction to give a final adjudication upon the validity of a document of title rests with the Civil Court. Debi Bakhsh v. Ram Dhanl, 19 O.C. 58=35 Ind. Cas. 446.

(3) Jurisdiction of Court to correct its own mistake — Order passed without hearing parties—Fresh order after hearing setting aside the same—If ultra vires—Interference by the High Court where the lower Court though acting without jurisdiction has done substantial justice—Agent's Court—Applicability of the provisions of the Civ. Pro. Code regarding re-hearing and review—Agency rules—Rules 10, 18 and 20.

In a case where a finding was called for by the High Court, the agent to the Governor at Vizagapatam passed an order on 6th March 1913 without hearing the parties, accepting the finding returned by Special Assistant Agent. On the 12th March 1913 the Agent passed another order dismissing two petitions by the counter-petitioner wherein he had set forth his objections to the finding and asked for a hearing. Finally on the 22nd May 1913 after notice to the parties and after hearing both sides, the Agent passed a third order reversing the finding returned.

Held (1) that it is an elementary rule of law that a party is entitled to be heard before an order is made to his prejudice and that the first order of the Agent having been passed without notice to the parties was illegal and was rightly set aside.

(2) That every Court has an inherent jurisdiction to rectify the mistakes it has inadvertently committed and that the High Court should not interfere where an initial injustice has been corrected and substantial justice has been done by the lower Court.

Spencer, J.—The order of the 22nd May was not without jurisdiction on the ground of its being a review of the former order, as the ordinary procedure provided in the Civ. Pro. Code for setting aside ex parte orders is not a review, and though the Civ. Pro. Code is not part of the Agency Rules, it may be reasonably assumed that the Agent who is vested with the same powers as a District Court took the steps which a District Court would take under the Civ. Pro. Code in similar circumstances.

Phillips, J.—Even if the order of 22nd May was passed without jurisdiction it would be manifestly unjust to set it aside and restore the order of the 6th March which was passed without hearing the parties.

When a party can have a mistake corrected by the Court which made the mistake, he should adopt that course rather than resort to the appellate Court. Sri Raghunatha Doss v. Sri Sri Sri Yikrama Doss, 31 M.L.J. 319=4 L.W. 240=(1916) 2 M.W.N. 203.

(5) Suit for possession or damages against perpetual hereditary lessees—Settlement decree, construction of.

The predecessor-in-title of the defendants obtained a decree from the Settlement Court against the predecessor-in-interest of the plaintiffs for confirmation of their right to possess and occupy the village subject to the payment of the rent assessed after deduction of 10 per cent on account of Dahiyak. The decree gave to the Taluqdar the power to assess and vary the rent. The plaintiffs brought the present suit for possession and mesne profits on the allegation that the defendants had failed to accept the enhanced rent fixed by the Taluqdar which had the effect of terminating their rights to remain in possession of the village.

Held, that the defendants being perpetual hereditary lessees and no under proprietors, under the decrees of the Settlement Court, a suit for possession or damages against them is not maintainable in the Civil Court. Sheonath v. Raja Muhammad Abdul Hasan Khan, 19 O. U. 339=36 Ind. Cas. 664.

(6) Enhancement of power of Judge—Delay in publication of notification—Validity of order made before notification.

An application was made to the Court of a Munsif to execute a decree passed by another Court. At the time of the application the Munsif had no authority to dispose of it, as the application related to a matter beyond his pecuniary jurisdiction. Subsequently the pecuniary jurisdiction of his Court was raised with retrospective effect from date prior to the application now in question. The question was whether an order passed by the Munsif on the application, before the publication of the notification raising the jurisdiction of his Court, was lawful. Held that, as the powers of the Munsif were raised with retrospective effect relating to a date prior to the application in question the order made by the Munsif was legal, although the notification raising his powers was published sometime thereafter. The delay in issuing the notification could not affect his authority on the date to which it related retrospectively. Raza Husain v. Gaya Prasad, 30 Ind. Cas. 205.

(9) Suit to determine class of tenancy—No objection to jurisdiction—Decision on merits—Estoppel.

Suit for a declaration that the defendants and certain others had no under-proprietary rights either as bird-holders or as perpetual lessees of certain land. The defendants in contesting the suit relied upon certain lease having certain mutation entries. The Court found that the document was not genuine and the entries had been inserted by fraud. In the result the Court passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants thereupon appealed and the appeal was dismissed. Hence the present application by the defendants for review of the judgment of the appellate Court. The objection put forward against the judgment was that it decided a question which it was not competent to the Civil Court to decide. It was contended that the Court had no jurisdiction to determine the class to which a particular tenant belonged and that it was left to the Revenue Court to determine such question. It was argued that it was a good case for review on the ground of an error apparent on the face of the record and in any case that there was other sufficient reason within the meaning of O. XLVII, r. 1, sub-r. 1, Civ. Pro. Code. Held that it could not be contended that Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to decide questions relating to the genuineness of documents of title and to give effect to such decisions. It was not open to parties, who like the defendants in the present case had submitted such a document to the judgment of the Civil Court, to turn round and seek to repudiate a finding unfavourable to themselves by alleging that the Court had no authority to come to it, the Revenue Courts having no exclusive jurisdiction to deal with questions on the genuineness or otherwise of documents of title. Held also that the judgment was not open to review on the ground of an apparent error, and there was no other sufficient cause for review. It was competent to the Court to find that the defendants were not perpetual lessees upon the grounds put forward by them. Ram Autar v. Raja Muhammad Abul Hassan Khan, 36 Ind. Cas. 83.

income, on the ground that the latter agreed to pay it to the former after realizing its rents from the tenants, is cognizable by a Civil and not a Revenue Court.

Held, also that the decree of the Munsif cannot be restored but the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff to present it in a Revenue Court, inasmuch as the decree of the Munsif was reversed by the District Judge on the ground that the suit was cognizable by a Revenue Court and the decree given by the Assistant Collector was reversed by the Collector, and that by registering the decree of the Collector in the Appellate Civil Court what the Chief Court can only do would leave the dissatisfied party no further remedy except a second appeal to that Court in which the registered decree could not be challenged on a question of fact. *In re Sardar Sher Singh v. Held, that a suit by a landlord against his Ziladar and Mukhtar for recovery of sums collected as rent of shops and for the price of grain realized as bazar-dues was not entertainable in the Rent Court and was rightly brought in the Civil Court.

Held further, that the suit not being entertainable in a Rent Court no period of limitation prescribed in the Oudh Rent Act could apply so as to bar the entertainment of the suit by a Civil Court.

Where on the date of issues the plaintiff made an application asking that a date might be fixed to allow the filing of documentary evidence and the Court simply ordered the application to remain with the record, held, that it was the duty of the Court to decide on the date when the application was filed what was to be done with reference to the request made for the reception of documentary evidence. *Musammatt Piyari v. heading to cls. 6 to 13 of S. 108 as compared with the heading to the classes of suits mentioned in cls. 15 to 18 indicates the differentiation made by Oudh Rent Act between under-proprietors on the one hand and lambardars, co-sharers and muafidars on the other hand. A suit for damages against a mortgagee, who retains possession over the mortgaged property in spite of redemption albeit he be a co-sharer of the mortgagor in the under-proprietary rights forming the subject-matter of the mortgage is, therefore cognizable by the Civil Court. *Sri Ram v. —7.—Of Small Cause Courts.

(1)—Suit for damages for act amounting to offence against property—Non-cognisability by Small Cause Court—Act IX of 1987, Sch. II (ii) as amended by Act VI of 1914.

A suit for damages on the allegation that the plaintiff's net had been forcibly torn and the fish collected by him in an enclosure allowed to escape is excluded from the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court by the provisions of item (ii), Art. 35 of Sch. II to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, as amended by VI of 1914 inasmuch as the allegation on which the suit is based makes out an offence against property under Chap. XVII of the Indian Penal Code. Adu Malo v. Nagar Bashi Malo, 33 Ind. Cas. 728.

(2)—Suit for rebuilding a wall or payment of damages—Non-cognisability by Small Cause Court—Suit instituted in proper Court—Return of plaint for presentation to Small Cause Court.

A suit for an order requiring the defendant to rebuild a wall or pay Rs. 200 as damages is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes inasmuch as the relief with regard to the re-building of the wall cannot be granted by that Court.

If the suit has been instituted in a Court having jurisdiction to try it, it is not competent to the Court after finding that the plaintiff is not entitled to the relief as to rebuilding of the wall, to return the plaint for presentation to a Small Cause Court, for the jurisdiction of a Court depends upon the nature of the suit as brought and not upon the character which it would ultimately assume. Dukkh v. Ghuru, 33 Ind. Cas. 768.

Kabuliat.

(1) Kabuliat, terms of—Right to bring suits jointly or separately—Suit by co-sharer landlord—Maintainability—Bengal Tenancy Act (VII of 1885), S. 52—Inapplicability of.

Where in a kabuliat dated prior to the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), there is a clear provision for the different co-sharers being entitled to bring suits either jointly or separately for their shares, and also for payment of rent either jointly or separately, neither the landlords nor the tenants are under the necessity of calling in the aid of the provisions of S. 52 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. Consequently a suit by a co-sharer landlord for rent and also for additional rent under the kabuliat praying to have the rent, enhanced at the rate agreed upon for the land as found by measurements under Chap. X of the Act, is maintainable the other co-sharer landlords being made parties to the suit. Ahmad Ali v. Biswaswar Mukhoti, 33 Ind. Cas. 211.

In a suit by a kanomdar for specific performance of a contract to sell property, against the jenmi and a subsequent purchaser:

Held, that where the subsequent purchaser knew that the property was in the possession of the plaintiff, as kanomdar, and abstained from making any enquiries of him, he must be deemed to have notice of the agreement to sell in favour of the kanomdar.

Cases, as to when a person is said to have notice under S. 3, Transfer of Property Act, considered.

A contract for sale gives the obligee contracting purchaser the benefit of an obligation arising out of contract and annexed to the ownership of immoveable property, though not amounting to an interest therein, which may be enforced against a transferee with notice. *Annalath Chathu v. Lambardar.

(1) Right of, to lease out banjar land—Consent of the whole proprietary body, if necessary—Considerations for the Court in a suit by a co-sharer to set aside such lease.

As a rule, a Lambardar cannot give out Banjar land on lease without the consent of the whole proprietary body. But there may be cases where the granting of such a lease does not injuriously affect the interests of the villagers or of the proprietary body, and is, on the contrary, to the interests of both. Such leases will not be set aside at the instance of a co-sharer who stood by and allowed the lessee without any protest to spend large sums of money in clearing the land. It would be unfair to view a new tenancy of this nature in the same light as one where the grant seriously curtails the villagers' right of grazing and nistar; or where the lease has been granted not in the interests of the proprietary body but is prejudicial to them (a).

The Lambardar's power to act on behalf of the whole body of landlords, in relation to an act obviously done in their interests, must be treated very differently to one done with the intention of his own ultimate gain or to one tinged with fraud. Kedarnath v. Maroti, 12 N.L.R. 136.

- (2) Lambardar—Representative of proprietary body—One of several lambardars—Authority to mortgage or alienate tenants' land—Consent of other lambardars—Necessity to validate transaction—Alienation by one of them—Whether renders it valid to the extent of his share—Effect.

In an ordinary village, unless the contrary is proved, the lambardar is regarded as the representative of the whole proprietary body with regard to the tenants.

Where there are more lambardars than one in a village, one of them cannot, by his consent alone, validate a mortgage so as to make it binding on the whole body of the proprietors. In matters affecting the proprietary body, all the lambardars have to work conjointly, acts done on behalf of the proprietary body requiring the consent of all the lambardars.

Where the person giving the consent happens to be the mortgagee or alienee, he cannot reap the advantage arising from the exercise of his powers as lambardar, to the disadvantage or detriment of the other co-proprietors.

Lambardar and Co-sharers—(Concluded).

'The law giving the lambardar power to act for the proprietary body is for the protection of third parties and not for that of the lambardar so far as his interests are antagonistic to the interests of his co-sharers.

One of two or more proprietors in an undivided mahal cannot make a valid mortgage of land held by a tenant, even to the extent of his own share in the mahal, without the consent of his co-proprietors (a).

Any thing the landlord is required or authorized to do under the Tenancy Act must be done by the whole proprietary body or by an agent acting on their behalf (b). Ganpatrao v. Pandurang, 12 N.L.R. 24=33 Ind. Cas. 758.

Act IV of 1898), S. 48 (11).

The plaintiff was the lessor of a piece of land compulsorily acquired by the City of Bombay Improvement Trust. In the compensation proceedings before the Special Collector the plaintiff took no part; and the amount of compensation was amicably settled between the Improvement Trust and the lessees at Rs. 85,000. The amount was apportioned as follows: Rs. 51,083 to the lessees; Rs. 2,804 to the lessor; Rs. 30,000 to the mortgagees of the lessor and Rs. 1,113 to the Municipal Commissioner. The lessees and the mortgagees received their amounts from the Collector; but the plaintiff being dissatisfied with the apportionment made to him, moved the Collector to make an apportionment reference, under S. 18 of the Land Acquisition Act, to the Tribunal of Appeal. The result of the reference was that the plaintiff was declared entitled to receive a sum of Rs. 2,960-10 out of the moneys received by the lessees; but the Tribunal held that it had no jurisdiction to make an order asking the lessees to refund the amount to the plaintiff. To recover that amount the plaintiff filed the present suit. It was objected (1) that the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from questioning the payments of compensation moneys; (2) that the Special Collector had no jurisdiction to make the reference under S. 18, as payment had already been made and no amount could be deposited with the Tribunal under S. 31 (2); and (3) that the present suit was not maintainable as the plaintiff had not appealed from the order of the Tribunal of Appeal as provided in S. 48 (11) of the City of Bombay Improvement Trust Act, 1898.

Held (1) that the plaintiff, by not adducing any evidence before the Collector and by his mortgagees accepting the sum of Rs. 30,000, had not accepted the award either expressly or by implication;

(2) that deposit of the amount in Court was not a condition precedent to the making of the reference by the Collector under S. 18, and that the Tribunal of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain the reference;

(3) that the suit was not premature although the plaintiff did not avail himself of the right of appeal given to him by S. 48 (11) of the City of Bombay Improvement Trust Act, 1898.

The appellant who was the first party claimed that he had a lakhiraj title to a land acquired under the Land Acquisition Act. The second party claimed as putnidars and dar-putnidars. The Collector made an award in favour of the first party and the amount of compensation was actually paid to him. On a reference to the Civil Court under S. 30 of the Act, the Subordinate Judge found in favour of the second party and directed the Government to pay the compensation to them and to realise the amount previously paid to the first party from him.

Held—That, though the Land Acquisition Act clearly contemplates that when there is a dispute as to apportionment the reference to the Civil Court under S. 30 should be made before any payment has been made, still there is nothing in the Act that prohibits the Land Acquisition Collector from making the reference after payment of compensation to one of the parties. When such a reference has been made, it is undesirable that the party who succeeds in showing that the Collector's order was wrong should have to resort to a regular suit to compel the opposite party to refund the compensation to which he has been held not to be entitled, nor can the rights of the opposite party be in any way prejudiced by the reduction of litigation.

That the omission of the appellant to file any road cess return with regard to the land went strongly against his claim to have asserted a lakkiraj title to it.

The High Court varied the decree of the Subordinate Judge and ordered the first party to pay the amount of compensation received by him to the second party with interest at 6 per cent. per annum from the date of withdrawal.

Held, further, that a claimant in a Land Acquisition proceeding can get no share of the compensation without establishing either title to or possession of the land acquired. Satish Chandra Singha v. Ananda Gopal Das, 20 C. W.N. 816.

On the acquisition of a piece of land under the Land Acquisition Act, it was found that the person in possession had taken possession of it on the death of the last male owner and held possession for more than 12 years without payment of rent. He asserted that he held the land under another person and not under the rival claimant who was the reversionary heir of the last male owner.

Held, that the person in such possession was entitled to the full compensation paid for its compulsory acquisition, having acquired the right to hold the land rent-free by twelve years' adverse possession. Rajbans Sahay v. Rai Mahabir Prasad, 20 C.W.N. 828=1 Pat. L. J. 253.

Where the muchilika by the tenant fixes the rent, it is not open to him to let in oral evidence to prove that the contract, has been varied; and any length of payment of a lesser rent will not help the tenant.

Where the zamindar has sent a communication to the tenant in which it is stated that the reduction hitherto made in the rent will not be granted after the date of that letter, the letter can be regarded as agreeing to discharge the tenant from liability to pay the contract rate for a particular period and to accept in lieu thereof a smaller sum, and no consideration is necessary for its remission. A lease stipulated for a year certain and provided for yearly payments in case the lessee held over after the expiry of the year. There was also a provision for delivery of possession on demand.

Held that, on the expiry of the first year of the tenancy, the lessee continued to hold as tenant from year to year and that he could not be evicted without a notice to quit at the end of the first year and before the next year of the tenancy commenced (a).

Held further that the provision for delivery of possession on demand did not constitute a contract to the contrary within the meaning of S. 106 of the Transfer of Property Act, as it did not mention the time at which the demand should be made and that the provision for the payment of rent annually could not be split up (b). *Birl Umma v. the full rate; and after the expiry of the term the raiyat remained in occupation without taking a fresh settlement and rent was then realised from the tenant at the reduced rate for a few years, and thereupon the landlord sued for rent at the full rate.

Held—That the agreement did not contravene the provisions relating to non-occupancy raiyats and was not invalid.

Held also, that the landlord, by accepting the rent at the reduced rate, was not deprived of his right to claim rent at the rate stipulated in the kabuliyat and was entitled to receive rent at the full rate (a).

Held further, that evidence that, since the execution of the kabuliyat, the tenant paid rent at a lower rate than that stated in the kabuliyat was admissible to shew the intention of the parties that the kabuliyat was not intended to be acted upon or that there had been a waiver of the terms of the lease (b). *Kallash Chandra Saha v. (6) Rent, enhancement of—Improvement by landlord—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII. of 1885), S. 29, Provisos (1), (2), S. 30 (c)—Sum in addition of interest—Damages, claim for.

S. 3 of the Evidence Act lays down a rule of common sense. It expresses the rule in terms which allow full effect to be given to circumstances or conditions of probability or improbability (a).

The requirements of the first clause of the proviso to S. 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act are fulfilled if two elements are proved, namely, first, that there was an agreement to pay rent which is higher than the previous rate, and, secondly, that rent has been paid at a higher rate.

The enhancement of rent claimed for improvement under Cl. (c) of S. 30 of the Bengal Tenancy Act should include a sum in addition to the interest payable upon the capital spent.

The tenants agreeing to pay certain rent per bigha in consideration of the improvement, may be taken prima facie as their own estimate of what would be fair under S. 30, Cl. (c) of the Bengal Tenancy Act; and the Court might well adopt this as the basis for a decree, till, at any rate, the tenants showed that their estimate was erroneous.

Where improvement has been effected, an agreement for enhancement of rent at more than two annas in the rupee is valid. But this enhanced rent can continue only so long as the improvement exists and substantially produces its estimated effect in respect of the holding.

The claim for damages in this case was negatived. Ganes Dutt Singh v. Lachmi Narain Singh, 23 C.L.J. 209=34 Ind. Cas. 789.

Held—That the arrangement between the purchaser and the raiyat was in substance a sale of a portion of the holding.

That the surrender being obviously illusory, the original tenancy subsisted and protected the purchaser from ejectment by the landlord. Nobo Kishore Saha v. Dhananjoy Saha, 20 C.W.N. 610=33 Ind. Cas. 611.

A landlord sued his tenants in ejectment and having obtained a decree in the First Court on 23rd December 1907, took delivery of the properties through Court in 1908. The tenants having ultimately succeeded in second appeal on the ground that they had occupancy rights in the holding and were not liable to be ejected, applied for restitution and claimed also mesne profits for the period during which the landlord remained in unlawful possession. The landlord contended that he was entitled to set off against the mesne profits claimed the rent payable to him by the tenants for that period.

Held that there was no obligation on the part of the tenants to pay rent to the landlord during the time the latter was in unlawful possession of the holding and that in any event he was not entitled to a set off as the tenants were entitled to be placed in the possession they were previously in, irrespective of any other rights accruing to any of the parties during the period of litigation. *Lakshmi Narainmha Rao v. rent—Tenancy from year to year, inference as to—Holding over—Use and occupation, compensation for—Liability to pay on holding over—Transferability—Transfer of Property Act, S. 6—Assent to tenant's continuance, if inferable from passive failure to eject—Intention to hold adversely, if necessarily follows holding over—Tenancy by sufferance, fiction of, if obtains in India—Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), S. 25—Revision—Interference only discretionary.

An unregistered lease for three years is inadmissible in evidence to prove the tenancy or its terms.

A tenancy from year to year can be inferred from the fact of payment of rent by the tenant to the landlord and its receipt by the latter, the annual rent due under such a tenancy being ascertainable from the amount of rent paid and received.

A tenant holding over is liable to pay compensation for use and occupation of the demised premises.

Mere passive failure to take steps to eject a tenant whose lease term has expired, will not, by itself, constitute an assent on the landlord's part to the tenant's continuing in possession as tenant from year to year.

An intention to hold adversely to the landlord need not necessarily follow from a holding over, though the running of time under Art. 139, Limitation Act, against the landlord will not be interrupted in such a case.

The fiction of a tenancy by sufferance, which said to arise under the English Law on a tenant's holding over, has no place in the Indian Law after the enactment of the Transfer of Property Act (a).

The claim for use and occupation against a person who has ceased to be the lessee owing to the expiry of the lease term and the non-creation of a new relationship of lessor and lessee, not being one based on an express or implied contract but sounding in damages due and payable to the owner by a person without any rightful claim thereto, is a mere right to sue and is not transferable under the provisions of S. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, whatever may be the English Law as to such rights (b).

The compensation for use and occupation, which is loosely described in the English cases as 'rent,' 'fair rent, and occupation rent,' is looked upon by the English Courts as based on an implied contract to pay a fair rent. But it is not advisable to extend to India the whole of the English Law of implied contracts, many of which being already dealt with in the Indian Contract Act under the head of 'Relations resembling those created by contract.'

Prior to the passing of the Bengal Tenancy (Amending) Act of 1907, a co-sharer-landlord obtained a decree for rent against the registered tenant of a non-transferable occupancy-holding in favour of himself and his other co-sharer. He took out execution under the Civ. Pro. Code and not under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The plaintiff who had purchased the holding in execution of a money-decree against the registered tenant deposited the decretal amount in Court for payment to the decree-holder-landlord, alleging in his petition that he had acquired a right to the holding by purchase and that he made the deposit to protect his right and reserved his right to realise the amount deposited by him from the former tenant or his heir as the tenants of the holding. The decree was thereupon treated as satisfied and the attachment was withdrawn, and the amount deposited was withdrawn by the landlord.

Held—That, upon such deposit, the landlord could not, as in a case under the Bengal Tenancy Act, contest the right of the purchaser to make the deposit, and the withdrawal of the deposit did not amount to a recognition of the purchaser by the landlord. *Surendra Narain Mahata v. The principle laid down in Binad Lal Pakrashi's case (a), vis., that an agricultural tenant, who enters upon the land, whether it be firm or alluvial, and holds under a de facto proprietor bona fide, is entitled to be treated as a raiyat, although the de facto proprietor is subsequently proved to be not the real owner, is an encroachment upon the ordinary rule of law that a grantor is not competent to confer upon the grantees a better title than what he himself possesses, and must be cautiously applied and is not to be extended. It is not applicable to zerai lands. In order to make the principle applicable, the lessor must be the de facto landlord in possession and must have placed the lessee in possession of the land.

A person, who obtained a lease of agricultural land from one who had no title to it and was not put in possession of it, has no enforceable claim even as against one who fails to establish his alleged title.

A judgment in criminal case is admissible in evidence to show what order was made, who the parties to the dispute were, what the land in dispute was and who was held entitled to possession (b). Krishna v. Mahomed, 23 O.L.J. 563=31 Ind. Cas. 789=21 C.W.N. 93.

A sale of a portion of an occupancy holding does not cause a forfeiture of the tenancy (a).

So far as the landlord is concerned, the tenancy continues unaffected and he is entitled to look for payment of rent to his recorded tenant.

There is no abandonment of the holding, if the original tenant after parting with a portion of the holding remains in actual possession of it as an under-raiyat from the purchaser.

The disputed land belonged to A. In execution of a decree for money obtained against him, B purchased a portion of the holding. Thereupon the representative of the original tenant took sub-leases from the purchaser in respect of a portion only of the land acquired by him. The plaintiff took a settlement from the superior landlord of the disputed land which constituted the occupancy holding of A. He subsequently sued to eject B as a trespasser and obtained a decree against him. When he attempted to execute this decree, he was opposed by the defendant, the representative of the original tenant. The objection was allowed. The plaintiff then brought the present suit to recover rent from the defendant as his under-raiyat:

Held, that the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiff and the defendant did not subsist and the claim for rent was not maintainable.

That the original tenancy still continued and the landlord was not competent to create a valid occupancy holding in favour of the plaintiff.

That the defendant was not estopped from questioning the title of the plaintiff. Kallim Sheikh v. Mocham Mandal, 24 O.L.J. 113=36 Ind. Cas. 719.

Rent is paid by a tenant for the use of land, and if for no fault of his own, the lands are washed away, he cannot, on general principles, be held liable to pay rent (a).

A kabuliat contained a stipulation to the effect—"cultivation or non-cultivation, profit or loss in respect of the jote shall be ours. We shall not be competent to make any objection to the rent settled:"

Held, that the lessees thereby agreed not to make any objection to pay rent only on the grounds stated, vis., non-cultivation, and similar grounds which pre-suppose the existence of the lands, and not where the lands are entirely washed away; and as such they were not precluded by the terms of the kabuliat from pleading non-liability to pay rent if all the lands of the jote were washed away.

(18) Tenant, if can contest landlord's title—Tenancy, expiration of—Possession—Estoppel—Evidence Act, Ss. 115, 116, if exhaustive.

According to the law of England, a person who has been let into possession as a tenant is estopped from denying his lessor's title without first surrendering possession (a).

The position, however, is different when the tenant had possession before he took the lease (b).

Per Mookerjee, J.—Enjoyment by permission is the foundation of the rule that a tenant shall not be permitted to dispute the title of his landlord. Two conditions are essential to the existence of the estoppel, first, possession, secondly, permission; when these conditions are present, the estoppel arises, and the estoppel prevails so long as such possession continues.

The above doctrine was also unquestionably the law in this country before the Indian Evidence Act was passed (c).

The law has not in this respect been altered by the Indian Evidence Act, and now, as before, a tenant, who has been let into possession, is estopped from denying the landlord's title without first surrendering possession (d).

Ss. 115 and 116, Evidence Act, are not exhaustive, and there may be rules of estoppel applicable, other than what is contained in those sections (e).

S. 116 of the Act cannot imply that, after the expiration of the tenancy, the tenant is free to dispute the title of the landlord, although he retains possession which he had obtained by the permission of the landlord (f). Bhaiganta Bewa v. rights under village custom—Claim to interest in immovable property—Not of Small Cause nature—Second appeal lies.

A claim to grazing rights under a village custom is a claim to an interest in immovable property. It is not one of a Small Cause Court nature and a second appeal lies in respect of it.

The term 'agricultural cattle' in the wajib-ul-ars means and includes animals employed in agricultural and in purposes subservient to agriculture including the domestic requirements of the tenant. This will cover bullocks and buffaloes used for ploughing or threshing, for the cartage of produce, for the private dairy purposes of the tenant, and for the conveyance of himself and his household. It will also include a reasonable number of animals for breeding for the purpose of keeping his agricultural stock constant, so that animals which die or become too old or ill to work can be replaced from his reserve without having recourse to fresh purchases. But the wajib-ul-ars cannot be extended to allow free grazing of animals kept as the stock of a trading dairy farm, or bred for sale to cultivators or to butchers, or for the plying of carts or other conveyances for hire.

"The only cattle which would not be classed as agricultural cattle within the meaning of the wajib-ul-ars would be such cattle as are bred for sale, or hire, or are used for breeding calves for sale or for producing milk, ghee, etc., for sale. In fact if the tenant engages in any trade besides that of agriculture and uses cattle for that trade . . . the cattle so used would be non-agricultural cattle and would be liable for grazing fees."

The provision in the wajib-ul-ars regarding the right to graze cattle free on the village waste must be construed as limited to a reasonable number of animals kept by the cultivator for the purposes of his holding in the village, and not exceeding the number which would ordinarily be kept for the purposes of good husbandry for, and in connection with, a similar holding.

Each case must be decided according to its own facts, subject to such general rules as can be based upon the wajib-ul-ars. Nanhu v. Narbadaprasad, 12 N.L.R. 83=34 Ind. Cas. 695.

(22) Ejectment—Permanent lease—Covenant for re-entry upon an involuntary sale—Lease in perpetuity if forfeitable—Mortgage—Sale in execution of mortgage decree—Auction-purchaser, status of—Right of re-entry, where reserved and where not—Lessor, remedy of—Forfeiture, when takes place—Election by lessor—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), Ss. 155, 188, Sch. III, Art. 1—Forfeiture, effect of, on under-lease—Limitation Act (1908), Sch.-I, Art. 142—Fractional landlord, suit by.

Per Curiam :—A covenant for re-entry by the landlord upon an involuntary sale is valid and operative in law.

Per Sanderson, C.J.—Where the execution sale is directly due to the voluntary act of the lessees in the execution of a mortgage and omission to pay the mortgage debt, the assignment cannot be said to be ad invitum.

Per Mookerjee, J.—An involuntary alienation may in one sense be attributed to a remote act of the party, quite as much as a voluntary alienation. But this does not place a voluntary and an involuntary alienation on the same footing (a).

Per Curiam.—S. 155 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, being applicable only to a suit for the ejectment of a tenant who has forfeited his tenancy by breach of a covenant, cannot be invoked by a purchaser of a permanent tenure in execution sale, which was forfeited by a condition in the lease.

A suit against such a purchaser for ejectment is not governed by Art. 1 of Sch. III of the Bengal Tenancy Act, but by Art. 142 of the first Schedule of the Limitation Act.

Such a purchaser, being a trespasser, can be ejected by a fractional landlord, and S. 188 of the Bengal Tenancy Act has no application (b).

Per Mookerjee, J.—A lease in perpetuity is forfeitable for breach of covenant, notwithstanding that it is permanent (c).

Where there is a covenant in the lease against alienation, but no right of re-entry is reserved in the landlord, the remedy of the latter is either by way of injunction against an apprehended breach, or by recovery of damages for a breach already committed.

Where the lease reserves a right of re-entry, the landlord is not entitled to the reliefs by injunction or damages, but may at his choice treat the lease as forfeited and exercise his right of re-entry.

Where, however, the landlord indicates his election to take advantage of the forfeiture, the forfeiture takes effect from the moment of breach, namely, from the date of alienation. The election is not a condition precedent to the right of action but the institution of the suit itself is a sufficient manifestation of the exercise of the option of the lessor to treat the lease as determined.

Where the lessee has created an underlease or any other legal interest, if the lease is forfeited, then the underlessee or the person who claims under the lessee, loses his estate as well as the lessee himself, but if the lessee surrenders, he cannot, by his own voluntary act in surrendering, prejudice the estate of the underlessee or the person who claims under him (d). Dwarika Nath Roy Choudhury v. (23) Joint tenancy in Bihar and Orissa—Presumption—Liability for rent—Frame of suit—Admission in compromise petition—Effect.

In 1905 plaintiff (landlord) brought a suit against 3 defendants, who jointly held an occupancy holding, for rent for the years, 1309—1311 F.S., at the rate of Rs. 136-6-0 per annum. Defendants 1 and 2 appeared and filed a compromise petition accepting the rate claimed. A decree was accordingly passed at that rate, but the 3rd defendant subsequently brought a suit and got the decree set aside, so far as he was concerned, on the ground that he was not properly served. In a subsequent suit by the landlord against the three tenants, for the years 1316-1319 at the rate of Rs. 136-6-0, the third tenant was again not served.

Held that ordinarily a rent suit is not properly constituted unless it is brought against all the recorded tenants. As the third tenant was not served in the present suit, the suit cannot proceed, unless the plaintiff can show that there was a special contract between him and the other defendants 1 and 2 by which these defendants agreed to be responsible for the whole rent not only jointly but also severally.

There is no presumption that, in every joint tenancy in Bihar and Orissa, there is also a several promise by which each joint tenant agrees to be bound for the whole rent (a).

Held also that mere admission in the compromise petition of 1905 did not constitute a several promise by defendants 1 and 2 to be responsible for the whole rent at the rate of Rs. 136-6-0. Jogewwar Rai v. Maharajah Kesho Prasad Singh, 1 Pat. L.J. 190.

(26) Suit for ejectment—Lease of land for residential purposes—Law before the Transfer of Property Act—Onus to prove transferability—Presumption of transferability, if arises from long continued possession.

The effect of the recent decisions is that, when a landlord sues a person on the allegation that he is a trespasser and that person sets up a transfer from a tenant, it is for the latter to prove, first of all, the tenancy and, secondly, the validity of the transfer.

With regard to tenancies of homestead land created before the Transfer of Property Act, the tendency of these decisions has been to establish that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the burden of proof being upon the tenant, these tenancies are non-transferable(a).

The only exception made to the above rule is when there has been an erection of pucca buildings or a standing by on the part of the landlord while the tenant spends a large sum upon the land (b).

(28) Occupancy holder transferring part of his non-transferable occupancy holding without the knowledge or consent of the landlord—Transfer, validity of—Non-payment of rent by tenant—Disclaimer—Suit by landlord for possession of the transferred portion.

The holder of a non-transferable occupancy holding cannot create by transfer a title good against his landlord.

In this case a tenant transferred by a deed of sale a portion of his non-transferable occupancy holding without his landlord's knowledge or consent and subsequently refused to pay the rent of the transferred portion to the landlords on the ground that it was sold and relinquished in favour of the purchaser; the tenant paid rent only for the portion of the holding which remained in his possession.

Held (i) it is open to the landlords to decline to accept an apportionment of the rent and to decline to recognise any division of the holding.

(ii) On the tenant refusing to pay the entire rent of the whole holding, the landlords may institute a rent suit and so bring the holding to sale in execution of any decree they may obtain. But this is not the only course open to the landlords. The landlords may be at liberty, if they so choose, to accept from the tenant the amount of rent tendered by him for the land he still held without prejudice to any right which they might have as proprietors in respect of the transferred portion.

(iii) Only one conclusion is possible from the transfer coupled with the subsequent refusal to pay the rent of the transferred portion; clearly, that would amount on the part of the tenant to a disclaimer of all right, title and interest in the transferred portion.

(iv) As to the landlords, such conduct on the part of the tenant put an end to the relationship of landlord and tenant. By such acts and conduct, the tenant made it as clear as possible that he had no further interest in the land. The land would therefore, be at the disposal of the landlords, unless any third person can make out a good title to possession as against them. Kunja Kishore Pal Chowdhury v. Bama Sundari Dasee, 43 O. 878 = 35 Ind. Cas. 781.

(29) Transfer of Property Act, S. 108 (ii)—Ejectment—Tenant's right to compensation for buildings or for time to remove them after expiry of term—Equitable estoppel.

The erection of buildings by a tenant on leasehold land without any objection by the landlord does not change the tenant's right of tenancy into a perpetual right of occupation though the landlord may have allowed and even recognised the tenant's right to free sale of houses erected on the land by them and accepted purchasers of the building as his tenants.

Nor is the tenant or a purchaser from him entitled to any compensation for the costs of the building on the ground that the landlord in permitting the sale, and recognising the purchaser as his tenant has encouraged the expectation on the part of the tenant that he would be entitled to compensation if suddenly ejected. To create an equitable estoppel against the landlord in such a case it is incumbent on the tenant to show that the landlord's conduct amounted by plain implication to a contract to change the right of tenancy into a perpetual right of occupation.

The rule established in India in such cases is that of S. 108 (h) of the Transfer of Property Act which provides that the lessee may remove at any time during the continuance of the lease all buildings which he has attached to the earth provided he leaves the property in the state in which he received it.

Semle.—The Court may give the tenant reasonable time after the termination of the lease in which to remove the buildings.

For such further time the landlord is entitled to damages for use and occupation or mesne profits at a fair and reasonable rate.

(31) Tenant executing the lease but not let into possession by the lessor—Whether can deny lessor's title—Estoppel—Evidence Act, S. 116—Fraud—Misrepresentation—Coercion.

Held by the majority (Chief Justice contra) that a tenant who has executed a lease but has not been let into possession by the lessor is estopped from denying his lessor's title, in the absence of proof that he executed the lease in ignorance of the defect in his lessor's title or that his execution of the lease was procured by fraud, misrepresentation or coercion.

Per Chief Justice.—A tenant who was let into possession was estopped from denying a landlord's title. A tenant who was not let into possession by the person seeking to eject him is not estopped from denying the plaintiff's title; he may show that the title is in some third person or in himself. But the execution of a lease or payment of rent by the defendant is a prima facie proof of the plaintiff's title which the Court dealing with the evidence will ordinarily treat as conclusive in his favour unless the fact is sufficiently explained. In most cases of this nature the presumption in favour of the plaintiff can only be displaced by the defendant showing that the attornment was made by him

(32) Tenant, if can contest landlord's title—Adverse possession, title by—Lessee, if can acquire such title against his lessor—Non-payment of rent, if creates adverse possession.

A tenant cannot dispute the landlord's title without first going out of occupation, and thereby making it clear that he intended to dispute the title of his landlord (a).

Where a lessee enters into possession under a lease, he cannot acquire any title by adverse possession against his lessor pending the term of his lease, unless he distinctly asserts such a title to his knowledge and gives him notice that he asserted such a title (b).

Failure to pay rent to the lessor by the lessee does not alone operate to create in favour of the lessee a title by adverse possession. Reajuddi Bepari v. Chand Baksha Hajl, 24 C.L.J. 453=35 Ind. Cas. 28.

Where a harsh unconscionable bargain is entered into by the tenant for no apparent reason at all, the Court is justified in presuming that undue influence was brought to bear upon him by the malik who undoubtedly stands in a position from which such undue influence can be exercised. Kasht Nath Ray v. Landlord and Tenant—(Continued).

Some years after the granting of a permanent lease, (granti tenure) by a zamindar, in favour of the father of the defendants, of lands, parts of which, it was known were liable to resumption by Government one of the chaks included in the lease was resumed by Government, who formed it into a separate estate and granted it in temporary settlement in 1884 for 20 years to the heirs of the zamindar assessed with a rent of Rs. 850. One of the heirs of the zamindar sold his interest in the permanent estate to one, and his interest in the chak to another. The purchaser of the interest in the chak together with the remaining heirs of the zamindar sued the father of the defendants for the recovery of the chak rent. The suit which went up to the Privy Council, was dismissed as it was held by the Privy Council that the resumption of the chak by the Government could not abrogate the rights of the lessee (the father of the defendants) vide 30 C. 811.

Then in 1904 a settlement of the chak was made with plaintiff and the brothers of the purchaser. A considerably large sum of money (Rs. 1,967) was assessed as the rent payable by defendants for the chak after the settlement proceedings under Part II, Chap. X of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885). In a suit against defendants for recovery of arrears of rent it was held that as the defendants (tenants) did not appeal as to the entry of rent which was made in their presence and did not impugn it under S. 104 H, the enhancement which was clearly made with full jurisdiction under S. 192 became final and could not be disturbed; and that as the landlords settlement-holders were not the representatives of the original grantor of the lease the Privy Council decision 30 C. 811 did not operate as res judicata. *Khl-roda Kanta Roy v. (54) Tenancy with special conditions—Non-occupancy tenancy.

A zamindar agreed that he would allow his tenants to hold land on the following conditions:—

(i) that the tenants would from that day remain in possession like (misl) fixed rate tenants, in the future there would be no enhancement of rent on them or on their heirs;

(ii) that on certain conditions they would have a right of transfer among themselves but not to outsiders;

(iii) that on certain conditions they would have rights of mortgage;

(iv) that they would have rights of sale on certain conditions, subject to the zamindar's right of pre-emption.

Held that the tenancy which was created under the above circumstances was only a non-occupancy tenancy with special conditions; and that the other privileges of a fixed rate tenant which were not specifically mentioned, were

(58) Arrears of rent—Mode of assessment—Fair occupation of rent—Non-liability of rent-free tenant—Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886).

Where the relationship of landlord and tenant exists and there has been an agreement to pay rent, whether the amount payable has been fixed or not, it is open to the Court to allow arrears of rent according to the rate originally fixed, even if the agreement has terminated, or, in case where the rent has not been fixed, to assess a fair occupation rent and award arrears on that basis. But where there has been no agreement to pay rent at all and where the agreement has been that the land should be held rent-free, though, if the landlord desires to discontinue the indulgence, he may obtain an assessment of rent to be charged in future years, he cannot be permitted to give retrospective effect to that desire and claim arrears of rent assessed on the basis of a fair occupation rent or on any other basis. Thakur Suraj Bakhsh Singh v. The scope of S. 155, Bengal Tenancy Act, seems to be that whether the alleged breach of a condition of the tenancy is capable of remedy or not, a sum is to be specified by the Court in the suit for ejectment as reasonable compensation for the breach and it is only if the tenant fails to deposit that sum within the time given that the landlord can have his decree for ejectment.

The effect of S. 178 is that even when there is a provision for re-entry in a contract made before the passing of the Act S. 155 applies with full force.

In a suit by the landlord for ejectment on the ground of breach of a condition against transfer of the tenure, in which the original tenant and the transferee were impleaded, a deposit by the transferee defendant of the sum specified as compensation is sufficient. The section appears to allow the deposit to be made not only by the original tenant but by any person who is impleaded as a defendant. In such a suit a declaration ought not to be given to the transferee that he is to be regarded as

An occupancy holding not transferable by the custom of the locality was inherited by three brothers, defendants Nos. 1, 2 and 3. They jointly sold a portion of the Jote to defendants Nos. 12 and 13 and established sub ryots of whom defendant No. 6 was one. The name of defendant No. 1 alone, however, was recorded in the sherikhta of the landlord, who brought suits against defendant No. 1, alone and obtained decrees some of which were satisfied by all the brothers, while in execution of the last of such decrees he purchased the Jote himself and settled with the plaintiff. The latter within 12 years from the date of symbolical possession but more than 12 years from the date of the execution-sale, instituted a suit against all the defendants for possession of the holding. Held (1) that the suit was not barred as against defendants Nos. 2 and 3, for they having elected to be represented in their relations to the landlord by their brother, defendant No. 1, were parties to the suit in the name of their brother and could not be heard to say that they were strangers to the suit; and that, therefore, against them the symbolical possession gave start to a fresh period of limitation:

(2) That as defendants 6, 12 and 13 being strangers to the suit, the delivery of symbolical possession did not affect their possession, and that the suit as against them was barred by limitation. (3) That defendants 12 and 13 being unrecognised purchasers of a portion of the holding, were bound by the result of the rent suit and were liable to be turned out by a separate suit brought for the purpose within 12 years.

(1) Lessor and lessee—Lease not valid—Right to compensation—Transfer of Property Act, S. 108, cl. (b).

Where a lessee comes upon a property and the lease is found to be invalid, the principle of S. 108, cl. (b) of the Transfer of Property Act applies to the improvements made by him. If he seeks any remedy, he is only entitled to have the superstructure removed by him and not to any compensation.

Coutts-Trotter, J.—No claim for compensation can be made except in the case of fraud, namely, if the persons really entitled knew that they were entitled and the persons in actual possession were not, and stood by and allowed them to spend money in building on the land. An allegation of fraud must be made definitely and categorically and must, in no circumstances, be allowed to be made at a subsequent stage of the suit. Govindasami Naidu v. Ethirajammal, (1916) M.W.N. 180=34 Ind. Cas. 1.

(2) Transaction whether lease or mortgage—Construction—Stipulation against sub-letting whether a covenant or a condition—Breach of stipulation—Remedy—Damages, Ss. 10, 108 (j), 111 (g). Transfer of Property Act.

N executed a document reciting that, on receipt of Rs. 4,000 by him, his interests in certain properties were released to M for a term of years at an annual rental of Rs. 4,000. On the expiry of the term, the lessee should receive back from the executant the sum of Rs. 4,000 without interest, provided that the annual rent was fully satisfied, and should surrender the leased property. It was also recited in the lease that the lessee should not sub-lease the property without the permission of the executant.

Held, the transaction was a lease and not a mortgage.

Where the lease does not contain any provision for forfeiture or re-entry by the lessor in the event of a sub-lease being executed without his consent, the provision against sub-letting is a covenant and not a condition, and the landlord's remedy in the case of a breach would be a suit for damages merely and not a suit for ejectment. And such a breach of covenant against alienation does not operate in law to prevent an assignment of the leased properties (a).

Under S. 10, Transfer of Property Act, any provision in the lease restraining the lessee from sub-letting would obviously be for the benefit of the lessor, if it provides for the re-entry of the lessor or for forfeiture of the lease

But the mere existence of a condition in general terms against sub-letting is not of itself sufficient to prove that the condition was for the benefit of the lessor. There must be something else, either in the circumstances of the case or in the nature of the property, or there must be something in the wording of the lease, from which it might be inferred that the provision was intended directly for the benefit of the lessor. Sital Prasad v. Nawab Dildar Ali Khan, 1 Pat. L.J. 1=33 Ind. Cas. 403.

- (3) Meaning and effect of the expression "Istemrari Mokarari" in leases—Lease when to be deemed perpetual and when not—Effect of mode of registration of lease—Meaning of words in a document whether a question of fact or law—Rights of parties to a contract by what law to be judged—Lease in favour of two persons—Duration of lease—Limitation when arises.

The expression istemrari mokarari does not per se convey an estate of inheritance, but an istemrari mokarari patta, notwithstanding the absence of words indicative of heritability, such as ba farsandan, naslan bad naslan or al-aulad, may be a perpetual grant, if the other terms of the instrument, the circumstances under which it was made, or the subsequent conduct of the parties show such an intention with sufficient certainty (a).

The clauses which impose a restraint on transfer and on the cutting down of fruit-bearing or income-yielding trees and make it obligatory on the lessees to plant another tree in place of any that might fall down by itself, are not consistent with the theory that a perpetual grant was intended. On the other hand, the clause which throws the cost of improvement on the lessees indicates some measure of continuity, but not necessarily perpetuity.

The fact that a lease was in favour of two lessees points to the conclusion that, though some measure of continuity was desired, perpetuity was not intended.

But a substantial premium is one of the surest indications of a permanent grant.

The mode in which registration of a lease is effected is not conclusive in an enquiry as to the nature of the lease (b).

The meaning of words in a document is a question of fact, though the effect of words is a question of law. But the existence of an alleged customary local meaning is not proved merely by the assertions of witnesses that, in their opinion, the expression has a particular meaning (c).

The rights of the parties to a contract are to be judged of by that law by which they may justly be presumed to have bound themselves (d).

Where a lease is in favour of two persons and it would not terminate till the death of the survivor of the two lessees, the landlord is not entitled to re-enter till both the lessees are dead and till then no question of limitation or

- (4) Ejectment—Lease for a term—Option of renewal—Option not exercised—Holding over—Notice to quit, effect of—Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act (VIII B.C. of 1869), S. 53.

On the determination of a lease for a term, the lessee is bound to surrender possession to the lessor; on default, he may be ejected without notice, for though he entered into the land with right, he has remained without right, as the tenant cannot be said to hold over, unless the landlord assents to the continuance of his possession (a).

The assent of the landlord to the continuance of the occupation of the tenant after expiry of the term may be indicated by acceptance of rent or by conduct which justifies an inference to that effect.

The fact that the landlord tolerates the continuance in occupation of the tenant after the expiry of the term does not make his former tenant, his tenant in future (b).

The serving of notice to quit, on the person who continues in occupation after the expiry of the term, does not make him a tenant whose tenancy is to be terminated by a notice to quit (c).

The defendant took a lease of the disputed land in the district of Sylhet from the plaintiff for a term of 3 years from 13th April 1904 till 13th April 1907. The lease provided expressly that the tenant would give up possession upon the expiry of the term, and that, if he desired to continue as tenant, he would take a fresh lease. The term expired, but the defendant neither took a fresh lease nor made over possession of the land to the plaintiff. Notices were served on the 8th and 15th October 1910, asking the defendant to quit on the 13th April 1911:

Held, that the defendant ceased to be tenant upon the expiry of his term and was liable to be ejected in the manner prescribed by S. 53 of the Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act. Paramananda Singh v. Syjou Singh, 24 C.L.J. 30.

- (5) Transfer of Property Act, S. 8—Trees reserved by the lessor—Lessor, if can cultivate shellac on the trees—Fruits and flowers—Kabuliat, construction of.

In construing a Kabuliat it is permissible to look at the circumstances under which it was executed.

A lessor reserved property in the trees growing on the lease-hold land and the lessee was prohibited from taking them away; the latter was given enjoyment of the phal phul (fruits and flowers) of the trees only at the lessor's permission.

Held, that this ownership did not carry with it a right to go on the lessee's land to cultivate shellac on the trees reserved.

A transfer of property passes to the transferee the interest of the transferor unless a different intention is expressed or necessarily implied.

- (6) Moguli rent, meaning of—Presumption of lost grant, in absence of proof of legal title, on the basis of user exercised and enjoyed—Surface rights and subsoil and mineral rights—Distinction between copyholders and tenants of freehold land in England—Construction of the terms "Restrictions and conditions as to the exercise of the power" in mining lease—Limitation—Adverse possession.

"Moguli" is a word of doubtful meaning and at the best imports no more than that the rent assessed represents a proportion of the Government revenue.

Where a Court is asked to presume a grant in favour of a party in the nature of a lost grant, i.e., a lawful origin of a long and continuous user and enjoyment of property in the absence of legal proof of title, it should presume a grant on the basis of the user exercised and enjoyed by that party.

Where the mineral rights were never in contemplation of the parties when the lease was granted in 1830 and the lessees never exercised any mineral rights whatsoever, barring taking small quantities of coal from the outcrop for domestic purposes and burning lime, and the zamindar by the lease granted a willage containing 380 bighas at the abnormally low rent of Rs. 17 per annum the presumption made, in the absence of the original document, was that only surface rights were conveyed to the grantee.

In such cases the mines and minerals and the property in the subsoil remained the property and in the possession of the zamindar. The surface rights with their incidents became vested in the grantee as tenure holders (a).

If the mines are presumed to be vested in, and to be the property of, the zamindar, his rights must be just the same as those of a fee-simple freehold owner of land according to

English law, who makes a grant with an express reservation of the mines to himself together with the incidents that follow therefrom. By reason of that presumption and by reason of the severance of the tenement and the reservation that must be deemed to arise in favour of the Raja, the latter has, as incident to his right of property and ownership in the mines, the right by implication of law to enter upon the surface of the tenure-holder's mouzah for all reasonable and necessary purposes to enable him to work the mines and exercise his mineral rights.

The case of Prince Mahomed Bakhyar Shah v. Rani Dhajamoni (b) in so far as it decided that the owner of a limited estate in possession can prevent the grantor or his lessee to work and appropriate the mineral during the existence of such limited estate unless the grantor had expressly reserved the mineral right in his own favour, was wrongly decided by the misapplication of the English Law of copyholders to the case of owners and tenants of freehold land.

The distinction between freehold and copyhold law is that, under the latter, there is no division into strata and the tenant obtains possession of the entire surface and subsoil to the centre of the earth, so that the lord of the manor cannot work the mines unless he proves a right or custom to that effect. It is only under the copyhold law and where there is no reservation of custom proved that a deadlock occurs and neither landlord nor tenant can work the mines. Under the law applicable to freehold land there can be no deadlock, for if the mines be excepted the grantor has an implied right to work them incidental to such exception; if there be no exception then that right is with the grantee as owner of the surface and subsoil.

Where tenement is severed the person in whose favour the reservation is made is the absolute owner of the subsoil and the rights of such a person are that he has by implication of law the power to go upon the surface and do all things reasonably necessary in order to exercise the enjoyment of his property (c).

Held, on the construction of a mining lease, that under cl. (3) of Part II of the lease, the lessees had merely power and liberty to enter upon lands in direct possession of the Raja himself in order to exercise the mineral rights vested in them. The implied liberty to enter and work the mines subject to reasonable restrictions is not to be curtailed by the express conditions of the lease unless the intention is apparent. Part III of the lease headed "Restrictions and conditions as to the exercise of the above liberties, powers and privileges" must be construed as only restricting the liberties and privileges expressly conferred by Part II and not as any restriction upon the general right of access which is implied by law (d).

Held, also—That the defendant acquired no title by adverse possession to the mines and minerals of the land in question. Nawagarh

(7) Tenants-in-common—Co-lessors—Lease by Muhammadan co-heirs—Mining lease—Forfeiture—Penal provisions, strict construction of—Relief against forfeiture—Covenantants in a mining lease, exception to rule—English and American law.

One of the several tenants in common can sue to recover possession of his share from the joint lessee(s).

The aim of law generally is in favour of giving relief against forfeiture. The safe recourse will be to act on the principle that penal provisions providing for re-entry should be strictly construed.

In the cases of mining leases however a proviso for re-entry should be strictly construed and forfeiture cannot ordinarily be relieved against.

English and American law on the point considered(b).

Per Seshagiri Aiyar, J—In mining leases, as a general rule forfeiture should be enforced if it had been incurred. Under the English Conveyancing Acts of 1881 and 1892, which were passed with the object of affording relief against forfeiture, one of the exceptions relates to "Covenants in a mining lease to allow the lessor to have access to, or inspect books, accounts, records, weighing machines or other things, or to enter or inspect the mine or workings." In the Indian Mines Act (VIII of 1901) there is no provision either in favour of or against forfeiture. The principle of the English rule must therefore ordinarily apply. The reason of the rule is apparently that in a mining lease, the interest of the Government are also in jeopardy. Consequently, it is not a matter depending entirely upon the rights of the actual parties to the contract. For this reason also it must be held that the forfeiture cannot be ordinarily relieved against. Syed Ahmad v. Magnesite Syndicate, Ltd., 39 M. 1049=32 Ind. Cas. 512.

(8) Right of mortgagor in possession to grant perpetual lease.

A mortgagor in possession may make a lease conformable to usage in the ordinary course of management, but cannot grant a lease on unusual terms or alter the character of the land or authorise its use in a manner prejudicial to the right of the mortgagee. In other words a mortgagor, by any dealings with the mortgage property subsequent to the date of the mort-

(9) Grant of, by mortgagor—Absolute prohibition of alienation—Right of redemption by lessee.

A covenant against alienation in a mortgage deed creates only a personal liability as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee and it can be enforced by the mortgagee against the mortgagor only and not against all persons claiming under him. Where a lease is granted by a mortgagor for a long term after the execution of a mortgage deed, absolutely prohibiting alienation by him, such lease is not void and inoperative as against the mortgagee, merely on the ground that it has been executed in contravention of the covenant against alienation. The lessee acquires an interest in the equity of redemption in the property and can redeem it upon that footing.

Though a lease for a long term is a transaction prejudicial to the saleable value of the mortgage security and injurious to the interest of the mortgagee the latter can claim only that his rights under the mortgage or the decree obtained upon it cannot be prejudiced by the subsequent action of the mortgagor. The lease cannot be declared to be void, but will hold good except as to the long period. Mir Syed Husain v. Bank of Upper India, Ltd., 30 Ind. Cas. 289.

(10) Covenant by lessor to renew—Possession, suit for—Ejectment.

A covenant by a lessor to renew, assuming it is legally enforceable against him, cannot be pleaded in bar to a suit for possession brought by the lessor on the expiry of the term mentioned in the lease-deed(a).

The covenant to renew in a lease-deed cannot be treated as a promise not to eject the lessee on the expiry of the term. District Board of Tanjore v. Vythilinga Chetty, 31 Ind. Cas. 919.

III, Civ. Pro. Code.

Held, that the proper course for the Barrister would be to file a petition asking the District Court to punish the respondent under 32 of the Legal Practitioners' Act and that, notwithstanding the order already passed by him, the District Judge should proceed to adjudicate on the matter as to whether the respondent is usurping the functions of a pleader and practising as one in contravention of S. 10 of the Act, or whether his appearances are covered by the provisions of O. In a reference under the Legal Practitioners Act, the High Court confines itself to the charge framed by the Primary Court. The finding that the pleader was guilty of fraudulent or grossly improper conduct in the discharge of his professional duty within the meaning of S. 13 (b) of the Legal Practitioners Act was disregarded as the pleader was not charged with that.

Where a pleader was found to have received instructions from a person about whom he made no enquiries as to his right to instruct him on behalf of certain minors or their mother and also that he filed a written statement which was not prepared by him and that he accepted the vakalatnama at the instance of another party in the suit and that he filed a receipt which on the face of it was not genuine without even examining it, it was held that his conduct was most improper, although no injury resulted from it.

The pleader was suspended for nine months. In the matter of Babu Jugal Chandra Mazumdar, Pleader, 20 C.W.N. 1016=17 Cr. L.J. 229=34 Ind. Cas. 645.

- (5) Ss. 13, 14—Jurisdiction of Subordinate Courts to take proceedings under the Act—Inquiry by Subordinate Courts if valid—Misconduct in the presence of the Court, effect of—Misconduct, what amounts to—Contempt—Disciplinary action, object of.

S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act covers cases of misconduct under all the clauses of

—(Continued).

S. 13 of the Act and as such a Court subordinate to the High Court is competent to enquire into a matter falling within the purview of any of the clauses of S. 13, when the legal practitioner whose conduct is called in question practises in such Court (d).

The High Court is competent to take action under S. 13, cl. (f) of the Legal Practitioners Act after such enquiry as it thinks fit and it is not required that the enquiry should be conducted directly by the High Court; it may well be made by a Subordinate Court under the direction of the High Court, the only essential being that notice containing the charges should be given to the legal practitioner to show cause against suspension or dismissal (b).

Misconduct in the presence of the Court which shews disrespect of its authority or which obstructs or has a tendency to interfere with the due administration of justice is contempt and thus disorderly conduct in the Court-room, is treated as contempt of Court. The Court is deemed present in every part of the place set apart for its use and for the use of its officers, jurors and witnesses and consequently misbehaviour in such places is misconduct in the presence of the Court (c).

A contempt may be of such a character as to warrant the exercise of the disciplinary powers of the Court.

Held, therefore, that the legal practitioner in the present case having used abusive language to an officer of the Court, and the same having been heard by the presiding judge himself who was holding his Court in the room adjoining the office where the incident took place, misbehaved in the presence of the Court within the meaning of this Rule and as such the Court could take disciplinary action against him.

Where the Court takes notice of a misconduct which consists in the obstruction of or an interference with one of its officers, the object of the discipline enforced is not so much to vindicate the dignity of the Court or the person of the officer as to prevent undue interference with the administration of justice (d). In the matter of Rasik Lal Nag, 24 C.L.J. 190=20 C.W.N. 1294.

The petitioner, a pleader, was engaged jointly with another at the time of the institution of a suit, but his signature on the vakalatnama was not then obtained. When the other pleader had left the station to practise elsewhere the petitioner signed his name on the vakalatnama seeing that he was the only pleader left to conduct the case. After a decree was passed money was deposited by the judgment-debtor. The petitioner acting under the instruction of the clerk of the other pleader withdrew the money and paid over the amount to that clerk. At the time when the petitioner got instructions from the other pleader's clerk, the latter had ceased to be a pleader's clerk as he had not taken out his "card" for the year, but the petitioner bona fide believed that that person had taken out his "card" and was authorized to act as pleader's clerk.

Held that the petitioner had contravened the provisions of S. 13 (a) of the Legal Practitioners' Act. He ought to have taken care to inform himself whether the person who gave instruction had any authority to give him instructions on behalf of the decree-holder. He had been guilty of carelessness in treating what the alleged clerk told as if it was instruction from the decree-holder. He had also contravened the provisions of r. 44 (e) of the General Rules and Orders of the High Court. As there was no question of dishonesty against the petitioner, the High Court discharged him expressing at the same time severe censure against him for what he had done. In the matter of Babu Jogendra Chandra Nandy, 36 Ind. The plaintiff, a pleader, brought a suit for pre-emption based on the Muhammadan Law which was decreed by the Munsif. The District Judge on appeal reversed the decree of the Munsif after having recalled and examined the plaintiff. The District Judge ordered the prosecution of the plaintiff under S. 209, Penal Code. The prosecution was suspended by reason of appeals against his decree having been preferred in the High Court. Upon the pleader applying for renewal of certificate, the District Judge reported to the High Court that he had refused to renew his certificate:—

Held, that the action of the District Judge was inconsistent, for either he ought to have waited till the determination of the criminal prosecution which he had ordered or he might have proceeded under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners' Act. The District Judge had in effect found the pleader guilty before he had been tried, by ordering his suspension. In the matter of a Pleader, 14 A.L.J. 82=88 A. 182 (F.B.).

The Code of Civil Procedure is not applicable to inquiries under S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act (a).

S. 141, Civ. Pro. Code (1908), does not contemplate an inquiry of an administrative nature, such as is prescribed by S. 14 of the Legal Practitioners Act.

Observations as to whether the High Court is precluded from interfering under S. 107, Government of India Act, 1915, by the terms of S. 14, Legal Practitioners Act, which make it incumbent that the inquiry should be made by the presiding officer of the Court.

The inquiry under the Legal Practitioners Act cannot be delegated or transferred to another officer who is not the presiding officer of the Court in which the mal-practices complained of were committed.

A proceeding under the Legal Practitioners Act is not a Civil proceeding. The procedure under the said Act is self-contained. It is neither criminal nor civil but purely designed for the purpose of discipline in controlling the procedure and the conduct of practitioners practising in subordinate Courts. Per Atkinson, J.

It cannot be said that, under S. 107, Government of India Act, 1915, the High Court has the right to interfere unless it finds that the presiding officer or a subordinate Court has grossly abused his powers or that he has acted in excess of his jurisdiction or done something without jurisdiction. *Per Atkinson, J. The rule framed under S. 27 of the Legal Practitioners Act, 1879, which authorises the Court to allow a daily fee for every day after the first day of the final hearing assumes the probability of Advocates charging a daily fee for every day after the first day of the final hearing and recognizes that such a charge would be reasonable and that the client who has to pay it should recover from his opponent what he has had to pay up to reasonable limits.

Legal Practitioners Act (XVIII of 1879)
—(Concluded).

If an Advocate is content to agree with his client to conduct a case for a fixed sum, and neglects to stipulate for a daily fee he has only himself to blame for his oversight. There is no rule of law which entitles an Advocate to retain anything of what he has received from his client's opponents as compensation for the extra days after the first which the hearing took. His client is entitled to the amount allowed as Advocate's fee even if he did not pay so much. Julian Francis Coelho v. N.M. Gowdasjee, 33 Ind. Cas. 107.

A minor, if not sighted nor properly represented in a probate proceeding, is entitled to come in and to have the will proved in a solemn form in her presence.

It is the duty of a Judge, as soon as he is informed of the existence of the minor heir of the deceased in the letters of administration proceeding, to issue notice upon the minor and to have a guardian ad litem appointed for her (a).

A revocation case is quite a separate case from the probate or letters of administration proceeding.

If a guardian ad litem had been appointed in the letters of administration case, it would have been the duty of the Court to proceed with the case as a contentious case in the presence of the minor represented by the guardian ad litem. In that case fresh evidence would have had to be taken and an order made upon the contention. A representative of the minor in the revocation proceeding is not effective for the purpose of making an ex parte order in the letters of administration proceed-

Cl. 12—Leave of the Court—Jurisdiction of High Court—Suit on hundi—Hundi passed up-country and not made payable in Bombay—Consideration of the hundi being transaction between Bombay merchant and up-country constituent.

The plaintiff, carrying on business in Bombay, filed a suit in the Bombay High Court, to recover the amount of hundis drawn by the defendant on his own firm. The hundis were passed at Bassum in Akola where the defendant resided and where the plaintiff had gone to settle his accounts of dealings with the defendant. A question having arisen whether the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit:

Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain suit, for the hundis were not made payable in Bombay and the fact that the consideration for the hundis was the balance of accounts due by the defendant to the plaintiff in respect of transactions effected in Bombay was no part of the cause of action.

An order by a Judge on the Original Side of the High Court under r. 9, O. 1X of the Civ. Pro. Code, refusing to set aside an order of dismissal of a suit under r. 8, is a judgment within the meaning of S. 15 of the Letters Patent and is appealable thereunder.

This was an application for a certificate under S. 110, Civ. Pro. Code. The Court of first instance as well as the lower appellate Court decided adversely to the present applicant. On appeal to the High Court, a single Judge reversed the decree of the lower appellate Court. From this judgment of a single Judge there was an appeal to the High Court under cl. 15 of the Charter, with the result that the judgment of the single Judge was reversed by a Bench of two judges. Thus the first judgment of the High Court reversed the decree of the Court immediately below but this reversal was afterwards in effect cancelled, with the result that the only effective judgment of the High Court affirmed the decision of the Court immediately below (S. 10, Civ. Pro. Code).

A judge sitting alone is not a Court subordinate to the High Court, but performs a function directed to be performed by the High Court (ol. 36, Letters Patent). And thus no decision of a single Judge can be revised under S. 115 of the Code. Debendra Nath Das v. Bibudhendra Mansingh, 43 C. 90=33 Ind. Cas. 745.

In the case of suits relating to land situated partly within and partly without the local limits of the original civil jurisdiction of the High Court, the granting of leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent (Madras) is purely discretionary and the High Court will not, in appeal, interfere with the exercise of the Judge's discretion.

Pursuant to leave obtained ex parte under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent (Madras), a person instituted a suit on the Original Side of the High Court for partition of lands partly situated within and partly without the ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court. The leave was afterwards set aside and the plaintiff's application for leave to amend the plaint by excluding the joint family lands situate outside the jurisdiction, was also dismissed.

Held, on appeal, that the order refusing leave to amend was not a judgment within the meaning of cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and was not appealable (a).

The rule that a partition suit should embrace all the family properties has no application where the properties are situate in different jurisdictions.

Per Seshagiri Iyer, J.—Ss. 16 and 17 of the Civ. Pro. Code have not deprived parties of their right to bring successive suits in respect of properties situate in different jurisdictions.

Libel.

Newspaper article—Fair comment—Imputation of motives—Justification—Statement of full facts if necessary—Well founded criticism—meaning of—Statement of facts, when amounts only to comment.

What in form is a statement of facts may, in the circumstances of the case, amount to no more than comment.

To justify the imputation of motives to a person in an article published in a newspaper and complained of as libellous, it is not necessary that all the facts upon which the imputations were based should have been set out therein. This is especially so in cases of public discussions on matters of public interest proceeding in the Press from day to day, where it will be too much to expect the writer in each article to set out all the facts upon which his comment is based, including admitted facts which are within the knowledge of every one interested in the question. An accurate statement of the facts which form the subject of criticism or even a clear reference to them will be sufficient. The defendant, however, will not be protected if he had mis-stated the facts and then commented upon the facts so untruefully stated (a).

The statement that a criticism must be well-founded means no more than that a fair-minded man might, upon the facts, bona fide hold that opinion. Madras Times v. Rogers, 3 L.W. 67 = 30 M.L.J. 294 = (1916) M.W.N. 267 = 32 Ind. Cas. 408.

Limitation.

(1) Application for execution of decree—Date which limitation begins to run.

In the case of an application for the execution of a decree, the period of limitation begins to run from the date the decree is directed to bear under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure, which is the date on which the judgment is pronounced. The date on which the decree is actually signed is not the date from which limitation begins to run. Surajdeo Narain Singh v. Musahroo Raut, 1 Pat. L.J. 359.

(2) Suit instituted on insufficient Court-fee on last day of limitation—Balance made up after expiration of period of limitation—Suit not barred—Code of Civil Procedure (V of 1908), S. 149, O. V, r. 1, O. IV, O. VII, r. 11—Act XIV of 1882, S. 582-A.

In this case the suit was instituted on the last day of limitation on an insufficiently stamped plaint. The balance of Court-fee was subsequently paid after the period of limitation had expired, but the Court accepted such payment, held, that under the above circumstances the suit was not barred by limitation (a).

"When the plaint, whatever its defects, is presented to the proper officer, the suit is then and there instituted, and once it has been instituted within the time prescribed, the suit escapes from the bar of limitation, unless such bar be one in existence prior to the suit (b)."

Per Jwala Prasad, J.—S. 149 of the present Code has settled antecedently conflicting views as to the law on the interpretation of S. 582-A of the Old Code, but now under the existing Code if a deficient Court-fee be paid within the time permitted by the Court, it will have retrospective effect and validate the plaint as from the date when the suit was instituted.

Per Jwala Prasad, J.—If a limit was fixed by the Court for the payment of the deficiency in the Court-fee and the fee was paid within the time allowed, and even beyond the time if the payment was accepted by the Court, the plaintiff's suit would not have been barred. The suit cannot be dismissed when there was no time fixed by the Court and the plaintiff paid the deficit Court fee within a reasonable time after notice of the deficiency and the Court accepted the payment. *Gaya Loan Office, Ltd. v. Certain property having been attached in execution of a decree, the plaintiff applied to the Court that the sale should take place subject to his mortgage lien. The Court rejected the application in 1893 and sold the property. The plaintiffs sued in 1910 to recover the mortgage money by sale of the property. The lower Courts held that the plaintiffs having failed to sue within one year from the date of the order of 1893, the suit was barred under Art. 11 of the Limitation Act read with S. 283 of the Civ. Pro. Code, 1882. On second appeal:

Held, that the suit was not barred by time, inasmuch as the order of 1893 having been that the attachment should proceed free from the lien or mortgage claim, must be referred to S. 287 and not to S. 283 of the Civ. Pro. Code of 1882. Ganesh v. Damoo, 18 Bom. L.R. 782 = 41 B. G. = 36 Ind. Cas. 627.

One R died in 1833 leaving his widow J and a daughter S. J. sold her husband's properties for purposes not binding on the reversion during her lifetime. She died on 21st April 1865, more than 12 years before the date of coming into force of the Limitation Act of 1877. The alienees were in possession of the lands alienated by J to the exclusion of S who died on 27th June 1901 and a suit was instituted on 7th December 1912 by the reversioners of R for possession of his properties.

Held, that Art. 145 of Act IX of 1871 corresponding to Art. 144 of the latter Acts which gives 12 years from the time when the possession of defendants became adverse to the plaintiff, applied to the suit, and since the possession of the defendants became adverse to the plaintiffs only on the death of S, when they became entitled to possession, the suit was not barred by limitation.

(2) Applicability of, to rights set up in defence.

The Limitation Act, 1908, is an Act which is applicable to a suit brought by the plaintiff; a defendant will not be precluded from setting up a right by way of defence, even if he could not have done so as plaintiff by way of substantial claim. Deodhari Pandey v. (6) S. 4, 14—Computation of time—Suit filed in wrong Court—Whether plaintiff entitled to add time during recess of wrong Court.

A suit on a promissory note was filed in the Subordinate Judge's Court at Agra on June 2, 1913. The limitation expired on June 1, 1913, but the suit could not be filed on that day as it was a Sunday. The Agra Court held that it had no jurisdiction, and on January 21, 1914, returned the plaint to be presented to the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Aligarh. It was so presented on January 22, 1914. The suit was dismissed as barred by limitation:

Held, that, although the plaintiffs might be entitled to deduct the time during which the suit was pending in the wrong Court, they were not entitled to the exclusion of the extra day from June 1, 1913 to June 2, 1913, on which latter date the suit was filed in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Agra. Makund Ram v. Ramraj, 14 A.L.J. 310=35 Ind. Cas. 292.

(7) S. 5—Appeal filed out of time under advice of pleader—Pleader misled by change in law—Sufficient cause.

It is not an inflexible rule of law that in no case can the circumstance that a litigant has, under the erroneous advice of counsel or pleader, presented an appeal out of time, be deemed a sufficient cause within the meaning of S. 5 of the Limitation Act. The true rule is whether, under the special circumstances of each case, the appellant acted under an honest, though mistaken, belief formed with due care and attention, or there was any negligence or inaction or want of bona fides on the part of the appellant (a).

Where, therefore, an appellant filed an appeal in the Court of a District Judge after the specified period of 30 days under the advice of a legal practitioner, who was misled by a change in the law of limitation relating to appeal:

Held, that there was sufficient cause within the meaning of S. 5 for not filing the appeal within the prescribed period of limitation. Aziz Ullah v. Gokal Chand, 37 P.W.R. 1916=32 Ind. Cas. 640.

To mention by mistake the name of a deceased person as respondent is immaterial where his representatives are already on the record.

2. Whether there is a sufficient cause for extending limitation for an appeal under S. 5 of Act IX of 1908 is a question of fact which cannot be interfered with in second appeal (a).

3. Ignorance of law is no excuse. The Punjab Courts Act III of 1914 having come into force on 1st August, 1914, an appeal filed on that date from the order of the Munsiff dated 8th June, 1914, is barred by limitation.

4. 30 P.R. 1915=25 P.W.R. 1915 lays down the following three dicta:—

(1) That the Acts of the Legislature, which regulate procedure, though in general retrospective in their effect, must not be interpreted so as to affect prejudicially the vested rights of the parties to suit (b).

(2) That a right of appeal which has accrued is such a vested right.

(3) That the tribunal competent to dispose of appeals instituted before a new Act came into force, but still pending when it came into force, is the tribunal which would have been competent to dispose of them if the appeals had been instituted after the said new Act came into force (c). Asa Ram v. Budhu Mal, 43 P.W.R. 1916=88 P.R. 1916=132 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 67.

(9) S. 5—Discretionary power of appellate Court to grant or refuse extension of time—When interfered with in second appeal.

In an application under S. 5 of the Limitation Act for extension of time, it is only in those cases where it can be held that the lower Court has exercised its discretion unreasonably or without proper consideration of the facts before it that the Chief Court is justified in interfering.

Hence where it is found that the lower appellate Court has considered the matter carefully and come to the conclusion that no case has been made out for extending the period of limitation under S. 5 of the Limitation Act, the Chief Court will not interfere with its order

(10) S. 5—Excuse of delay—Presentation of appeal beyond time—Death of defendant after argument but before judgment—Appeal by defendant's heirs after prescribed period—Sufficient cause.

After the arguments in a case were concluded, but before the judgment was pronounced, the defendant died. The suit was decided against the defendant. His sons, one of whom was an adult and the other a minor represented by his mother as a guardian, presented an appeal from the decree fifty days beyond time. A question having arisen whether the delay should be excused:

Held, that there was no sufficient reason to excuse the delay, inasmuch as the adult son and his mother, who were concerned to prosecute the litigation in their own interests and in the interest of the infant, were negligent, remiss and careless in not prosecuting the appeal in time. Babu Ganesh Deshmukh v. (11) S. 5—Time for appeal—Extension of time—Amendment of decree—Whether time for appeal extended by such amendment.

In case of the amendment of a decree which has no relation to the grounds upon which the validity of the decree is sought to be challenged in appeal such appeal should not be admitted out of time. On the other hand if the grounds on which the appeal is based are intimately connected with the amendment of the decree or if the grounds are directed against the decree only in so far as it has been amended the Court should exercise in the appellant's favour the discretion vested in it by paragraph 2 of S. 5 of the Limitation Act. Satikantha Baurjee v. (12) S. 5—Presentation of appeal to wrong Court—Bona fide mistake—Delay in filing appeal—Saving of limitation.

A presentation of an appeal to a wrong Court under a bona fide mistake may be sufficient cause within the meaning of S. 5 of the Limitation Act. Where the mother of a minor appellant, who conducted proceedings on behalf of the minor without the advice of a counsel, presented the appeal to a wrong Court under a bona fide mistake and the appeal was returned to her for being presented to the proper Court, a subsequent presentation by her of the memorandum of appeal to the proper Court beyond the period of limitation was excused under S. 5 of the Limitation Act. Shoo Pal Singh v. (13) S. 5—Appeal—Presentation after time prescribed—Review of judgment—Time spent in application for—When may be deducted—Sufficient cause.

The mere fact that the appellant had applied for review is not a 'sufficient cause' for not filing his appeal within the prescribed time and he is not always entitled to be allowed a deduction of time spent in applying for a review of judgment. The question of deduction must depend upon the special circumstances proved in each case. Dwarka Singh v. Layakat Ali Khan, 34 Ind. Cas. 44.

them after the time for the appeal had expired, is not entitled to get either the indulgence under S. 5 or the benefit of S. 12 of the Limitation Act (1908). Guran Rakha v. Bindrabau, 55 P.W.R. 1916=79 P.R. 1916=125 P.L.R. 1916=35 Ind. Cas. 233.

(25) Ss. 5 and 12—Sufficient cause—Interference by High Court in second appeal—The time requisite for obtaining a copy of the decree, what is—Letters Patent, Cl 10—Point not argued before single Judge if may be urged in appeal.

It is now settled by a long string of authorities that where a Court after considering all the circumstances of the case has come to the conclusion that sufficient cause has or has not been established within the meaning of S. 5 of the Limitation Act for not filing an appeal within time, the High Court will not interfere in second appeal.

Where a judgment was passed on 27th September 1913 and the decree was prepared and signed on the same day and the annual vacation began on the following day and the Court re-opened on 1st November and the appellants applied for a copy of the judgment on 3rd November and for a copy of the decree on 13th November and both copies were ready and were delivered on 21st November and the appeal was filed on 28th November in the lower appellate Court:

Held—That the whole of the time which elapsed from the delivery of the judgment to the re-opening of the Court on November 1st, 1913, was part of the time requisite for obtaining copies of the judgment and decree, and that this must be so whether the appellant applied for copies on the day on which the Court re-opened or on some later date.

The words of S. 12, Limitation Act, do not appear to lay down any rule that the time requisite for obtaining a copy must be continuous.

The conduct of a case before a single Judge of High Court must not be regarded as a preliminary matter in which the parties and their legal advisers are not called upon to exert themselves. Ordinarily a point which had not been taken before a single Judge would not be allowed to be taken in appeal under Cl. 10 of the Letters Patent. Debi Charan Lal v. Snehi Mehdi Hussain, 20 C.W.N. 1303=1 Pat. L.J. 485=55 Ind. Cas. 488.
